MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

Part I.—General Principles.

SECT. 1.—APPLICATION OF RULES OF EVIDENCE.

1. Civil & criminal trials distinguished.—The principles of the laws of evidence are the same both in civil & criminal trials, but in the latter are not applied so rigidly against accused as against deff. in a civil trial.—R. v. CHRISTIE, [1914] A. C. 545; 10 Cr. App. Rep. 141; sub nom. PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS DIRECTOR v. CHRISTIE, 83 L. J. K. B. 1097; 111 L. T. 220; 78 J. P. 321; 30 T. L. R. 471; 58 Sol. Jo. 515; 24 Cox, C. C. 249, H. L. Annotations:—Reld, Chantler v. Bromley (1921), 14 B. W. C. C. 14. Mentd, R. v. Curnock (1914), 111 L. T. 816; Perkins v. Jeffery, [1915] 2 K. B. 702; R. v. Althuler (1915), 11 Cr. App. Rep. 243; R. v. Hall (1915), 11 Cr. App. Rep. 221; R. v. Smith (1915), 114 L. T. 239; R. v. Bovy (1916), 12 Cr. App. Rep. 15; R. v. Feigenbaum, [1919] 1 K. B. 431; R. v. Adams (1923), 17 Cr. App. Rep. 77.

2. —[By a policy of insurance, underwriters insured the assured a jeweller, against loss of or damage to jewellery arising from any cause whatsoever except loss by theft or dishonesty of any servant in the exclusive employment of the assured. In an action upon the policy by the assured against one of the underwriters the evidence established a loss by theft & tended to implicate in the theft a servant in the exclusive employment of pltf. :—Held: (1) assuming the burden of proving a theft by pltf.'s servant to lie on deff., he might establish such a theft by evidence which possibly might not be admitted or sufficient to convict in a criminal prosecution; (2) evidence of the servant's bad character was not admissible.—HURST v. EVANS, [1917] 1 K. B. 352; 86 L. J. K. B. 305; 116 L. T. 252; 33 T. L. R. 96.

3. In prize cases.—The principle that this Ct. in matters of prize is not bound by the ordinary rules of evidence has been too firmly established for a long time to be now questioned (LORD STERNDAL, P.).—THE DIRIGO, THE HALLINGDAL (1919), as reported in 121 L. T. 477; 35 T. L. R. 533.

Sec. generally, PRIZE LAW.

4. Commercial list.—The judge charged with commercial business has no further power of dispensing with the technical rules of evidence than any other judge of the High Ct., the power of so doing being that conferred by R. S. C., Ord. 30, r. 7, which has no special reference to the

a. How far binding.—When the aid of Cts. of Justice is invoked, the rules of evidence by which they are governed must be complied with, even though in doing so some difficulties, delay, and expense disproportionate to the amount sought to be recovered may be occasioned.—RAMABHAI GIRD-

HARBHAI v. ALI AKBAR KAJRANI (1863), 1 Bom. 6.—IND.

SECT. 3.—NECESSITY FOR BEST EVIDENCE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

5. General rule.]—The best evidence in possession of the parties must be produced. What may be the nature of that best evidence must depend upon circumstances. In most cases the original must be the best evidence, but circumstances may arise in which secondary evidence may be the best (JERVIS, C.J.).—MACDONNELL v. EVANS (1852), 11 C. B. 930; 3 Car. & Kir. 51; 21 L. J. C. P. 141; 18 L. T. O. S. 241; 16 J. P. 88; 16 Jur. 103; 138 E. R. 742.

7. Written records of living person—As evidence of own acts.]—Books of account kept by shop-keeper himself not allowed to be read in evidence.—SOWTER v. BRADFELD (1729), 1 Barn. K. B. 300; 94 E. R. 204.

8. ——— Person available as witness.]—A letter written by an agent or broker, by whom a contract has been made for the sale of goods, is not evidence where such agent or broker can be called as a witness.—MAESTERS v. ABRAHAM (1795), 1 Esp. 375, N. P.

Annotation:—Refd. Fairlie v. Hastings (1804), 10 Ves. 123.

9. ———]—In trespass quare clausum fregit the defence was that M. P. was the owner of the locus in quo, & that deft. entered by the direction of M. P.:—Held: a declaration by M. P. made subsequent to the act complained of was inadmissible.

M. P. ought to have been called as a witness (WOOD, B.).—GARR v. FLETCHER (1817), 2 Stark. 71, N. P.

Annotation:—Refd. Morse v. Apperley (1840), 9 L. J. Ex. 61.

10. ———]—In an action of trover, brought to recover the value of goods distrained, on the ground that deft. was not pltf.'s landlord, pltf. proved payment of rent to another person. Deft. tendered in evidence accounts rendered to him from pltf.:—Held: the accounts were not admissible in evidence, the person who rendered them being alive, & capable of being a witness, & not identified in interest with pltf.—SPARGO v. BROWN (1829), 9 B. & C. 935; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 638; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 67; 109 E. R. 348.

11. ——— Person not available as witness.]—The entries of a person still living, against his interest, are not evidence between other parties; though it be shown that he is abroad, having absconded from a criminal charge, & altogether out of the power of a party to produce him as a witness.—STEPHEN v. GWENAP (1831), 1 Mood. & R. 120, N. P.

14. ——— Entries against interest.]—STEPHEN v. GWENAP, No. 11, ante.

Entries by deceased persons against interest, see Part II., Sect. 5, post.

15. ——— Receipt.]—Receipts given by the parish clerk for the use of the vicar for small tithes, the handwriting of the parish clerk being proved, were rejected as evidence on the ground that the parish clerk was living & his agency for the vicar could not be inferred but must be proved.—THOMPSON v. PERRYMAN (1832), You. 598; 159 E. R. 1130.

Annotation:—Mentd. Barnes v. Stuart (1834), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 119.

16. ———]—The receipts of a steward or agent empowered to receive rents are not evidence against the principal, if the steward or agent can be produced as a witness.—GIBBONS v. PATTISON (1834), 3 L. J. Ex. 138.

17. ———]—JONES v. POULSON (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 231.

18. ——— Shorthand notes of evidence at trial.]—A shorthand writer having been allowed to refer to his notes, as to the testimony of witnesses at the trial of the indictment:—Held: such evidence was improperly received, as the witnesses themselves ought to have been called.—WILLANS v. TAYLOR (1829), 6 Bing. 183; 3 Moo. & with the rules of evidence.—SUPPU v. GOVINDACHARYAR (1887), 1 L. R. 11 Mad. 85.—IND.

c. Improper application.]—RAM DAS SAHA v. MAN MAHINI DAS (1871), 7 B. L. L. App. 4.—IND.

PART I. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.

5 i. General rule.]—Where pltf. is disappointed in procuring testimony, he should withdraw his record or take a nonsuit, & deft., in the like case, should apply for a postponement. If, instead of so doing, he chooses to go to trial upon weak or insufficient evidence, he will not be relieved from an adverse verdict.—LONGUEUIL CORPN. v. CUSHMAN (1885), 24 U. C. R. 602.—CAN.

5 ii. ———.]—A party to an action should produce all evidence necessary to establish his case, & the ct. will not grant him a fresh trial in order to bring further evidence unless he can prove that that evidence was unknown or impossible of production at the date of the first trial or for some other particular reason, as litigation would become unnecessarily prolonged & oppressive to the other parties to the action.—CHALMERS v. Fysh (1893), 1 Terr. L. R. 434.—CAN.

5 iii. ———.]—Although there may not be direct evidence connecting an alleged material irregularity in the publication or conduct of a sale under a decree with the inadequacy of price at such a sale as cause & effect, yet in order to enable the ct. to set aside a sale there must be evidence of circumstances which will warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference that the inadequacy of price at the sale was the result of the irregularity complained of.—MAHABIR PERSHAD SINGH v. DHANUKDHARI SINGH (1904), 1 L. R. 31 Calc. 815.—IND.

d. Definition.]—Positive evidence means evidence which goes expressly to the very point in question, & that which, if believed, proves the point without aid from inference or reasoning, as the testimony of an eye-witness to an occurrence, as distinguished from indirect or circumstantial evidence.—LEGAL REMEMBRANCE v. MATILAL GHOSE (1913), 1 L. R. 41 Calc. 173.—IND.

19. — Medical certificate.]—A painter claimed compensation for a strained heart. The doctor was subpoenaed, but did not attend, & three certificates, though objected to, were admitted in evidence by the judge, who awarded for the workman:—Held: the certificates were inadmissible, & as they must have influenced the mind of the judge, a new trial was necessary.—RICHARDS v. SANDERS & SONS (1912), 5 B. W. C. C. 352, C. A.

20. Declaration, statement or admission of living person.]—Where in an action by the indorsee of a bill, the defence is that debt. had settled it in account with the holder when due, & that pltf. took it after it became due, what was said by the person represented as the holder & indorsee when it became due, is not evidence; he should himself be called.—DUCKHAM v. WALLIS (1805), 5 Esp. 251, N. P.

21. —.]—HEALY v. JACOBS, No. 449, post.

22. — In action between strangers.]—A rated parishioner not being bound upon an appeal touching the settlement of a pauper, to give evidence against his own parish, the opposite parish may give evidence of his declarations as to the facts in issue, the weight due to which must depend upon his means of knowledge as to the facts so declared, & the genuineness of the declarations, to be collected from circumstances.—R. v. 23. — Not part of res gestæ.]—A bond was given to A., B. & C. by pltf. & debt., who were sureties for D. Pltf. was obliged to pay the bond, & brought an action against his co-surety for contribution. A defence was set up, that the principal had paid money, specifically on account of this bond, to one of the obligees, & that such obligee had carried it to the account of the bond:—Held: any declaration of the obligee, upon what account he received the money, or how he had applied it, unless such declaration were made at the time of payment, was not evidence, & such obligee must be called as a witness.—DUNN v. SLEE (1816), Holt, N. P. 399, N. P.; subsequent proceedings (1817), 1 Moore, C. P. 2.

24. —.]—In an action for slanderous words charging a baker with using adulterated flour, if the declaration allege as special damage that several persons, naming them, discontinued to take his bread, the person of whom they used to buy it cannot be asked what reason they gave for ceasing to take it any longer, but the persons themselves must be called to prove their motives.—TILK v. PARSONS (1825), 2 C. & P. 201, N. P.

25. —.]—In an action by the first indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, the declarations of the drawer made before indorsement, showing that the acceptor received no value for his acceptance, cannot be admitted in evidence, if the drawer be living at the time of the trial, because in such case he might be called as a witness.—HEDGER v. HORTON (1827), 3 C. & P. 179, N. P.

26. — Declaration of bankrupt.]—In trespass against the sheriff & an execution creditor for seizing goods of A., which pltf. claimed as assignees under a joint commission against A. & B., pltf., in support of the joint commission, gave evidence of acts & declarations of B., for the purpose of showing that he had become bkpt.:—Held: this evidence was inadmissible.—BERNASCONI v. FAREBROTHER (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 372; 110 E. R. 140.

Annotation.—Mentd. Wilton v. Chambers (1835), 1 Har. & W. 116.

27. —.]—A. was clerk to B. from the year 1829. In 1832, C. gave a bond for the faithful conduct of A. as such clerk. After that, B. dismissed A., & after his dismissal A. made an admission of various sums that he had not accounted for. In an action on the bond:—Held: this admission was not evidence against C., as A. was living at the time of the trial, & might have been called as a witness.—SMITH v. WHITTINGHAM (1833), 6 C. & P. 78.

20 i. Declaration, statement or admission of living person.]—On a petition for divorce on the ground that resp. had been guilty of rape, the offence must be proved by the person on whom the rape was committed, but her evidence may be taken in camera.—AYERS v. AYERS (1908), 4 Tas. L. R. 65.—AUS.

20 ii. —.]—BAXTING v. NIAGARA DISTRICT MUTUAL FIRE ASSURANCE CO. (1866), 25 U. C. R. 431.—CAN.

20 iii. —.]—Pltf. sent a telegram by debt. from Hamilton, addressed to H., at New York, upon one of the blank forms furnished by debt., which he had been accustomed to use. The terms, printed on the form, on which the co. received the message, were that the co.

would not be liable for mistakes or delays in the delivery of unrepeated messages, beyond the amount received for sending them; & the co. is hereby made the agent of the sender, without liability, to forward any message over the lines of any other co. when necessary to reach its destination." Pltf. sued debt., alleging that the message was never received, & that by debt.' neglect to deliver it he had lost the sale of certain wheat to which it related. Debt.' line terminated at Buffalo, where such messages were transferred to the Atlantic & Pacific Telegraph Co. H. having died, his clerk was called, who stated that he knew his business transactions that this message had not been received by H.; & that he inquired of the Atlantic & Pacific Telegraph Co., & was told that they had not received it either:—

Held: the evidence was insufficient to show the non-transmission of the message, & some one from the office of the Atlantic & Pacific Co. or of debt. should have been called.—BAXTER v. DOMINION TELEGRAPH CO. (1875), 37 U. C. R. 470.—CAN.

20 iv. —.]—On a question of demurrage & damages the log-book was referred to:—Held: the best way was to call those acquainted with the facts.—WRIGHT v. LIDDEL (1829), 5 Murr. 35.—SCOT.

e. Criminal assault—Age of child.]—It is not for the Crown to show that the evidence which is adduced as to the age of a child, in a case of criminal assault, is the best evidence procurable.—R. v. Hosgood (1884), 18 S. A. L. R. 123.—AUS.

In criminal cases—Forgery of signature—Signature in name of fictitious person.]—See CRIMINAL LAW, Vol. XV., p. 1047, Nos. 11,804–11,811.

29. Sale by broker—Entry in broker's book.]—Where a broker effects a sale between two parties the bought & sold notes delivered to them, & not the entry in his book, are the proper evidence of the contract.—THORNTON v. MEUX (1827), Mood. & M. 43, N. P.
Annotation.—Consd. Sleevewright v. Archibald (1851), 17 Q. B. 103.

30. Infringement of copyright by cinematograph film.—Whether production of film necessary.]—Pltf. claimed an injunction restraining defts. from infringing, by means of a cinematograph film, her copyright in a novel of which she was the author.

The proper mode of proving a cinematograph film is by the evidence of a witness who has seen a reproduction of the film, not by the production of the film itself.

I think the proposed evidence is not secondary evidence & is admissible, & being available is the only kind of evidence that in strictness can be given. The film itself is not primary evidence. I do not see how the infringement of a dramatic performance can be proved except by witnesses who have seen it (YOUNGER, J.).—GLYN v. WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO. (1915), as reported in 85 L. J. Ch. 261; 114 L. T. 354.

31. Fact of speaking in House of Commons.]—It was proved in the present case that on five days deft. spoke in the House of Commons. At first pltf. attempted to prove this by producing volumes of the official debates of the House of Commons, commonly called "Hansard," but I refused to receive these as evidence. The five occasions I have referred to were then spoken to by calling the shorthand writers of the staff of Hansard who produced their original shorthand notes of deft.'s speeches & who stated that they knew and identified deft. as having made from his place in the House of Commons the speeches that they reported. Inasmuch as by the custom of Parliament & the Standing Orders of the House of Commons a member desiring to address the House must rise in his place & address his observations to the Speaker, I do not think that better evidence of a member sitting in the House on a particular day could be given than proof of his having on that day addressed the House (Low, J.).—TRANTON v. ASTOR (1917), 33 T. L. R. 383.

SECT. 4.—FUNCTIONS OF JUDGE AND JURY—QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

32. Duty of judge.]—(1) If the evidence offered at the trial, by either party, is evidence by law admissible for the determination of the question before a jury, the judge is bound to lay it before them, & to call upon them to decide upon the effect of such evidence; but (2) whether such evidence, when offered, is of that character & description which makes it admissible by law, is a question which is for the determination of the judge alone, & is left solely to his decision (TINDAL, C.J.).—LEWIS v. MARSHALL (1844), 7 Man. & G. 729; 8 Scott, N. R. 477; 13 L. J. C. P. 193; 3 L. T. O. S. 261; 8 Jur. 848; 135 E. R. 293.

34. —.]—With regard to many matters of fact in common life, the jury may well be supreme judges, & there never was a more salutary part of our law than making them supreme judges as to what they consider the proper inference from the evidence brought before them, in matters of ordinary life, mercantile transactions & the course of business; but when the matter that is offered them in evidence is something in the nature of these royal grants, the cts. of law, for many centuries, have been in the habit of putting an interpretation upon them, & though the line of demarcation between where the province of the judge ends & the province of the jury begins ought to be clearly marked; & although the effect of these presumptions is for the jury, not for the judge, still it is one of those presumptions as to which if I was upon the jury, I should consider that the judge was much more likely to have a clear notion of the legal effect according to the laws & customs of England than if he interpreted the oral evidence of witnesses before him, on any of the more common transactions of life (ERLE, C.J.).—*LE STRANGE v. 32 viii. —.]—Where questions of fact are submitted to the jury by the

a judge sitting with a jury, & there arises any question of law mixed up with the facts, the duty of the judge is to give a direction upon the law to the jury, so far as to make them understand the law as bearing upon the facts. Farther than that it is not necessary for him to go.—PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE Co. v. EDMONDS (1877), 2 App. Cas. 487, H. L.

36. — Burden of proof.]—Burden of proof always remains the same as a matter of law. But while the learned judge has to direct a jury upon the burden of proof, as a matter of law, I take it not to be the duty of a learned judge under any circumstances to direct the jury as to the question of the burden of proof as to a matter of fact; that is a question for the jury, & beyond deciding the question which a judge must always decide, namely, whether there is any evidence at all to go to the jury, it seems to me on questions of fact the province of the learned judge does not entitle him to go (THESIGER, L.J.).—PICKUP v. THAMES INSURANCE Co. (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 594; 47 L. J. Q. B. 749; 39 L. T. 341; 26 W. R. 689; 4 App. M. L. C. 43, C. A.

37. —.]—Whether there is reasonable evidence to be left to the jury of negligence occasioning the injury complained of, is a question for the judge. It is for the jury to say whether, & how far, the evidence is to be believed.

J. was a passenger by a railway; the carriage in which he rode was full. At station G. three persons forced themselves in, & were obliged to stand. There was no evidence that a complaint on this matter had been made to the railway officials, or that they knew of the fact. At station P. some other persons opened the door of the carriage, shut it again, & went away. There was, afterwards, a rush on the platform, & other persons opened the door of the carriage. J. stood up to prevent their entering, the train moved; J., to save himself from falling, put his hand upon the edge of the door of the carriage; at that moment a railway porter came up, pushed away the persons trying to get in, & slammed the door to, in doing which J.'s thumb was caught & crushed:—Held: this evidence did not establish such negligence on the part of the co. as could be said to have occasioned the mischief, & the Judge ought so to have directed the jury.—*METROPOLITAN RY. 38. Question of law.]—A pltf. in quare impedit, after tracing his title through various steps, & averring the death of W., who had been shown to be a joint tenant with pltf. of a term of years in an advowson, alleged, "Whereupon & whereby pltf. became & still is possessed of the advowson as of an advowson in gross for the remainder of the term so theretofore granted": deft. pleaded, that he, as bishop of M., was seised of the advowson in gross in right of his see, without this, that pltf. was possessed of the advowson in manner & form as pltf. had alleged:—Held: a fine of the advowson in question levied in 1685 by one whose estate pltf. had, was not admissible in evidence under this or any similar issue, & if received, it ought not to be left to a jury to say whether it barred the action of quare impedit.

With respect to the question whether, if the fine were received in evidence, it ought to be left to the jury to say, whether it barred the action of quare impedit, we all think that the legal effect of such fine as a bar to the action of quare impedit is a matter of law merely, & not in any way a matter of fact; & consequently the judge who tried the cause, should state to the jury whether in point of law the fine had that effect, or what other effect, on the rights of the litigant parties, upon the general & acknowledged principle, "ad questionem juris non respondent juratores" (TINDAL, C.J.).—*MEATH (BP.) v. 53. Power of court to draw inferences of fact.—Upon a special case, though the ct. will, by consent of the parties, take upon themselves to draw inferences from the facts agreed upon, they will not do so where there are questions of fact to be decided upon the conflicting testimony of witnesses whose credit is made matter of question.—BROCKBANK v. 54. At what stage evidence to be produced.—It is in the discretion of the judge, subject to the review of the ct., to determine in what stage of the cause evidence may be produced.

In trespass for false imprisonment deft. pleaded, that pltf. had stolen deft.'s chaff; he further pleaded that his chaff had been stolen, & that he had reasonable ground to suspect pltf. Pltf. gave evidence, in the first instance, to account for her possession of chaff. Deft.'s witnesses proved that the chaff in pltf.'s possession was similar in quality to that lost by deft., & inter alia, that in both there was linseed:—Held: the judge had rightly exercised his discretion in allowing pltf. to call a witness in reply to account for the presence of linseed in the chaff found in pltf.'s possession.—WRIGHT v. WILLCOX (1850), 9 C. B. 650; 19 L. J. C. P. 333; 15 L. T. O. S. 228; 14 Jur. 746; 137 E. R. 1047.

55. Duty of judge.—Whether an article is "necessary" for an infant not only in the sense of being necessary for the support of life, but as fit to maintain him in the station of life in which he is, is a mixed question of law & fact, the latter to be determined by the jury subject to the control of the ct.; but there is in every case, & not merely in those arising on a plea of infancy, a preliminary question, which is one of law, namely, whether there is any evidence on which the jury could properly find the question for the party on whom the onus of proof lies. If there is not, the judge ought to withdraw the question from the jury, & direct a nonsuit, if the onus is on pltf., or a verdict for pltf., if the onus is on deft.—RYDER v. WOMBWELL (1868), L. 56. What is evidence to go to jury—Evidence sufficient to support verdict.]—The meaning of the phrase "evidence to go to the jury" is such evidence that if the jury found in favour of the party for whom it was offered, the ct. would not upset the judgment.—PARRATT v. BLUNT & CORNFOT (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 103; 2 Cox, C. C. 242.

57. — Including reasonable inferences of fact.]—He upon whom the burden of proving an issue lies is not bound to prove every fact or conclusion of fact upon which the issue depends. From every fact that is proved, legitimate & reasonable inferences may be drawn; & hence, in discussing whether there is, in any case, evidence to go to the jury, what the ct. has to consider is whether, assuming the evidence to be true, & adding to the direct proof all such inferences of fact as in the exercise of a reasonable intelligence the jury would be warranted in drawing from it, there is sufficient to support the issue.—PARFITT v. LAWLESS (1872), L. R. 2 P. & D. 462; 41 L. J. P. & M. 68; 27 L. T. 215; 30 J. P. 822; 21 W. R. 200.

58. —]—It cannot with strict propriety be said, where the facts proved are not inconsistent either with the affirmative or the negative of the allegation sought to be established, that there is no evidence to go to the jury. That would exclude many cases where no doubt there would be evidence, though slight, which ought to be submitted to the jury. Applying the maxim de minimis non curat lex, when we say that there is no evidence to go to a jury, we do not mean that there is literally none, but that there is none which ought reasonably to satisfy a jury that the fact sought to be proved is established (MAULE, J.).

This is now settled to be the real question in such cases by the decisions in the Exchequer Chamber, which have, in our opinion, so properly put an end to what had been treated as the rule, that a case must go to the jury if there was what had been termed a scintilla of evidence (per CUR.).—*WHEELTON v. At the trial K. was called & proved his own absence from this country, & stated that G. was also absent. On cross-examination, however, he was asked how he knew of G.'s absence, & he said he saw G., abroad, during a great part of the time from day to day. He admitted that during the time in question G. was absent from time to time, & had been absent for as much as one month together, for the purposes of pleasure & recreation, & said he could not undertake to say that G. had not been in England during the time in question, although he had a moral conviction that he had not. Plffs.' correspondent in London was also called, & said that G. never came to London except on business; that when he came on business, he always came to him; & that he had not seen G. in London during the time in question:—Held: there was evidence to go to the jury of the absence from England of G. during the time in question, without calling G. himself.—*Koch v. Yet on demurrer a judge may well inform himself from dictionaries or books on the particular subject concerning the meaning of any word. A. assigned to B., who remained in possession till Aug. 1851, & then assigned to deft., subject to the payment of the rent due. Before taking the assignment deft. wrote to plff., inquiring about his title to the land, & whether he, deft., would be safe in paying the rent to B. Plff. answered, that he thought he had a right to look to deft. for the rent; to which deft. replied, admitting his liability for the rent, & that plff. was the owner of the land:—Held: the letter admitted a tenancy from year to year, at the rent reserved in the lease to A., & it was properly left to the jury to find whether such a tenancy existed.—*Doe v. It appeared that when the first papers were furnished, defts. objected to their sufficiency, & that others were a few days after delivered, to which it was not shown that plfts. were notified of any objection until the first trial:—Held: the words "as soon as possible" must be construed to mean within a reasonable time under the circumstances, & it was properly left to the jury to say whether, considering all the facts, plfts. had complied with the condition by furnishing the second set of papers, & was not a question of law upon which the judge should have decided.—*MANN v. 1. — Answers to questions in proposal form.]—An insurance co. required application for insurance to be made on printed forms containing certain questions which were to be minutely answered, & were declared to form the basis of the insurance. One of the questions was: "Is the property involved in law, or mortgaged; if the latter, to whom, & for what amount?" The answer was: "There is a mtge. on the house for $200"—which was untrue. This application was referred to in the policy, one of the conditions of which was, that if the buildings were described otherwise than as they really were, the insured should not be entitled to any benefit under the policy:—Held: the answer to this question amounting to a warranty, & being untrue, its materiality was not a question for the jury.—*MARSHALL v. SUB-SECT. 4.—DECISION OF COLLATERAL ISSUES GOVERNING ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

A. In General.

78. General rule—Question for judge.]—All questions relative to the admissibility of evidence, & all preliminary matters of fact, are to be determined by the judge, not by the jury; & if evidence be tendered to show the evidence prima facie admissible ought to be rejected, it is the duty of the judge to receive the evidence so tendered, & decide upon it himself.

Where, in an action on an instrument purporting to be a foreign bill of exchange, & stamped accordingly, it was proposed on the part of deft. to show, that it was in reality an inland bill & therefore improperly stamped:—Held: the judge ought to have received the evidence, & decided for himself whether the bill was a foreign or an inland bill.—BARTLETT v. SMITH (1843), 11 M. & W. 483; 12 L. J. Ex. 287; 1 L. T. O. S. 149; 7 Jur. 448; 152 E. R. 895.

79. — —.]—LEWIS v. MARSHALL, No. 32, ante.

80. — —.]—(1) Whether conditions precedent to the admissibility of evidence have been fulfilled, is a question for the judge who tries the cause. Thus, where declarations on the question of pedigree by a deceased member of the family are tendered in evidence, it is for the judge to decide whether the declarant has been proved tion exclusively for the jury to determine whether the terms of a deed held out an inducement for future co-habitation.—READE v. ADAMS (1856), 9 Ir. Jur. 197.—IR.

b. — —.]—Parol evidence is always admissible to show what existing thing corresponds with any particular description in a document; but when the thing answering the particular description is ascertained, the question whether that description, as used in any particular instrument, is so controlled & limited as to comprise a part only of that which the uncontrolled description would embrace, is a question of construction, & therefore for the ct.—DEVONSHIRE (DUKE) v. NEILL (1876), 2 L. R. Ir. 132.—IR.

c. — —.]—The judge, instead of submitting the meaning of the words in a fee-farm grant as a question for the jury, ought to construe them himself.—QUINN v. SHIELDS (1877), 1 R. Ir. 11 C. L. 254.—IR.

d. — —.]—It belongs to the ct. to interpret an obligation.—CALDER v. AITCHINSON & Co. (1831), 9 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 777.—SCOT.

PART. I. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 4.—A.

78 1. General rule—Question for judge.]—When the admissibility of the evidence tendered depends upon questions of fact, it is for the judge to decide as to whether or not the circumstances are such as to justify the admission of the evidence so tendered. His decision in no way affects the right & the duty of the jury to give such weight to the evidence thus admitted as, under all the circumstances, they may decide it is entitled to.—F. v. F. (1920), 52 D. L. R. 440.—CAN.

e. Religious belief of witness—Competency—Examination on voir dire.]—It is not the duty of the trial judge to examine a witness on the voir dire as to his religious belief, for the purpose to be a member of the family; & it makes no difference that the legitimacy of the declarant happens to be, also, the only question in issue for the jury. Where the declaration was, that the declarant had received a document from her mother, who had told her it was her marriage certificate:—Held: this declaration was admissible.

(2) Declarations of relationship are not inadmissible on the ground that the parties have an interest in establishing the relationship, there being no lis mota at the time.

(3) There are conditions precedent which are required to be fulfilled before evidence is admissible for the jury. Thus an oath, or its equivalent, & competency, are conditions precedent to admitting viva voce evidence; & apprehension of immediate death to admitting evidence of dying declarations; & search to secondary evidence of lost writings; & stamp to certain written instruments; & so is consanguinity or affinity in the declarant to declarations of deceased relatives. The judge alone has to decide whether the condition has been fulfilled. If the proof is by witnesses, he must decide on their credibility. If counter-evidence is offered, he must receive it before he decides; & he has no right to ask the opinion of the jury on the fact as a condition precedent (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—DOE v. JENKINS v. DAVIES (1847), 10 Q. B. 314; 16 L. J. Q. B. 218; 11 Jur. 607; 116 E. R. 122.

Annotation:—As to (2) Rejd. Plant v. Taylor (1861), 7 H. & N. 211.

81. ———.]—All preliminary questions of fact on which the admissibility of evidence depends are to be decided by the judge, & not by the jury.

In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange dated abroad, deft. is not estopped from showing that the bill was drawn in England, & improperly stamped as an Inland Bill; & that is a fact to be determined by the judge.—BENNISON v. JEWISON (1848), 12 Jur. 485.

82. ———.]—(1) A judge at Nisi Prius is bound to try a collateral issue, where the reception of evidence depends on a preliminary question of fact.

A judge is bound to decide the preliminary question of fact whether a communication is privileged or not; (2) his decision if erroneous may be reviewed.—CLEAVE v. JONES (1852), 7 Exch. 421; 21 L. J. Ex. 105; 18 L. T. O. S. 332; 155 E. R. 1013.

In an action of libel, pltf., in order to prove the publication of the libel, tendered secondary evidence of the contents of a letter written by deft. On the part of deft. a document was produced as the original:—Held: the judge was at that stage of the cause bound to hear the evidence on both sides, & to decide whether the Act, 1883 (c. 52), sect. 4 (1), (H), although such document is headed "Private & Confidential: Without prejudice." The rule which excludes documents marked "without prejudice" has no application to a document which in its nature & character may prejudicially affect the person to whom it is addressed if he should reject the terms offered thereby; & it does not therefore apply to a notice of an act of bkpcy. Neither does the rule apply unless some person is in dispute or negotiation with another, & terms are offered for the settlement of the dispute or negotiation. The ct. is necessarily entitled, therefore, to look at the document in order to determine whether the conditions under which the rule alone applies, exist.—Re DAINTREY, Ex p. HOLT, [1893] 2 Q. He declined, & they thereupon, with a view of proving that it had been duly executed, proceeded to put in a document purporting to be a copy of the policy which they had received from deft.'s broker. Deft. objected, & requested the judge to hear evidence to show that no original policy was or ever had been in existence. The objection was overruled, & the alleged copy admitted. Later in the cause deft. gave evidence tending to prove that in fact there had never been any duly stamped policy, or indeed, any policy at all executed, & the judge left it to the jury to say whether there had or had not been executed a duly stamped policy by deft. The jury found in the affirmative:—Held: the question was rightly left to the jury, inasmuch as if the judge had himself decided it, he would in fact have decided the main issue between the parties.—*STOWE v. This letter being called for under a notice to produce, deft.'s counsel stated that there was no such letter, & proposed to show by evidence that H. had not given his letter to deft. on Apr. 4, at his office, as stated, because deft. was at another place, & also because H.'s letter was dated on Apr. 6, & was sent by post on that day. The judge received the evidence thus proposed to be given for deft. before allowing pltf. to go into secondary evidence of H.'s letter of Apr. 4:—Held: such evidence was not evidence to the jury, but to himself only, & any part of it which was written evidence should not be read by the officer of the ct., but should be handed to the judge & then shown to the opposite counsel.—*SMITH v. Defts. resisted his claim as fraudulent, denying that they had ever received the trunk, & offered to prove, as tending further to show the dishonesty of the claim, that this farm had been the subject of a suit in chancery, in which it was decreed that pltf.'s father held the land only as agent for another, & should convey to him; & that pltf. was aware of the fact, having been examined as a witness in the case:—Held: such evidence was rightly received & was sufficient to

In the course of their case, which was opened first, they tendered his declarations in evidence. Pltfs. objected to the admissibility of these declarations, & tendered evidence on the voire dire, for the purpose of showing that the declarant was not a member of the family. E. Whether Reviewable on Appeal.

106. 109. Evidence on Commission Act, 1830 (c. 22), s. 10, makes the deposition of a witness taken under it inadmissible in evidence, unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the judge that the deponent is unable from permanent sickness or other permanent infirmity to attend the trial:—Held: though it is competent to the ct. to review his decision, it is for the judge to satisfy himself of the deponent's inability to attend, by such evidence as he shall think fit: & the ct. will not interfere, unless it be shown that the judge has been misled by false evidence, or that injustice has resulted from the course pursued at the trial.—*BEAUFORT (DUKE) v. t. General rule.—The judge in directing the jury as to the law is bound to call their attention to the manner in which the law should be applied by them according to their findings as to the facts, & the extent to which he should do so depends on the circumstances of the case.—*SPENCER v. a. What is misdirection.—Particular argument not left to jury.—It is no misdirection that the judge, in charging the jury, did not advance a particular argument, which the counsel thinks would have influenced the jury in his client's favour.—*ANNABLE v. b. Defendant not called as witness.—Judge's opinion of defendant's evidence.—Where deft. knew all the circumstances, & might have been called as a witness:—Held: it was not a misdirection to tell the jury they might infer that if deft. had been called his evidence would not have benefited his case.—TUFTS v. HATHEWAY (1858), 4 All. 62.—CAN.

c. Misstatement of legal proposition.—A misstatement of a legal proposition is not a misdirection unless it touches the very point of the case, going directly to the point which the jury has to determine, limiting & directing their verdict.—PETERS v. SILVER (1867), 7 N. S. R. 75.—CAN.

d. Trover for three sheep.—In trover for three sheep, pltf. alleged that she had brought two with her to the residence of M., with whom she was living when they were taken, & one she had purchased when there. The sheep were seized as the property of M. The sheep bore M.'s mark; pltf. had admitted that M. had appropriated to his own use her sheep, & said he was to have given her others, but had not done so. The judge, after referring to the conflicting evidence, told the jury that if defts.' evidence was true, it was matter of law that the sheep were not pltf.'s, & he recommended them to bring in a verdict for defts. upon the ground if they took the same view of the evidence, adding that it would be better for the parties that the jury should follow the law, as a departure from the rules of the ct. would only tend to prolong litigation:—Held: the verdict must be set aside on ground of misdirection.—MCLELLAN v. INGRAHAM (1882), 3 R. & G. 164.—CAN.

e. No direction as to effect of evidence.—It is a misdirection of judge not to charge the jury as to effect of certain evidence.—McFARLANE v. FLINN (1870), 8 N. S. R. 141.—CAN.

f. Strong observation on evidence.—Where defts. were indicted for obstructing a navigable river by the erection of a wharf, & there was no evidence that the part covered by the wharf had ever been navigated by vessels of any size, but it was shown only that prosecutor was prevented by it from landing there with his skiff, & the wharf was proved not to interfere with the navigation:—Held: the jury were rightly directed that on this evidence the only verdict which could be rendered was not guilty. Such a direction is not so much a direction on the law as a strong observation on the evidence, which may properly be made in a proper case without being open to the charge of misdirection.—R. v. PORT PERRY RY. CO. (1876), 38 U. C. R. 431.—CAN.

g. When the judge in charging the jury told them that "putting out of consideration all admissions that had been contradicted, which on that account he thought they should dismiss from consideration, pltf. were in his opinion clearly entitled to recover."—Held: this was not a misdirection.—*MORRISON v. i. Judge's belief in credibility of witness.—It is not misdirection to tell the jury, in reference to deft.'s evidence, that a competent witness should be believed.—BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA v. FISH (1894), 32 N. B. R. 434.—CAN.

j. Non-direction on evidence of handwriting.—It is not misdirection to tell the jury that they may use their own observation as to handwriting; nor is such a direction a withdrawal from the jury of the oral testimony given in the matter.—KIBBY v. LEIGHTON (1895), 33 N. B. R. 4.—CAN.

k. Expression of opinion on facts by judge.—Not binding on jury.—It is a misdirection for the judge to express his opinion on various questions of fact without telling the jury that his opinion is not binding on them & that they are the sole judges of fact.—*NATABAR GHOSH v. l. Practice in Ontario.—An objection was taken to the charge as being adverse:—Held: the charge could not be complained of here, for to give effect to the objection would be to compel the judge to submit the case to the jury, leaving them to apply the evidence without any assistance from him, which was not the practice in this Province.—*SCOUALL v. 139. — Genuineness of attestation of deed set up.]—The onus of proving the genuineness of a witness to a deed in a civil suit lies on the party setting up the deed, not on the party impeaching it, as in a criminal proceeding; & it is a misdirection in a judge to tell the jury in a civil suit, that under such circumstances they must try the question as to whether the deed was forged or not, in the same manner as if debt. was on his trial for forgery.—DOE d. DEVINE v. WILSON (1855), 10 Moo. P. C. C. 502; 14 E. R. 581, P. C.

141. — Death of person at particular time — Person presumed dead by law.]—The presumption of law that a person who has not been heard of for a period of seven years is then dead does not point to any precise moment of that period as the time of his death. The onus of proving his death at a particular time lies upon those who assert the fact.—LAMBE v. ORTON (1859), 29 L. J. Ch. 286; 1 L. T. 290; 6 Jur. N. S. 61; 8 W. R. 111.

148. On party denying—Legal presumption.]—

Where the law presumes the affirmative of any fact, the negative of such fact must be proved by the party averring it in pleading. So where any act is required to be done by one, the omission of which would make him guilty of a criminal neglect of duty, the law presumes the affirmative, & throws the burden of proving the negative on the party who insists on it. Therefore, where a pltf. declared that defts., who had chartered his ship, put on board a dangerous commodity, by which a loss happened, without due notice to the captain, or any other person employed in the navigation, it lay upon him to prove such negative averment.—*WILLIAMS v. 149. — Assent to agreement by counsel on his behalf.]—A husband being prosecuted & found guilty at the quarter sessions, of an assault upon his wife, the ct. recommended an accommodation of the dispute & differences between them. The counsel of the parties signed a memorandum of agreement, that the husband should allow the wife an annuity of £50, & the ct., adverting to the arrangement, passed sentence upon deft., imposing only a nominal fine upon him. It was proved that deft.'s attorney stated publicly in ct., that deft. had come into the agreement, & that deft. was in ct. when the arrangement was entered into. Deft., by his answer, denied that he ever consented to it; & on his part there were depositions that to some extent supported it:—Held: it was not incumbent on pltf. to prove that deft. did assent to an agreement entered into by his counsel, but on deft. to disprove it.—*ELWORTHY v. 156. Tests—Who entitled to verdict—If no evidence given.—In assumpsit for unworkmanlike execution of a contract, plea, that the work was properly done, pltf. is entitled to begin. Supposing no evidence to be given on either side, deft. would be entitled to the verdict, for it is not to be assumed that the work was badly executed; therefore the onus lies on pltf.—AMOS v. 161 v. ———.—To discharge an onus & to transfer an onus are not identical expressions. If at any stage of a litigation the law casts upon one of the parties the burden of establishing a certain fact or facts, as essential to success, the mere production of evidence which makes the existence of those facts probable, does not in itself shift the onus, though it may go a long way towards satisfying it. It frequently happens, however, that in seeking to discharge the burden of proof which the law casts upon him a party to an action produces evidence from which a ct. would presume the existence of the facts upon which such discharge depends in the absence of any evidence on the other side sufficient to rebut that presumption. The position thus created, however, does not amount to a shifting of the legal onus, but to a question of the value & effect of the evidence given by the parties respectively.—COOH v. LICHTENSTEIN, [1910]

164. ———.—Proof by one of a family, that many years before, a younger brother of the person last seised had gone abroad, & that the repute of the family was that he had died there, & that the witness had never heard in the family of his having been married, is prima facie evidence that the party was dead without lawful issue, to entitle the next claimant by descent to recover in ejectment.

The evidence was sufficient to call upon deft. to give prima facie evidence, at least that [the younger brother] was married (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—DOE, LESSEE OF BANNING v. GRIFFIN (1812), 15 East, 293; 104 E. R. 855.

The articles, which were probably made between A.D. 200 & A.D. 400, were of considerable value & of a miscellaneous description, including a model of a boat & a hollow collar, inside of which were concealed several plaited chains. The articles were purchased privately by the Trustees of the British Museum. On a claim by the Crown for delivery up of the articles as being treasure trove:—Held: (1) the true inference to be drawn from the above circumstances was that the articles were originally intentionally concealed for the purpose of security, & therefore, were, prima facie, treasure trove; (2) the onus lay upon defts. to adduce satisfactory evidence to displace this prima facie inference, & defts. had failed to do so.—A.-G. v. BRITISH MUSEUM TRUSTEES, [1903] 2 Ch. 598; 72 L. J. Ch. 743; 88 L. T. 858; 51 W. R. 582; 19 T. L. R. 555.

173. — Registration of policy-holder.]—A policy of insurance against accidents issued by applt. co. in the form of a coupon provided that any claim must be made within twelve months of the registration of the holder's name. H. duly filled up the form of application for registration on Dec. 25, 1905, & posted it to applt. with the required premium. On Jan. 4, 1906, he received a letter, dated the previous day, inclosing an official receipt dated Dec. 29, 1905. The co. did not keep a regular register of names, but in practice the applications were stamped, dated, & filed on being received, after which intimation was sent to the holders of coupons that they had been duly registered. The coupons were afterwards placed in bundles alphabetically, to be kept "until the liability thereon expired." H. was injured in a railway accident on Dec. 28, 1906, & died on Dec. 29, in consequence. Notice of claim was given by his widow on Jan. 2, 1907:—Held: the onus was on the co. to prove that the registration was completed before Jan. 2, & in the absence of such proof, the claim must be held to have been made in time, & the company were liable.

ASSURANCE CO. v. HUNTER, 101 L. T. 135; 53 Sol. Jo. 649, H. L.

174. Plaintiff without means of proving defendant's allegation.—To an action brought by the assignees of a bkpt. for a debt due to bkpt.'s estate deft. cannot set off cash notes, issued by bkpt., payable to the bearer, bearing date before his bkpcy., unless he shows further that such notes came into his hands before the bkpcy.

It is a general rule of evidence that in every case the onus probandi lies on the person who wishes to support his case by a particular fact, & of which he is supposed to be cognisant: but it is said in this case that it was incumbent on the assignees to prove the time when deft. received these notes. But the assignees could have no means of knowing that fact, whereas it must have been known to deft., & as the latter relied upon it & did not prove it, the assignees were entitled to recover (ASHHURST, J.).—DICKSON v. EVANS (1794), 6 Term Rep. 57; 101 E. R. 433.

175. Whether difficulty of proof by plaintiff sufficient.—Here plff. relies on something done or permitted by the lessee, & therefore takes upon himself the burden of proving that fact. The proof may be difficult where the matter is peculiarly within deft.'s knowledge; but that does not vary the rule of law (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—DOE d. BRIDGER v. 176. Moral impossibility of obtaining evidence—Collision.—In a question of collision it is a rule that the onus probandi never be thrown upon a party where there is a moral impossibility that he can obtain the evidence required.—THE CONCORD v. THE MANCHESTER (1840), 7 L. T. 441.

See, generally, SHIPPING.

177. Operation of rule—Affidavit by plaintiff in belief in negative.—In general, in an affidavit directed to negative a fact in the knowledge of the opposite party, the deponent need only swear to his belief of the negative; & it is for the opposite party, in answer, to swear distinctly to the affirmative.—STOKES v. GRISSELL (1854), 14 C. B. 678; 2 C. L. R. 729; 23 L. J. C. P. 141; 23 L. T. O. S. 114; 18 J. P. 378; 18 Jur. 519; 2 W. R. 466; 139 E. R. 279.

SUB-SECT. 2.—RIGHT TO BEGIN.

A. In General.

180. On party alleging affirmative issue.]—If there is one affirmative in any of the issues, pltf. shall first go through his evidence as to all of them, but where the affirmative through the whole lies upon deft. he shall go first through his evidence.—TYRRELL v. HOLT & HOPELEY (1727), 1 Barn. K. B. 12; 94 R. R. 8.

Annotation:]—Mentd. Lowe v. Jolliffe (1762), 1 Wm. Bl. 365.

181. —.]—Pltf.'s counsel has a right to begin & state the facts, although by a rule of ct. deft. is under obligation to admit pltf.'s case. It is not like the case of an issue, proof of the affirmative of which lies on deft.—THWAITES v. SAINSBURY (1831), 5 C. & P. 69, N. P.

The clerk brought an action for a false return, & in his declaration recited the return, & negatived the allegations contained in it. The rector, by his plea, repeated the charges contained in the return.—Held: deft. had the right to begin.

Deft. ought to begin. The affirmative is certainly upon him, & as the presumption is, that pltf. has not been guilty of the misconduct imputed to him until the contrary is shown, deft. ought to proceed to prove such misconduct on the part of pltf. (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—BOWLES v. NEALE (1835), 7 C. & P. 262, N. P.

Plea, that R. sued out a writ of fi. fa. against bkpt., & that it was delivered to the sheriff before the bkpcy., & that the sheriff seized & sold the goods; & that no docket had been struck against bkpt., neither had the sheriff notice of any act of bkpcy. Replication, that the judgment was obtained against bkpt. by cognovit in an action commenced by collusion, & that the fiat issued within two months after the seizure. Rejoinder, that the action was commenced adversely:—Held: pltf. must begin.

Questions of this sort must be decided more upon what justice to the parties requires, than upon any strict rule of practice. Here, the real affirmative is the proof of collusion (COLERIDGE, J.).—SCOTT v. LEWIS (1836), 7 C. & P. 347, N. P.

186. —.]—By a private Act, the co. were empowered to make roads over the railway, & for that purpose to alter the course of, or raise any, road or way. The co. diverted a highway, & erected a bridge to carry it over the railway. The original road was forty feet wide, & the substituted one only 27, less convenient for driving sheep & cattle. The span of the bridge was 33 feet, but it was continued with wing-walls & parapets to the distance of 168 feet, & the width of the road on the bridge & between the parapets, was only sixteen feet. Defts. claimed the right to begin, contending that the substance of the issue to be tried was, whether they were warranted by the Act in the works they had made; that it was for defts. to prove they had acted in conformity with the Act; & that, consequently, the affirmative of the issue lay upon them. The Crown said that defts. had done more than they were authorised to do:—Held: the affirmative of the issue was on the Crown, & the Crown was entitled to begin.—*R. v. LONDON & BIRMINGHAM RY. Defts. pleaded to the new assignment a payment of money into ct., & by this plea relinquished & abandoned so much of the general issue "as traverses or denies, or can be deemed or construed to traverse or deny the trespasses newly assigned, or any part thereof." Replication to this plea, accepting the sum paid into ct., "in full satisfaction & discharge of the several trespasses above newly assigned":—Held: as the plea of not guilty was not entirely withdrawn, pltf. had the right to begin.—*PRICE v. In this declaration the assured stated, that "he was at that time in good health, & not afflicted with any disorder, nor addicted to any habit tending to shorten life; that he had not at any time been afflicted with insanity, etc.; that he had not had any spitting of blood, consumptive symptoms, asthma, cough, or other affection of the lungs; & that T. was at that time his usual medical attendant." The declaration in the cause averred the truth of this declaration & statement of the assured. Deff. pleaded pleas, respectively alleging, (1–5) that the declaration & statement of the assured was untrue in this, that at the time of making it he had had spitting of blood, consumptive symptoms, an affection of the lungs, an affection of the liver, & a cough of an inflammatory & dangerous nature; 6thly, that at that time he was affected with a disorder tending to shorten life; 7thly, that he was not at that time in good health; & 8thly, that he had falsely averred therein that T. was his usual medical attendant. Issues were joined on these pleas:—Held: pltf. was entitled to begin at the trial, the issue on the seventh plea & semble, on the other pleas also, being upon him.

The question is, for whom would the verdict be entered upon that issue, if no evidence were given on either side. No intention could be made that a man had had a spitting of blood, or the contrary (ALDERSON, B.).—GEACH v. INGALL (1845), 14 M. & W. 95; 15 L. J. Ex. 37; 4 L. T. O. S. 98; 9 Jur. 691; 153 E. 227. ——]—Whenever litigation exists, somebody must go on with it; pltf. is the first to begin; if he does nothing, he fails; if he makes a prima facie case, & nothing is done to answer it, deff. fails. The test, therefore, as to the burden of proof or onus of proof, whichever term is used, is simply this: to ask oneself which party will be successful if no evidence is given, or if no more evidence is given than has been given at a particular point of the case, for it is obvious that as the controversy involved in the litigation travels on, the parties from moment to moment may reach points at which the onus of proof shifts, & at which the tribunal will have to say that if the case stops there, it must be decided in a particular manner. The test being such as I have stated, it is not a burden that goes on for ever resting on the shoulders of the person upon whom it is first cast. As soon as he brings evidence which, until it is answered, rebuts the evidence against which he is contending, then the balance descends on the other side, & the burden rolls over until again there is evidence which once more turns the scale. That being so, the question of onus of proof is only a rule for deciding on whom the obligation of going further, if he wishes to win, rests. It is not a rule to enable the jury to decide on the value of conflicting evidence. So soon as a conflict of evidence arises, it ceases to be a question of onus of proof (BOWEN, L.J.).

The term "onus of proof" may be used in more ways than one. Sometimes when a cause is tried the jury is left to find generally for either pltf. or deff., & it is in such a case essential that the judge should tell the jury on whom the burden of making out the case rests, & when & at what period it shifts. Issues again may be left to the jury upon which they are to find generally for pltf. or deff., & they ought to be told on whom the burden of proof rests; & indeed it is to be observed that very often the burden of proof will be shifted within the scope of a particular issue by presumptions of law which have to be explained to the jury (BOWEN, L.J.).—ABRATH v. PART I. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 1.

252 i. Documentary evidence—Pleading.]—In an action for the recovery of land, plifs. claimed title under a deed from the exors. of one S., but the only evidence of the will produced by them was the copy of the probate from the registry office, with the affidavit of verification attached. Plifs. sought to support their case by reference to a certain statement in deft.'s pleading, in which, besides denying their right to recover, she herself also claimed title under a deed from the exors. of S.:—Held: they could not take that part of the pleading which suited their purpose & reject the rest: they could not use a scrap of it to eke out the insufficiency of their own evidence.—BARBER v. MCKAY (1889), 17 O. R. 562.—CAN.

m. ——— Account—Particulars to prove payment.]—Particulars of demand served by pltf. on deft., containing an admission of payment on account, & showing a balance in favour of pltf., were put in at the trial by deft. to prove the payment. Pltf. then relied upon the particulars so put in by deft. as a link in the chain of evidence, to show that he was entitled to a verdict for the balance therein mentioned:—Held: though the particulars rendered by pltf. & made use of by deft. were not evidence per se of the balance as therein stated, still the whole of the particulars ought to go to the jury as a fact in connection with other facts of the case, to assist them in forming their verdict.—KEESER v. EMPEY (1847), 4 U. C. R. 47.—CAN.

n. ——— Admissions against interest.]—In answer to an action brought by architects, claiming fees for the preparation of sketches or designs for deft., the latter, when examined as a witness, admitted that the sketches had been prepared for him by plifs., but stated that there was an understanding that they were not to be paid for unless used by him, & that they had not been used. It appeared that deft., at the time the plans were invited, had not yet purchased the land for the proposed buildings, & that he had asked for plans from several architects:—

Held: the admission of deft. could not be divided, for the purpose of obtaining a commencement of proof, there being no improbability in his statement, or indication of bad faith, or other circumstance, to bring the case within the exceptions of 60 Vict. (Q), c. 50, s. 20, amending art. 1243 of the Civil Code.—Cox v. PACAUD (1902), Q. R. 23 S. C. 9.—CAN.

o. ——— Letters.]—Extracts from a letter embodied in an affidavit cannot be noticed; either the whole letter or a copy should be before the ct., or at least, it should be sworn that the letter contains nothing more relating to the action.—VAUGHAN v. ROSS (1851), 8 U. C. R. 506.—CAN.

p. ———.]—At law a party producing a letter, or other document in evidence cannot use it partially, but makes the entire evidence. PRICKETT & MORRELL (1861), 7 Jur. N. S. 610.

See, generally, Part V., Sect. 6, sub-sect. 6, post.

261. ———— Referred to in depositions.]—In an action brought by plffs. on the mtge. deed, plffs. gave in evidence a deposition of the deft. before magistrates on a charge against S. of forging other deeds, & which deposition was supposed to contain an admission by deft. of the genuineness of plffs.' deed. Letters written by S. to deft. were produced before the magistrates, & referred to in the depositions. In these letters, written after the payment of the £420, S. alleged that he had been unable to obtain the money, & made various excuses for the delay:—Held: the letters were admissible in evidence for deft.—PAINTER v. ABIL (1863), as reported in 33 L. J. Ex. 60; 8 L. T. 287.

262. —Letters & answers.]—Deft. who puts in evidence a correspondence, consisting of several letters between himself & pltf., has a right to give in evidence a letter written by him to pltf., in reply to pltf.'s last letter, which bore date on the day before deft.'s letter.—ROE v. DAY (1836), 7 C. & P. 705, N. P.

263. ————. [—]—It was proposed on the part of a pltf. to give in evidence a letter written by deft.'s attorney, which purported to be an answer to a letter written to him by pltf.'s attorneys:—

not make a letter evidence by putting it into the hands of a witness for the purpose of cross-examination. When part of a paragraph is read for pursuer, defender is entitled to insist that the whole shall be read.—EDWARDS v. MAC INTOSH (1823), 3 Murr. 369.—SCOT.

r. —Document subject of action—Libel.]—Pltf. wrote a book & sent a copy as published to defts. for review. In an action for libel contained in the review, the whole book was put in evidence. At the commencement of the book was a note explaining the author's qualifications upon the subject of the work & referring to favourable comments in the Australian Journalist: & also a preface containing extracts from letters from distinguished men, in praise of pltf.'s work:—Held: the whole book as published & sent to defts., including the prefatory notes, was properly admitted in evidence.—MARKS v. SUNDAY TIMES NEWSPAPER CO. (1915), 15 S. R. N. S. W. 490.—AUS.

s. —Affidavit—Papers annexed thereto.]—In an action of slander for charging pltf. with perjury, some of the counts stated in the indictment that the words were spoken of & concerning the pltf., & of & concerning a certain affidavit, etc.; deft. justified, setting out the affidavit, & alleging certain statements therein contained to be wilfully false. The affidavit referred to two papers which were annexed, but there was no positive proof that they were annexed when the affidavit was sworn to by pltf.:—Held: there was sufficient prima facie evidence to let in the whole affidavit, & the admission of part to be read without the papers annexed was not correct, & the innuendoes not sufficiently proved.—MILNER v. GILBERT (1847), 3 Kerr, 617.—CAN.

t. —Articles of partnership agreement.]—Where, on the cross-examination of pltf., deft.'s counsel examined him as to the time he entered into a partnership, & his interest in it, pltf. was held to be entitled to go into the contents of the whole agreement, although it appeared there was written articles.—TOZER v. HUTCHISON (1869), 1 Han. 540.—CAN.

u. —Examination of deft. before trial.]—At the close of the defence, pltf.'s counsel without objection, put in deft.'s examination before trial. Pltf.'s counsel, in addressing the jury, read a portion thereof; & the judge, in his charge, read other portions:—Held: could be no objection to the judge reading such other portions, as they were properly in evidence.—SCOGALL v. STAPLETON (1886), 12 O. R. 200.—CAN.

v. —All terms to be proved.]—Where a party endeavours to prove by oral testimony the contents of a written document, the ct. before giving effect to such testimony should be convinced that all the terms have been proven. It is not sufficient for the party undertaking such a duty to furnish evidence of certain clauses which support his claim, but he must set out the whole document so that the ct. may be able to give effect to all its provisions, & that by testimony of the

Held: if pltf.'s counsel put in this letter of deft.'s attorney, he should also call for & put in the letter to which it was an answer, & not leave it to deft. to put in the letter of pltf.'s attorneys as his evidence.—WALSON v. MOORE (1845), 1 Car. & Kir. 626.

234. ———— Single letter self-explanatory.]—(1) Deft.'s son, who was under age, had lodged with pltf. for some time, during a part of which he had paid for his board, etc. He afterwards fell ill, but continued with pltf. who supplied him with necessaries. The father being applied to by pltf. for money, wrote in answer to the effect, that he could not advance any at that time, but that his son would come into possession of £80, in the following month, & that he would be able to pay what he owed pltf. himself:—Held: the letter was no admission of a liability in the father.

(2) A letter which fully explains itself, is admissible in evidence, without that to which it is an answer.—MORTIMORE v. WRIGHT (1840), 6 M. & W. 482; 9 L. J. Ex. 158; 4 Jur. 465; 151 E. R. 502.

266. Verbal statements & declarations.]—The whole of the account which a party gives of a transaction must be taken together, & his admission of a fact disadvantageous to himself shall not be received, without receiving at the same time his cotemporaneous assertion of a fact favourable to clearer nature. The document need not be set forth in evidence in its very words, but its exact sense & effect must be shown.—ROSS v. WILLIAMSON (1887), 14 O. R. 184.—CAN.

c. —Forged documents of title—Other unimpeachable evidence.]—If a party put in evidence in support of his title, documents proved to be forged, but the other evidence adduced by him is not impeachable, the ct., in rejecting the forged documents, will take the unimpeachable evidence into consideration, & if satisfied, adjudicate thereon.—SEVVAJI VIJAYA BHAGUNADIA VAL-OJI KRISHNAN COPALDAR v. In 1876, N. claimed the plant, stating they purchased in good faith & paid the agreed price, but the deed erroneously stated the price at $7,188.40. 279. ——(1) The general rule of evidence that, if one side puts in evidence a document for the purpose of proving part of it, the other side has a right to have the whole put in, does not apply to merchants' or traders' books of account containing entries of receipts & payments; therefore, if one side puts in such books of accounts to prove certain items of receipts, that does not entitle the other side to put those books in evidence to prove payments, unless the different items are so mixed up together as clearly to form one transaction.

(2) In taking accounts, entries made in the books of one of the accounting parties may be used in evidence against him. But entries in his favour may not be used by him in evidence unless directly & intimately connected with some entry which is used on the other side.

(3) Although an entry of receipt is good evidence of such receipt as against the person making it, an entry of payment is not evidence of such payment in favour of such person.—*REEVE v. This entry was rejected on the ground that it did not appear on the face of the account that the reeve gave credit for any sum applied to the discharge of that particular item:—Held: the evidence was properly rejected.—*Doe d. 285. ——By the course of the office of the sheriff of M. the officer making an arrest was required to make a return in writing, signed by him, of the arrest, & of the place where the arrest took place. A writ having been delivered to W., a sheriff's officer, to arrest A., W. arrested him accordingly, & made the following return: "Nov. 9, 1825, arrested A. in South Molton Street, at the suit of W." which return was signed by the officer & sent by him to the sheriff's office on the execution of the writ, & was then filed with the writ according to the course of the office. The writ & certificate were produced by the under-sheriff at the trial in an action brought by A. against a third party:—Held: the certificate was not admissible after the death of the officer to prove the place where the arrest was made.

An entry written by a person deceased in the course of his duty, where he had no interest in stating an untruth, is to be received as proof of the fact stated in the entry, & of every circumstance therein described, which would naturally accompany the fact itself.

As all the terms of the legal proposition above laid down are manifestly essential to render the certificate admissible, if any one of them fails, pltf. in error cannot succeed; & we are all of opinion that whatever effect may be due to an entry made in the course of any office reporting facts necessary to the performance of a duty, the statement of other circumstances, however naturally they may be thought to find a place in the narrative, is no proof of those circumstances.

whether he knew the fact that a vessel sent by him had been detained for want of wood, & whether M. & Co., the agents, admitted the fact in a reference of the question to two merchants:—Held: only distinct admissions made by them were admissible, & to allow what was proposed would be trying this case by another, which was quite incompetent.—WIGHT v. LIDDEL (1829), 5 Murr. 35.—SCOT.

Sect. 7.—Evidence received in part entitles whole to be given: Sub-sect. 2. Sect. 8. Part II. Sect. 1.]

Admitting then, for the sake of argument, that the entry tendered was evidence of the fact, & even of the day when the arrest was made, both which facts it might be necessary for the officer to make known to his principal, we are all clearly of opinion that it is not admissible to prove in what particular spot within the bailiwick the caption took place, that circumstance being merely collateral to the duty done (DENMAN, C.J.).—CHAMBERS v. BERNASCONI (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 347; 4 Tyr. 531; 3 L. J. Ex. 373; 149 E. R. 1114, Ex. Ch.; previous proceedings (1831), 1 Cr. & J. 451.

Upon the trial the depositions of the captain & the consul were read. They referred to the estimate of the ship's carpenter & stated that in their opinion it was a true estimate. The man who made it died before action brought: & it did not appear upon what materials his estimate had been founded. PART II. SECT. 1.

293 i. Must be relevant.]—Before A. became insane he had begun an action against B. for a sum of £971, & B. had thereupon obtained an order that A., who for many years had been B.'s solr., should deliver a bill of costs for taxation. Subsequently to A. becoming insane, on the application of B., & with the consent of counsel purporting to act on behalf of A., the order for the delivery of a bill of costs was set aside, judgment of no. pros. was entered in the action & a sum of money was borrowed from the bank by A.'s wife & paid by her to B. by way of compromise & full settlement of the claims of A. & B. against each other. After recovering his sanity A. informed B. & the bank that he repudiated what had been done by his wife but did not take any steps to set aside the order of the ct. made during his insanity:—Held: evidence tending to show that upon taxation it would have appeared that nothing was due from A. to B. was irrelevant to the inquiry whether the payment was for A.'s benefit.—*McLAUGHLIN v. 296 i. Evidence by way of explanation—Of conduct.]—In an action to set aside a conveyance made by pltf. in favour of deft., it was charged that the conveyance was never executed by pltf., but that the alleged execution was obtained by deft.'s fraud, & that pltf. signed the conveyance thinking that he was signing another instrument relating to the estate of his deceased wife. At the trial pltf. tendered evidence as to deft. having induced him to drink to excess about the time of the transaction in question, but the trial judge ruled that this evidence could not be introduced under the general allegations contained in the statement of claim:—Held: the exclusion of evidence had been pushed too far, & for a proper determination of the real merits of the case it would be advisable to admit evidence of every circumstance, declaration, or negotiation between the parties which could throw any light on conduct or motive.—*McDONALD v. r. —.]—In an action against deft. as drawer of a bill of exchange he pleaded accord & satisfaction, & gave evidence by it, without objection, that pltf. accepted his note in "full settlement & payment" of the bill. This was denied by pltf., who testified that the note was taken as collateral security for the payment of the bill. A verdict having been found for deft. on this issue:—Held: pltf. not having objected at the trial, could not move for a new trial on the ground that the parol evidence was improperly received.—*BARBOUR v. SECT. 3.—FACTS WHICH MAY BE PROVED.

SUB-SECT. 1.—FACTS IN ISSUE.

301. General rule.]—In an action by an administratrix on a policy of insurance on the life [of the father] of the intestate, where the defence seisin of pltf. T. & assurance from pltf. T. to pltf. H. On a rule nisi for non-suit:—Held: inconsistency not multiplicity forms the test by which pltf.'s several modes of proof may or may not be deemed admissible: the grant to W. was not inconsistent with the presumption of seisin arising from the evidence of T.'s possession: the rule nisi for a non-suit must be discharged.—THURLOW v. PERKS (1864), 1 W. W. & A.T.B. 142.—AUS.

b. Evidence of acts done after action brought not admissible.]—Pltf. in an action for trespass claimed under an authority from the owner of the locus in quo to go upon it & cut timber. At the trial he tendered evidence of acts done by deft. after action brought, & showing a persistence in his claim to the ground on which pltf. was working, the evidence was excluded. On a motion for a rule nisi to set aside a non-suit on the ground that the evidence was improperly excluded:—Held: the ruling was right.—LONG v. DRINAN (1877), Knox, 152.—AUS.

c. Contract for sale of racehorse on certain terms—Evidence of treatment of horse while in defendant's possession rejected.]—Pltf. sued for the balance of the purchase money of a racehorse. Deft. pleaded that he had returned the horse to pltf. in good & sound order & condition, as he was at liberty to do under the contract. At the trial the judge rejected the evidence to show the treatment of the horse while he was in the deft.'s possession, & evidence of the state & condition of the horse when he was first delivered to deft.:—Held: the judge was right in rejecting such evidence.—HALL v. IVORY (1877), Knox, 401.—AUS.

d. Action for personal injury—Evidence as to plaintiff's dependent family.]—In an action to recover damages for personal injuries caused by deft.'s negligence, evidence of pltf. was admitted that he had a family who were dependent on him for their support.—Held: the evidence was rightly admitted.—DEVIN v. CUNNEY (1882), 3 N. S. W. L. R. 322.—AUS.

e. Material matters concealed from insurers.]—Pltf. when obtaining from deft. the policy now sued upon represented to them that he was then insured by other companies in respect of the same premises:—Held: he could be called upon to show that the former policies were good & valid insurances, & evidence was admissible to show that the former policies were void, & consequently he obtained the

f. Evidence as to interpretation of circular admissible.]—Deft. published a circular which purported to be a correct representation & reproduction of an order of the ct. The jury found as facts that the same was an incorrect representation of the ct.'s order:—Held: evidence was admissible to show the meaning or interpretation of the circular.—WHITE v. MORRIS, LITTLE & SON, LTD. (1897), 23 V. L. R. 152.—AUS.

g. In indictment for nuisance.]—B. was indicted on an information for a public nuisance, & tendered evidence, which was rejected, to show that under a better system of sewages than that established by the comt., the nuisance would not have arisen:—Held: the evidence was admissible, & there must be a new trial.—R. v. BURFORD (1883), 17 S. A. L. R. 65.—AUS.

h. In action for negligence—Conversation between plaintiff & barmaid as to position of lavatory.]—Pltf., who had a drink at an hotel bar, asked the barmaid to direct him to the lavatory, which she did. Following her directions he went to a portion of the premises, where, looking for the lavatory, he fell down an unguarded lift well, & was injured. In an action against the hotel-keeper for negligence:—Held: the conversation between the barmaid & pltf. was admissible in evidence to prove that pltf. was on that part of the premises at the invitation of the proprietor.—MOUNTNEY v. SMITH (1904), 1 C. L. R. 146.—AUS.

k. Trespass—Evidence to show leave & licence—and in support of equitable plea.]—Declaration q.c.f. for cutting & removing trees, with a count in trover & the common counts. Pleas, leave & licence; & a special equitable plea, setting up that deft., being owner of the land, contracted by parol to sell it to pltf., & that at the time of such contract & of the conveyance of the land to deft., it was expressly agreed that deft. should have certain trees thereon, & be at liberty to cut & remove them, but that such reservation should not be, & it accordingly was not, inserted in the conveyance; & that deft. entered & cut the trees, etc., which are the trespasses, etc. Deft. as a witness at trial, having proved the sale of the land, it was proposed to show by him the agreement as set up in the equitable plea:—Held: such evidence was improperly rejected, for it was admissible both under the equitable plea & the plea of leave & licence.—WALTER v. DEXTER (1876), 34 U. C. R. 426.—CAN.

l. Evidence as to inferiority of goods delivered.]—CHURCH v. ABELL (1877), 1 S. C. R. 442.—CAN.

m. Arbitration proceedings.]—Arbitrators ought only to take such evidence as is required by the terms of the agreement referring the question in dispute to arbitration.—KRISHNA KANTA PARAMANIK v. BIDYA SUNDARI DAS (1869), 2 B. L. R. App. 25.—IND.

n. —.]—ASHABAI v. ESSAJI (1913), L. L. R. 38 Bom. 60.—IND.

o. Questions of admissibility—Should be decided as they arise.]—Questions as to the admissibility of evidence should be decided as they arise, & should not be reserved until judgment in the case is given.—JAIJI RAI v. BHUBOTARAN NUNDY (1889), 1 L. R. 17 Calc. 173.—IND.

p. —.]—RAMJIBIN SEKHROWY v. OGHOORE NATH CHATTERJEK (1897), 1 L. R. 25 Calc. 401; 2 C. W. N. 188.—IND.

q. Evidence of amount of defendant's property.]—There is one case, & one only, namely, actions for breach of promise of marriage, in which evidence of the amount of deft.'s property is admissible.—WILSON v. LEONARD (1852), 5 Ir. Jur. 101.—IR.

r. Powers of magistrate.]—As a magistrate has power to receive evidence not strictly legal there is no reason why he should in any case base his decision as to the admissibility of evidence upon strictly legal grounds.—PEARSON v. CLARK, Mac. 136.—N.Z.

s. Improper admission—Evidence admitted before objection.]—Where inadmissible evidence is given without objection, but the objection that such evidence is admissible is afterwards raised on further evidence of the same class being tendered, the evidence previously given without objection should be withdrawn from the jury.—BANK OF NEW ZEALAND v. FLEMING (1899), 18 N. Z. L. R. 1.—N.Z.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.

301 I. General rule.]—When a material fact is alleged in a pleading, & the pleading of the opposite party is silent with respect thereto, the fact was that the policy was void under 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, on the ground that the intestate had no interest in it:—Held: the evidence of a witness that previous to the insurance the intestate consulted him about effecting a policy on the intestate's [father's] life, was admissible as an act, & was not objectionable as hearsay.

Any evidence is admissible which tends to show that the father was the real insurer. The question in the cause is, whether the insurance was effected bona fide by J. [the father] for his own benefit, or, substantially, by T. [the intestate] in the name of J., but not for his benefit. Everything, therefore, is admissible which was done by T.: & words are often acts. The question is not open to the objection against hearsay. It is not hearsay. It is a question as to an act done. One asks another to attest a document, or to advance a sum of money; those are not merely words, but acts (ERLE, J.).—SHILLING v. ACCIDENTAL DEATH INSURANCE CO. (1858), 1 F. & F. 116; 4 Jur. N. S. 244.

302. Letters from principal to agent—Authority of agent in issue.—In an action against brokers for entering into a contract with pltf., as agents for sellers, without authority, it appeared that the broker had been at first put into communication with them as to the sale of a particular cargo of wool, & had learnt what their terms were, except as to price, which was to be afterwards agreed upon, & as to which he had been referred to their agent to complete the matter. The agent, as the broker was aware, received letters from time to time from the sellers, insisting on adherence to the terms they had required, & he was more or less aware of the effect of these letters. Ultimately, however, deft., acting as broker for both parties, concluded with the agent a contract upon different terms, which was at once repudiated by the sellers:—Held: the sellers' letters to their agent were admissible for pltf. to show the want of authority.—HUGHES v. GRAME (1863), 3 F. & F. 885.

See, generally, AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 386, 387, Nos. 901–905.

303. Carrying capacity of ship.—A charter-party provided that the ship should load a cargo of creosoted sleepers & timber & therewith immediately proceed to S., the charterer to have the option of shipping 200 tons of general cargo. The charterparty contained the following words: "owners guarantee ship to carry at least about 90,000 cubic feet, or 1,500 tons dead weight." A lump sum of £1,000 was payable as freight. The ship was, in fact, able to load only 65,000 cubic feet, equivalent to 1,120 tons dead weight, of the cargo specified in the charterparty, & the master refused to receive 8,000 creosoted sleepers which had been sent alongside by the charterer. In an action brought by the charterer to recover damages against the owners:—Held: evidence to show that the ship would carry the named quantity of dead weight cargo mentioned in the charterparty was admissible.—CARNEGIE v. CONNER (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 45; 59 L. J. Q. B. 122; 61 L. T. 691; 6 T. L. R. 12; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 447.

1. What may be—Agreement.—In action for obstructing watercourse.—In an action for obstructing a watercourse an agreement between pltf. & deft., whereby the latter agreed to enlarge the watercourse, & did so, & was paid by pltf. for it, is evidence for pltf., & relevant to the matter in dispute.—PALMER v. TURNER (1862), 5 All. 290.—CAN.

a.—Under count for money had & received.—Declaration containing special counts.—Where a declaration contains special counts, with a count for money had & received, & the particulars also apply to the latter count, pltf. may give evidence under the count for money had & received, though his counsel did not claim to recover on that count in opening the case.—CARRICK v. ATKINSON (1863), 5 All. 515.—CAN.

b.—Not evidence rebutting immaterial statements.—Where evidence was offered to rebut immaterial statements, which could not affect the case:—Held: it was properly rejected.—HAMILTON v. HOLDER (1874), 2 P. 222.—CAN.

c.—Fraud.—Where non tenet pleaded.—Pltf. has a right, under the plea of non tenet, to show a conveyance fraudulent.—MCLEOD v. MCGUIRK (1874), 2 P. 238.—CAN.

e.—Possibility of repeal of bye-law—Set up by corporation.—If it is proper for a city corp. to set up its bye-law, it must be equally open to claimant, if he concedes its validity, to urge that it is likely to be soon repealed, & that it is not intended to be permanent.—Re Gibson & Toronto City (1913), 28 O. h.Letters from agent.—An Irish railway co. contracted with pltf. to carry certain pigs from a station in Ireland through to London, part of the journey being performed on the L. Ry.

In an action against the Irish co. for breach of contract in failing to carry the pigs to London within a reasonable time, a letter from T., an agent of the L. Ry. Co., to pltf., was admitted in evidence, subject to defts.' objection:—Held: the letter was properly received.—RUDDY v. MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1881), 8 L. R. Ir. 224.—IR.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

304 i. Declarations.—In a charge of unlawful & forcible entry into a dwelling-house, evidence was given by a witness for the prosecution that accused had made a statement to him that he, accused, had sold the land to pltf. This evidence was objected to, on the ground that such evidence was respecting a collateral matter & not relevant to the issue. The objection was overruled:—Held: upon such a charge evidence relating to title of the occupant was inadmissible.—R. v. WALKER (1906), 4 W. L. R. 288.—CAN.

k. Everything passing at the time of transaction.—Action for assault.—Conversion between witness & accused.—The statement proposed to be given in evidence was one made by the witness as to what she & accused said at the time the assault was alleged to have been committed:—Held: this was material to the matter in issue, & part of the res gestae, & could be contradicted.—*R. v. 308. ——— Action for false representation as to solvency.—Declaration by plaintiff as to reliance on representation.]—In case for a false representation of the solvency of B., whereby plffs. trusted him with goods:—Held: their declarations, at the time, that they trusted him in consequence of the representation were admissible in evidence for them.—FELLOWES v. WILLIAMSON (1829), Mood. & M. 306, N. P.

309. ——— Action of trover Declaration by plaintiff when goods handed over.]—In an action brought to recover back notes delivered to deft. by plff., plff. proved that deft., who was exor. of W., having questioned plff. as to her having possession of some property belonging to W., plff. handed the notes over to deft., stating that W. had given them to her, plff., before her death. Deft. did not deny the statement, but had no means of knowing its truth or falsehood. There was contradictory evidence as to whether deft. said that he would keep the notes, or that he would keep them to be returned to plff. on request. The notes had been seen in plff.'s possession before W.'s death. Other evidence was given, as to the fairness of the conduct of plff. respecting W.'s property in general:—Held: the declaration made by plff. might go to the jury as evidence in her favour, on the ground, though very slight, of acquiescence in its truth by deft., & also as being a part of the res gestæ on the occasion of deft.'s obtaining the notes, & as giving a character to the whole conduct of plff.—HAYSLEP v. GYMER (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 162; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 479; 3 L. J. K. B. 149; 110 E. R. 1169.

310. ——— Complaint as to disputed boundary.]—(1) Trespass for breaking & entering plff.'s garden. Deft. justified under two pleas, viz. the enjoyment as of right & without interruption of a way over the garden for twenty years & forty years respectively before the suit. At the trial it appeared that plff. was tenant to L. of the garden, & deft. was owner of premises comprising a cottage & yard, which had formerly been part of the estates of the L. family, with a privy in the yard abutting upon the garden, which privy had stood there for sixty years. J. L., who died in 1811, was owner of the garden & the premises belonging to deft., & devised certain of his estates, including those premises, to H. L. in trust to sell. H. L. sold various lots, & in 1812 W. became the purchaser of a lot which included those premises. In 1821 W. built the cottage, & on his death in 1849 the premises devolved to deft. in right of his wife, who was heiress of W. In 1823 S. became tenant of the garden, & continued so until 1857. In 1830 he walled up stones against the opening of the privy into the garden, & W. knocked them down. S. complained of that act to H. L. who went with his agent to look at the place, & met there S. & W. Declarations of W. & H. L. on that occasion were admitted in evidence after objection by plff. A low wall was accordingly built round & a loose flagstone put at the top so as to form a cesspool, & the privy was cleaned out through the garden until about 1852. Under the will of J. L. the garden came to W. L. on his attaining the age of 21 years, in 1817. After the declarations were given in evidence, it appeared that H. L. was trustee of W. L. during his minority, & subsequently by his request received his rents. In Oct. 1861, the tenant of the garden, by direction of W. L., built a wall to prevent deft. going through it. A correspondence between the attorneys for deft. & W. L. in which there was a negotiation as to a reference of the matter to arbitration, began on Dec. 28 of that year, & continued until the Feb. 13, 1862. The trespass for which the action was brought was committed on Feb. 3, 1863; & the writ issued on the following day. The judge left to the jury the question whether deft. had submitted to or acquiesced in the interruption for one year within 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 4, & they said that he had not, & found for him on both pleas:—Held: the declaration of W. was admissible as explanatory of acts about to be done

In an inquiry before a jury as to the value of land taken for railway purposes, evidence as to an offer previously made for the land by a trial person to the owner, is inadmissible, as being res inter alios acta.—KILPATRICK v. BOARD OF LAND & WORKS (1879), 5 V. L. R. 122.—AUS.

m. ———.]—In an action for not accepting timber according to agreement, plff. gave evidence of the purchase of timber by deft. from C. & W. about the same time:—Held: although deft.'s contract with C. & W. would otherwise have been irrelevant testimony, plff. had thereby made it material, & it was open to deft. to go into evidence to explain the whole of the transaction with C. & W. without calling them as witnesses.—CONNEL v. SMITH (1847), 3 Kerr, 483.—CAN.

n. ——— Declaration by third party.]—On the trial of an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, it was stated that M., deft.'s brother, who owned the land which adjoined plff.'s land on the south side & continuous with deft.'s land, pointed out a tree stump as the boundary between the two tracts, & that it was marked as such by the surveyor. Deft. objected to this evidence:—Held: admissible as part of the res gestæ.—BRIGGS v. MCBRIDE (1879), 19 N. B. R. 202.—CAN.

s. Conversation at time of transaction—Fraudulent conveyance—Must go to specific agreement impeached.—Pltf's. sought to have declared void as against creditors a conveyance of land from a husband to his wife & a subsequent conveyance of the same land from the wife to her daughter. After the first conveyance the wife agreed to sell the land to W. & assigned this agreement to her daughter, who obtained an order nisi for foreclosure, but at the beginning & trial of the action the agreement was still in force & W. in possession. Neither the legal representatives of the wife, nor W. were made parties. In the action a witness, who at the period of the impeached transaction had heard conversation between the husband & wife as to their manner of carrying on business & the passing of money between them, was not permitted to tell what were the arrangements which he had heard them discuss.—Held: the testimony was properly excluded, it not being with respect to a specific agreement, & no foundation having been laid for introducing the conversations as part of the res gestæ.—BLAIR v. DICE, [1924] 4 D. L. R. 568; 3 W. W. R. 379.—CAN.

321. —[—]—The female plff. was a passenger in an omnibus belonging to deffs., & whilst on her journey a concussion took place, which nearly upset the omnibus, & threw her from her seat & caused her serious injury. Upon her then getting out, one of the other passengers was standing outside; & upon the trial it was proposed by plffs.' counsel to ask the female plff. if anything was then said by this person about the accident, & if the omnibus conductor made any reply. This being objected to, the judge ruled that it could not be put, & as there was no other evidence of how the accident happened, plffs. were nonsuited. Had the question been put it would have been as follows: "Did anyone say anything about the accident?" To which the reply would have been "A bystander who had got out of the omnibus, said, alluding to the driver, 'By Jove, this fellow's conduct must be reported;'" whereupon the conductor said "Sir, he has been reported, for he has been off the points five or six times to-day; he is a new driver"—Held: the question was properly rejected, for it did not form part of the res gesta, nor, if it did, did it explain the actual cause of the collision.

It is really not a statement of the conduct of the driver at the time, but of his previous conduct (KELLY, C.B.)

It is said that it was part of the res gesta, but it was not so, the matter was all over, & the statement was not a portion of the surrounding circumstances so as to make it evidence (BRAM-

The letter is admissible, not as the declaration of the father simply, but as part of the res gesta connected with this marriage (DR. LUSHINGTON).—DUINS v. DONOVAN (OTHERWISE DUINS) (1830), 3 Hag. Ecc. 301; 162 E. R. 1165.

They did so, when the magistrate fined him £1:—Held: under a notice of action against the magistrate for imprisoning plff. in the lock-up, plff. might give evidence of the circumstances under which he was taken into custody on the Sunday, & of what took place before the magistrate on the Tuesday; but he could not give evidence of a declaration made a month before by one of the constables.—EDWARDS v. Pltf. called witnesses in reply, & a witness deposed that R. had, on a sale of the product subsequent to that of which deft. had given evidence & subsequent to pltf.'s patent, stated that the article was new, & that he wished it to be kept secret:—Held: the evidence was inadmissible.—HYDE v. PALMER (1863), 3 B. & S. 657; 1 New Rep. 523; 32 L. 336. Letter by seller to agent at time of sale—Question whether purchaser treated as principal or agent.]—In trover for goods, the question was whether pltfs. sold the goods to A. on his own account (through whom deft. claimed) or to A. as agent for G. & Co., who, however, never authorised the purchase. At the time of the bargain A. referred pltfs. to B. for inquiry as to the responsibility of G. & Co., pltfs. alleging that the reference was required & given as to their responsibility as buyers, deft. alleging that it was merely as to their responsibility as shippers on behalf of A. Pltfs. wrote to their agent as follows: "We wish you to call & see B. & inquire as to the trustworthiness of G. & Co., & also of A. who is making a rather large purchase of goods for the above party, & who refers us to B. Write by return." An answer was received, but not in evidence:—Held: the letter was admissible as evidence for pltfs. on the ground that it was part of the res gestæ, & they were entitled to have the whole of it read & submitted to the consideration of the jury.—MILNE v. LEISLER (1862), 7 H. & N. 786; 31 L. g. — Contents of letter.]—Pltf. put in evidence the contents of a letter sent by him to his son enclosing a money order, & containing instructions as to the disposition to be made of the money. The letter being lost:—Held: its contents were properly received in evidence as explaining the act of sending the order, the letter forming a part of the act.—CLOWSER v. SAMUEL (1873), 2 Pug. 58.—CAN.

h. — Newspaper article.]—In libel for two articles which were printed in deft.'s newspaper reflecting upon the character & conduct of pltf.:—Held: an article in another newspaper, published before the first of the alleged libels, purporting to be an account of an interview with pltf. in which he made an attack upon deft.'s newspaper by its name, & a letter signed by pltf., published in two newspapers before the second of the alleged libels, in which deft.'s newspaper & the editor thereof—not deft. himself—were referred to in abusive language, were admissible in evidence upon the part of deft., in mitigation of damages.—STIRTON v. GUMMER (1899), 20 C. Pleas non assumpsit, & that deft. did not accept the stock from plff. At the trial it appeared that P., a stockbroker, had applied to plff., a stock jobber, for the purchase of stock to the amount of £5,000 for deft. Plff., not having any stock of his own, applied to W., who agreed to transfer, & did accordingly transfer, stock standing in his name to deft. Evidence was given that it was the usage on the Stock Exchange to give credit to the broker, even although the principal was disclosed; though credit is sometimes given to the principal & his cheque taken, where the broker's credit is not thought sufficient. A witness having been called to prove on the part of plff., that, immediately after the transfer had taken place, plff. requested T. to give him the cheque of his principal:—Held: this evidence was admissible, not as amounting to an admission, but as part of the res gestæ.—MORTIMER v. There was no mention in the contract of any sample, but at the time the contract was made specimens of the goods were exhibited to the purchasers:—Held: the evidence of the exhibitions of the specimens was admissible to show the kind of things denoted by the words of description used by the parties. Semble: such evidence would only be admissible in a case where the specimen was fraudulently exhibited to deceive the purchaser, & the buyer had been induced to buy goods which turned out to be of greatly inferior quality & value.—SHARP v. The assignee having dealt with the property after her death, was sued by one of her creditors as exor. de son tort:—Held: the list was evidence as part of the transaction of the assignment in order to establish the bona fides of it, & so justify deft.'s intermeddling.—LEWIS v. In an action against the sheriff for false return of nulla bona to this writ:—Held: evidence that B. & his wife spoke of these shares as their own was inadmissible in this action against the sheriff, even as prima facie evidence of ownership.—ROBINSON v. The bill was drawn by her son-in-law upon & accepted by bkpt., & was endorsed blank by the drawer after the date of the sequestration. Claimant was met by the defence of no value received. The drawer admitted that in taking bkpt.'s acceptance he had acted on behalf & in the interest of claimant:—Held: she was entitled, as against the trustee on bkpt.'s estate, to prove by parole evidence that the drawer, in drawing the bill, had acted as a negotiorum gestor or volunteer agent for her, & that the sum in the bill was truly due to her in respect of a loan granted by her to bkpt.—CROSBIE v. 343 i. General rule.]—When the existence of a fact otherwise irrelevant, tends to prove the existence of another fact relevant to the case, the existence of the first fact is also relevant; & the evidence of what would otherwise be only res inter alios acta may be admishaving a direct relation to the principal question in dispute & evidence relating to collateral facts, which will, if established, tend to elucidate that question. It is the right of the party tendering it to have evidence of the former kind admitted, irrespective of its amount or weight, these remaining for consideration when his case is closed; but I am not prepared to hold that he has the same absolute right when he tenders evidence of facts collateral to the main issue. In order to entitle him to give such evidence, he must, in the first instance, satisfy the ct. that the collateral fact which he proposes to prove will, when established, be capable of affording a reasonable presumption or inference as to the matter in dispute; & I am disposed to hold that he is also bound to satisfy the ct. that the evidence which he is prepared to adduce will be reasonably conclusive, & will not raise a difficult & doubtful controversy of precisely the same kind as that which the jury have to determine (LORD WATSON).—METROPOLITAN ASYLUM DISTRICT MANAGERS v. It appears to me that these are all so many mercantile facts connected with the payment & that as such they might be given in evidence & that it was not necessary to give the contents of the receipt (KEATING, J.).—CARMARTHEN & CARDIGAN RY. t. Where efficacy of treatment in question—Evidence of failure in other cases.—[In an action to recover payment for work done under a contract to render harmless the effluent from defts.' wool-scouring works. Experts gave evidence as to the efficacy of plffs.' treatment & partly based their opinions on its alleged success at other works, where the conditions were not the same as at defts.' works:—Held: evidence to show the failure of the system at the other works was admissible in rebuttal of the opinions.—NEILSON v. HAIGH (HENRY) & SON (1916), 16 S. R. N. S. W. 396.—AUS.

u. Where paternity in question—Resemblance.—[Evidence of the resemblance of the child to the father, if relevant to the issue is admissible, but can only become relevant after a sufficient foundation has been laid to raise suspicion.—DOE d. MARK v. MARK (1853), 3 C. P. 36.—CAN.

Where honesty of claim in question—Evidence to show fraud.—[Plff. sued for the loss of his trunk, which he alleged contained several valuable papers, & among them the lease of a farm from his father to himself. Defts. resisted his claim as fraudulent, denying that they had ever received the trunk, & gave strong evidence to support their defence. They then offered to prove, as tending further to show the dishonesty of the claim, that this farm had been the subject of a suit in Chancery, in which it was decreed that plff.'s father held

345. Mere similarity alone insufficient.—[Evidence of events similar to the one under inquiry on account of their general similarity, is not admissible. Where ownership of land in question—Receipt of rent by lessor of plaintiff.—(1) In ejectment to recover garden ground, it was proved for plff. that deft. had been let into possession of the garden by M., who had paid rent to the lessor of plff. Deft.'s case was, that M. had rented a part of his garden of the lessor of plff., & that that had been given up, & that deft. had the residue of the garden, which was now in dispute, devised to him by his father's will in the year 1791. The lessor of plff. proposed to give evidence in reply, to show that, from the year 1791, the lessor of plff., &

e. Where reason for indorsement in question—Evidence of indebtedness.—K., the maker, & F., the indorser, of a promissory note were sued upon it, & F. denied his indorsement. At the trial an indenture of conveyance of land from K. to F. was put in without objection, & K. testified that it was given to secure F. against his indorsement of certain notes of which the one sued on was a renewal. There was nothing in the indenture to show that it was given for anything but the expressed consideration of $1,500, & it was not pretended that such consideration was paid.—Held : it was competent for F. to show what the indenture was given for, that it was not given to secure him against such indorsement; & evidence of the existence of an indebtedness from K. to F. upon an open account was receivable to support the proof that it was given to secure such indebtedness.—*BANK OF HAMILTON v. 351. ——Pltf. was appointed engineer to a railway co. at a meeting of the provisional committee. Deft. had previously agreed to join that committee & had forwarded applications for shares, but whether before or after the meeting was uncertain. An individual answering to deft.'s name was present at the meeting & visited the office of the co. :—Held : there was no evidence to go to the jury of deft.'s identity with that individual.—GILES v. CORNFOT (1847), 2 Car. & Kir. 653, N. P.

352. — Question for judge.—A person, on being sent by deft., an indorser of a bill of exchange, to pltf., the indorsee, to inquire as to the solvency of B., a prior indorser, went to pltf.'s residence; & on the street door being opened, a person in a dressing-gown, whom he had never seen before or since, asked him what his business was :—Held : not sufficient evidence of identity to let in evidence of the conversation.

It is a question for the judge, & not a point for the consideration of the jury, whether the evidence of identity is sufficient in such case.—CORFIELD v. PARSONS (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 730; 3 Tyr. 806; 2 L. J. Ex. 262; 149 E. R. 593.

353. Declaration by person interviewed—Prima facie evidence.—If a carman take goods to the house of L., not knowing him, & ask for Mr. L. of a person whom he finds in the house, & that person says, "I am Mr. L.," this is prima facie evidence that he was L.—*WILTON v. PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 4.—A.

k. Identity of name.—Pltf. described himself in the declaration "J. Kerriken, otherwise called J. Carrigan," & in support of the action produced an acknowledgment, signed by deft., of a balance due from him to J. Kerriken.—Held : it was necessary for pltf. to identify himself with the party mentioned in the acknowledgment & without proof that the J. Kerriken there mentioned was also called J. Carrigan, the action could not be

354. —[.]—In an action against S. it was proved that a witness went to a tavern & asked a waiter if S. was there; & on a person coming out to the witness, the latter asked him who he was, & he said his name was S. The witness had not known deft. before, & had never seen him since:—Held: this was some proof that this person was S. & the conversation between the witness & this person was receivable in evidence.—REYNOLDS v. STAINES (1849), 2 Car. & Kir. 745, N. P.

355. Identification with person subsequently seen.—Person in court.]—To prove that A. & B. took a distress, a witness was called, who stated that he saw two persons, whom he did not then know, take the distress, & that he had since learnt that their names were A. & B., & that he had seen A. in ct. Another witness, who knew A., proved that A. had been in ct.:—Held: this was evidence to go to the jury as to A., but not as to B., & as to B. the evidence was not sufficient.—BYE v. BOWER (1841), Car. & M. 262.

356. —[.]—An action being brought against W. H. for negligently navigating a vessel, & the circumstances under which the collision took place having been proved, it was objected that no evidence had been given that deft. was the pilot in charge of the vessel, whereupon plff.'s counsel called out, "Mr. H.!" upon which a person in ct. answered "here"; & said, "I am the pilot." It was proved by one of the witnesses who had gone on board the vessel at the time of the accident, that he had seen that person then acting as pilot:—Held: this was sufficient evidence of the identity of deft. with the pilot.—SMITH v. HENDERSON (1842), 9 M. & W. 798; 11 L. J. Ex. 315; 152 E. R. 338.

357. Identity of name.—Copy of bill & answer.]—Upon a plea of plene administravit, plff., in order to show assets, gave in evidence a copy of a bill, & answer, purporting to be an answer by a person of the same time, & sustaining the same character as deft.:—Held: the copy was admissible, & on the face of it there was presumptive evidence of identity; deft. not having shown any circumstances to rebut the presumption.—*HENNELL v. m. —[.]—The patent from the Crown was to F. Weis, & the deed to L. C. was signed by F. Weist as a marksman. There was no direct evidence of the identity of Weis & Weist. It was not shown there was any other F. Weis except the person who conveyed as F. Weist. Several uncles & other relatives were called, but no other witness was examined as to his heirship:—Held: the identity of Weis & Weist who made the deed to L. C. was sufficiently proved.—WALLBRIDGE v. JONES (1873), 33 U. C. R. 613.—CAN.

n. —[.]—The affidavits leading to an order for ca. re. must show that there is a debt due from deft. to plff. It is not sufficient to show that there is a debt due from deft. to one who bears the same name as plff.—WEHRFRITZ v. RUSSELL & SULLIVAN (1902), 9 B. C. R. 79.—CAN.

o. —[.]—The production on the trial by plff.'s solr. of a grant from the Crown to a person of the same name as the person from whom plff. claims the property granted as heir & devisee of the grantee, is sufficient evidence of the identity of plff.'s predecessor in title with the grantee to sustain a verdict for plff. in an action for the land.—*SIMPSON v. 358. —[.]—In an action against three defts., as partners, the office copy of an answer to a bill in Chancery, filed by one against the others, is admissible evidence, without producing the original, in order to establish the partnership; & to prove the identity of defts., the clerk of their solr. is a competent witness to that fact, though he knows nothing of defts. but from his intercourse with them professionally in the conduct of the suit in Chancery.—STUDDY v. DOWNES (1830), 4 C. & P. 330; 1 Mood. & R. 13, N. P.

360. —[Apothecary's licence.]—In an action by an apothecary for medicines & attendance, plffs. proved that he had acted as such, & produced a licence from the Apothecaries Co., to a person bearing the same Christian & surname with himself, the seal of which was proved to be genuine:—Held: this was sufficient evidence for the jury of his being the party to whom the licence had been granted.—SIMPSON v. DISMORE (1842), 9 M. & W. 47; 11 L. J. Ex. 137; 5 Jur. 1012; 152 E. R. 21.

362. —[Onus of proof.]—It is not necessary to prove strictly the identity of deft. with a person of the same name, concerning whom a witness gives evidence. The similarity of the names is sufficient to put deft. to the proof that he is not the person spoken of. HAMBER v. ROBERTS (1849), 7 C. B. 861; 18 L. J. C. P. 250; 137 E. R. 341.

SUB-SECT. 5.—FACTS SHOWING STATE OF MIND.

A. Intention or Motive.

(a) In General.

370. Intention a question of fact.—A misstatement of the intention of deft. in doing a debted to the consignee of the judgment in three bonds, but which bonds were different in amount & in date from the bond on which the judgment was entered, & deft. rejoined that there was no acknowledgment:—Held: parol evidence was admissible to show that one of the bonds mentioned in the sched. was identical with the bond on which judgment had been obtained.—HANAN v. POWER (1815), 8 L. L. R. 505.—IR.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 4. B.

b. Legatee—Party exactly described in writ.—Where there is an ambiguity as to the identity of the party to whom a testator has bequeathed a legacy, the fact that the description of one only of the claimants corresponds exactly to the description of the legatee given by testator does not per se conclude the question in favour of that claimant, & does not preclude inquiry into the question whether another claimant, whose description does not exactly correspond, may not be the legatee intended by testator; but there is a strong presumption in favour of the party exactly described which cannot be overcome except by cogent positive evidence.—NASMYTH'S TRUSTEES v. NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO CHILDREN, [1914] S. C. (H. L.) 76.—SCOT.

c. Parties named in marriage register—Proof alimunde required to identify.—A certified copy of the duplicate original register of a marriage is good evidence of the marriage in an action for restitution of conjugal rights, but proof alimunde is required to identify the parties to the proceedings before the ct. as the persons named in the register. RYKIE v. RYKIE (1868), Buch. 114.—S. AF.

d. Party named in miner's right.—It is not necessary that a miner's right should bear the full name of the holder. It is only a question of proof of identity between the person named in the right & claimant of the right.—HOMEWARD BOUND GOLD MINING Co. (No LIABILITY) v. McPHERSON (1896), 17 N. S. W. Eq. 281.—AUS.

e. Maker of promissory note.—In an action by the indorsee of a promissory note against the maker, the handwriting of the attesting witness to the maker's signature, together with the handwriting of the indorser, were proved, but no evidence was given to identify deft. with the person named in the note, & the judge at the trial, for want of such evidence, nonsuited pltf. On motion for a new trial:—Held: the evidence given at the trial was sufficient, & accordingly a new trial was granted.—McCULLOUGH v. SHELLES (1847), 3 Kerr. 391.—CAN.

f. Party named in writ.—If the party who has been served with process & appeared to defend the action bears the same name as the party proved to be liable, pltf. is entitled to a verdict unless the party so served, etc., shows that he is not the proper deft.—

particular act may be a misstatement of fact, & if pltf. was misled by it, an action of deceit may be founded on it.—EDGINGTON v. FITZMAURICE (1885), 29 Ch. D. 459; 55 L. J. Ch. 650; 53 L. T. 369; 50 J. P. 52; 33 W. R. 911; 1 T. L. R. 326, C. A.

371. How proved—Conduct before & after given time.—Acts, events & declarations subsequent to the time at which a question of domicile arises are admissible in evidence upon that question when they indicate what the intention was at the given time.

I have always understood the law to be, that in order to determine a person's intention at a given time, you may regard not only conduct & acts before & at the time, but also conduct & acts after the time, assigning to such conduct & acts their relative & proper weight & cogency (LOPES, L.J.).—*Re GROVE, VAUCHER v. 372. Act unlawful per se—Declaration in party's own favour.—Where on the receipt of a notice to quit to two joint tenants, one of whom only actually occupied the land, the other said that he had nothing to do with the land:—Held: this statement was not admissible to show that a holding over after the expiration of the notice, was not wilful on the part of the latter.

b. Identity of business firm.—Deft. was described in the declaration as the general partner of the firm of D. B. & Co., & evidence was given that the steamer was understood to be owned by D. k.—E., representing himself as acting for a firm of M. K. & Co. in Toronto, contracted with pltf. at St. J. for the sale of goods, & informed him that the firm was composed of two defts. (stating their names). Pltf. then commenced a correspondence with the firm respecting the goods, & received replies in the firm name, written on paper at the head of which was printed the firm name, & the names of two defts., as stated to pltf. by E.:—Held: it would be presumed that the letters sent to pltf. in answer to his letters were written by defts., & were evidence that they composed the firm of M. K. & Co.—GILBERT v. McDONALD (1889), 28 N. B. R. 102.—CAN.

Annotation:—Mentd. Roberts v. Tucker (1851), 15 Jur. 987.

375. — Application for mandamus.]—The right conferred upon a shareholder of a statutory company by its special Act, incorporating for this purpose Companies Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 16), to have supplied to him a copy of the shareholders' address book is a private right incidental to his property & is a right for the enforcement of which an action for mandamus under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), & Ord. 53, lies; & in such an action the ct. is not bound by the rules which govern the Ct. of K. B. in an application for the prerogative writ of mandamus on the ground that the motives of pltf. in asking for it were improper; & consequently any evidence as to the motives of pltf. is in such an action irrelevant & inadmissible.—DAVIES v. GAS LIGHT & COKE CO., [1909] 1 Ch. 708; 78 L. J. Ch. 445; 100 L. T. 553; 25 T. L. R. 428; 53 Sol. Jo. 399; 16 Mans. 147, C. A.

(c) When in Issue.

376. In connection with what matters—Payment into court—Evidence to show quo animo.]—Where money has been paid into ct., short of pltf.'s demand, & it is taken out of ct., it is admissible evidence to show quo animo it was done; & it is not to be taken as an admission that the rest of the demand was unfounded.—HILDYARD v. BLOWERS (1803), 5 Esp. 69, N. P.

377. — Bankruptcy—Whether purchases constitute trading.]—A party engaged in the Greenland whale fishery purchases oil in three instances; it is for the jury to decide whether these dealings constituted him a trader within the meaning of the statute [1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 2].

A declaration by the party of his object in buying oil is admissible evidence to prove his intention.—GALE v. HALFKNIGHT (1821), 3 Stark. 56, N. P.

378. — On plea of mutual mistake.]—In an action on a promissory note made by defts. as directors of an insurance co., where it was sought to make them personally liable, evidence was received, under an equitable plea of mutual mistake as to the form of the note, of the intention with which the note was given on the one side & taken on the other.—CORTAULD v. 379. — Possession of house—Intention to steal fixtures—Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96).]

(1) Where a person enters into an agreement for the lease of a house with the fraudulent intention of stealing the fixtures on getting into possession, where in fact he steals the fixtures on entering into possession, he is guilty of larceny under above Act, s. 31.

(2) If the question put was a proper question to be left to the jury, the evidence given was admissible for the purpose of showing the intention with which applt. got possession of the houses (PICKFORD, J.).—R. v. RICHARDS, [1911] 1 K. B. 260; 80 L. J. K. B. 174; 104 L. T. 48; 75 J. P. 144; 22 Cox, C. C. 372; 6 Cr. App. Rep. 21, C. C. A.

— Sale of goods—Whether property passes.]—See SALE OF GOODS.

380. — Refusal to deliver—On ground of alleged slander.]—If A. has sold goods to B., & would not deliver them without payment, & it be alleged in a declaration for words by B. against C., that this non-delivery was special damage resulting from words spoken by C. to A., the counsel of C. may ask A. on the trial of the action for words whether he did not refuse to deliver the goods from what other persons said of B., & what those persons did say.

I think it is admissible in this way—you put it that the witness would not deliver the barley because of something deft. said. I think, to show that that was not so, the other side may ask the witness as to any other causes why he did not deliver the barley, & that he may state what those causes were (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—KING v. 383. — Correspondence between parties — Intention to preserve charge.]—After a decree in a foreclosure suit to which both the mtgor. & the first & second mtgees. were parties, pltf., first mtgee., purchased the equity of redemption from the trustee in bkpcy. of the mtgor. & by deed of assignment in consideration of £1,380, the sum due on first mtge. retained by the first mtgee. in full satisfaction of his debt & of £20 paid to the trustee, making the purchase-money £1,400, the trustee assigned the mtgd. property to the first mtgee. subject to the claim of the second mtgee. The value of the mtgd. property did not exceed £1,380. The second mtgee. contended that the effect of this purchase was to extinguish the first mtgo. debt & to let in his own charge as a first incumbrance. A correspondence took place between the solrs. of the first mtgee. & the trustee at the time of the purchase:—Held: the question being one of intention, a correspondence between the solrs. of the first mtgee. & the trustee in bkpcy. at the time of the purchase was admissible in evidence, on the question whether it was intended to keep the first mtge. alive.—*ADAMS v. 386. For what purposes admissible — To disprove alleged collusion between plaintiff & alleged agent.]—A blank acceptance is not in itself evidence of an authority to the party to whom it is given to borrow the amount on the credit & behalf of the acceptor, even although it is admitted on the part of the acceptor that the money to be raised on the security of the bill was to be lent to the acceptor; & however the latter may be liable on the bill at the suit of an honest holder, the question on a claim for money lent by him to the acceptor, will be, whether the money was received by any one as the authorised agent of the acceptor in that behalf. Letters from the acceptor to the drawer, the alleged agent, shown to the lender before he advanced the money, admissible in evidence on behalf of the latter, & letters from the alleged agent to the acceptor, admissible on behalf of the acceptor, to disprove the alleged agency. The case for deft. being collusion between the alleged agent & pltf., pltf. allowed to give evidence as to his not knowing the party's address, until his attorney discovered it, to subpoena her.—*KING v. The agent & the traffic manager of defts. had been present at parties at a reference where acts of this sort were proved in their hearing:—Held: evidence of their having been so present was properly admissible as part of the proof that defts. were informed & knew of the habits & practices of the mercantile houses & knowingly charged pltf. a higher rate than was demanded of other persons for the carriage of like packed parcels of goods carried under the like circumstances.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 394. — Whether evidence of usage sufficient.]—Where a custom of trade is relied upon to prevent property passing to the trustee of a bkpt. under Bkpty. Act, 1869 (c. 71), s. 15 (5), the alleged custom must be proved to have existed so long & to have been so extensively acted upon that the ordinary creditors of the bkpt. in his trade may be reasonably presumed to have known it.

The trustee under the bkpty. of an hotel-keeper claimed the furniture in the hotel as being in the order & disposition of the bkpt. as reputed owner. The furniture had been supplied shortly before the bkpty. under an agreement that it should be paid for by instalments & should remain the property of the vendors until the last instalment had been paid, & meanwhile should only be hired by the bkpt.

The vendors alleged such a notorious custom of hiring furniture as would prevent the doctrine of reputed ownership applying, & adduced the evidence of upholsterers to that effect. The witnesses were not cross-examined & no counter-evidence was adduced:—Held: (1) the existence of the alleged custom had not been so often proved in the Ct. of Bkpty. that the ct. ought to take judicial notice of it; (2) the evidence in this particular case was defective because it only prove the general practice of furniture dealers in supplying goods under such an agreement as the present, & did not sufficiently prove that the ordinary creditors of an hotel-keeper were likely to know it.—Re MATTHEWS, Ex p. 395. — Conditions incorporated in deposit note.]—Deft. was a keeper of a repository for the sale on commission of horses & carriages. Pltf. delivered to him a waggonette to be sold, & took from him a printed form which contained a receipt for the waggonette, followed by the words, "subject to the conditions as exhibited upon the premises." By one of the conditions exhibited upon the premises deft. had power to sell any property sent to their repository which remained over one month, unless all expenses were previously paid. Pltf. did not read this receipt but put it in his pocket without noticing it. Deft. having sold the waggonette in the exercise of the power of sale in the conditions, pltf. brought an action party charged deft. with notice of his title, & evidence was adduced of several conversations in which notice was distinctly proved to have been given to deft.:—Held: those conversations were admissible in evidence, although not particularly mentioned in the bill, as the fact of notice, & not any particular conversation, was the point in issue.—BARNHART v. PATTERSON (1850), 1 Gr. 459.—CAN.

to recover its value, & at the trial the jury, having been directed that the question was whether deft. had or had not given pltf. reasonable notice of the conditions, found a verdict for him:—Held: the jury had been misdirected, for the condition was not unreasonable, & having regard to the circumstances, there was nothing to take the case out of the general rule that if a document in a common form is delivered by one of two contracting parties to & accepted without objection by the other, it is binding upon him, whether he informs himself of its contents or not.—*WATKINS v. 396. — Label on goods sold.]—On an information before justices, under Sale of Food & Drugs Act, 1875 (c. 63), s. 6, for selling an article of food not of the nature, substance, & quality demanded, defts. relied on a written warranty from their vendor. The article demanded was blackberry jelly, & there was a label on the jar in which it was sold with the words, "Finest Quality Blackberry Jelly. Prepared from the choicest fruit of the season & fruit juice." The analyst certified that the sample contained at least 2 per cent. of apple pulp, & he stated in evidence that he believed that the sample consisted of two-thirds apple & one-third blackberry. Evidence was given for defts. that the jelly was sold as it was purchased, & that they had no reason to believe it to be otherwise than as demanded. The justices, however found that defts. were aware that the contents of the jar were not of the nature, substance, & quality demanded, & that they had reason to believe that the article was otherwise than as demanded when they sold it:—Held: except for the label there was no evidence of defts.' knowledge of the contents of the jar, & the label was not sufficient evidence to support the finding of the justices that defts. had reason to believe that article was otherwise than as demanded.—*BLAYDON CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY v. 397. — Condition on sold note.]—A traveller for defts. saw pltf., a builder, & showed him a specification of various kinds of timber which defts. had on offer for sale. Pltf. marked some items that he wished to buy, & the traveller said he might have them. Next day the traveller delivered to pltf. a sold note stating the transaction, but bearing in small print along one side the words: "Goods are sold subject to their being on hand & at liberty when the order reaches the head office." Pltf. denied that he ever saw this condition, & there was evidence as to the difficulty of reading it. Some of the items of timber not having been delivered, pltf. sued for damages for breach of the oral agreement in the county ct., & defts. relied in defence on the condition, or, in the alternative, on a custom of the trade corresponding to the condition. The county ct. judge gave judgment in favour of pltf., holding, that the alleged custom was not proved, & secondly, that pltf. never saw the condition, & that an ordinary business man acting with ordinary care might be excused for not doing so:—Held: (1) there was evidence to support the county ct. judge's finding; (2) as the sold note contained a condition not part of the original verbal contract & not assented to by pltf., it was not a proper memorandum in writing of the agreement between the parties, pltf. was entitled to succeed on the oral contract, the defence that there was no sufficient memorandum in writing of the agreement not having been pleaded.—*ROE v. In order to show that these transactions were fictitious, certain evidence was adduced [for the defence] & a question was asked, whether C. had not made a claim to these goods after the bkpcy:—Held: the question could properly be asked, as the claim was an act done by one of the parties to the alleged fraud.—*FORD v. In order to establish fraud in the transfer, declarations & admissions by B., both before & after the transfer, as to the general state of his business & the value of the property transferred, were admissible in evidence on the part of deft.—LAWTON v. WHARTON (1822), 10 Price, 138; 147 E. R. 268.

410. — Publication of advertisements.]

—Where deft. was charged with a fraudulent design to induce pltf. to build some houses upon the credit of his son, evidence was given that deft. had represented that he & his son were entitled to receive some money from America, & that the "Stamford Mercury" contained an advertisement, which required them to go to a certain place to receive the legacy:—Held: a copy of the "Stamford Mercury" of a date which corresponded with the time when the representations were made, & which contained such an advertisement was receivable in evidence.—LUCAS v. GODWIN (1837), 3 Bing. N. C. 737; 3 Hodg. 114; 4 Scott, 502; 6 L. J. C. P. 205; 132 E. R. 595.

411. Fraudulent intention—As evidence of deceit.]—It is said in this case that defts. intended to deceive, not that the goods were calculated even innocently to deceive, but that there was a fraudulent intention on the part of defts. That is a material fact which would be weighed duly & to which no doubt great weight would be attached by any ct. if it were established, because no ct. would be astute when they discovered an intention to deceive, in coming to the conclusion that a dishonest deft. had been unsuccessful in his fraudulent design. When once you establish the intent to deceive, it is only a short step to proving that the intent has been successful, but still it is a step, even though a short step. To any such charge there must be, however, two conditions. The first is that it ought to be pleaded explicitly so as to give deft. an opportunity of rebutting the accusation of intent. The second is that it must

It certainly startled an English lawyer that evidence should have been admitted at such length of the previous assaults in 1798 & 1802, to which the judgment had no relation, & at which all the parties were not present. But such evidence might have been admitted to show malice & premeditation in G., the only appt. present at the former assaults (LORD ELDON, C.).—MACDONELL v. MACDONALD (1813), 2 Dow, 66; 3 E. 415. —Distinguished from declarations as to cause of feeling—Accident to workman.]—A workman became ill & died a week afterwards. His wife & another man swore that he told them that his illness was caused by an accident in his employment. In spite of objections the county ct. judge admitted these statements & made an award in favour of the widow. The employers appealed on the ground that there was no evidence that there had been an "accident arising out of . . . the man's employment" beyond deceased's own statements, which they contended were improperly admitted as evidence.—Held: statements made in the absence of his employer, by a deceased man, as to his bodily or mental feelings are admissible, but those made as to the cause of his illness are not admissible in evidence.—GILBEY v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1910), 102 L. T. 202; 3 B. W. C. C. 135, C. A.

416. — — —.]—Upon a claim for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), it appeared that on Oct. 18 a workman employed by a farmer as engine-driver was driving the engine of his master's threshing machine while threshing wheat in a field. It was suggested that while so employed he was stung in the leg by a wasp. There was evidence that his fellow workmen had seen a few wasps close to the engine & that there were none about elsewhere. The workman did not complain of being stung at the time. On the next & the following days he complained of being drowsy & having pain in his leg, & that he was unfit for work, but he continued to work until Oct. 27, when he came home very ill. The doctor saw him on Oct. 28 & 29, & found him suffering from blood poisoning. On the latter day the workman made a statement to the doctor, in the presence of his wife, that his bad leg was caused by the sting of a wasp on Oct. 18. He died on Nov. 1. His widow claimed compensation:—Held: the statement of the deceased workman of the cause of his illness was not admissible.—AMYS v. BARTON, [1912] 1 K. B. 40; 81 L. J. K. B. 65; 105 L. At the trial pltf. sought to attack one of these deeds on the ground that it was without consideration & a fraud on third parties:—Held: pltf. should have replied, alleging the fraud, & not having so pleaded could not adduce it in evidence.—KINNEAR v. HARRISON (1870), 8 N. S. R. 78.—CAN.

417. ———.]—Deceased workman was employed as a navvy fireman by applt., & part of his duty was to clean a hurricane lamp. On Dec. 5, 1923, he started work as usual at 6.30 a.m., & according to the evidence given by M., a fellow workman, while at breakfast, at 8.30, he showed M. a finger of his right hand on which there was a nick of skin which had been cleaned, the rest of his hand being very dirty & oily. Thereupon M. went & looked at the lamp, & found that part of the glass was broken & had a sharp edge. Septic poisoning was set up, & on Dec. 7 deceased did not go to his work, & died on Dec. 22. An inquest was held on Dec. 24, at which applt. were represented by a solr. Statutory notice of the accident was not given until after the death of deceased. At the hearing of the application by the widow for compensation, a doctor, called on her behalf, said on cross-examination, "I asked deceased how he got cut, he told me he had cut himself on his bicycle lamp." The county ct. judge held that this statement was inadmissible, & that the fair inference from the evidence was that the cut on the finger was caused by the broken hurricane lamp which deceased was cleaning, & that the accident arose out of, & in the course of, the employment. Further, he held that no prejudice had been caused to the employers by want of notice, & that there was reasonable cause for its absence, & he made an award:—Held: (1) the evidence of the doctor, elicited on cross-examination, which related to the cause of the accident, was inadmissible; (2) there was sufficient evidence to justify the finding that applt. had discharged the onus of showing that the employers had not been prejudiced by want of notice.—*SHARP v. 420. Habit of teasing horses—Probable cause of death by kick of horse.]—Deceased workman, who was employed as a stable boy by resps., was found in their stable in a dying condition suffering from a kick behind the ear from one of their horses. There was no direct evidence as to how the accident happened. There was evidence that when the boy was found he was clutching in his hand a halter; that at the time when the accident happened the boy had nothing to do with the halter & had nothing to do in the stable; & that the horse was a quiet horse. There was evidence that the foreman of the resps.' yard had some time previously had occasion to speak to the boy about hitting the horses with a halter & teasing them. The county ct. judge held that the boy must have done something to the horse, which was a quiet one, to make it kick out, & that at the time of the accident the boy's duties in the stable were over, & accordingly that the accident did not arise out of his employment:—Held: evidence as to the previous habits of the boy with regard to hitting & teasing the horses was admissible.

Wherever an inquiry has to be made into the cause of death of a person, & there being no direct evidence, recourse must be had to circumstantial evidence any evidence as to the habits & ordinary doings of deceased which may contribute to the circumstances by throwing light upon the probable cause of death is admissible, even in the case of a prosecution for murder (PHILLIMORE, L.J.).—*JOY v. SUB-SECT. 8.—SIMILAR FACTS.

A. To prove Occurrence or Existence of Main Fact.

421. General rule.]—(1) The rule as to confining the evidence to that which is relevant & pertinent to the issue, is one of great importance, not only as regards the particular case, but also with reference to saving the time of the ct., & preventing the minds of the jury from being drawn away from the real point they have to decide (WILLES, J.).

(2) Does the fact of a person having once or many times in his life done a particular act in a particular way make it more probable that he has done the same thing in the same way upon another & different occasion? To admit such speculative evidence would be fraught with great danger. Where, indeed, the question is one of guilty knowledge, as in the case of a charge of uttering base coin or forged notes, such evidence is received as tending to establish a necessary ingredient in the crime. But I am not aware of any other instance. If such evidence was held admissible, it would be difficult to say that deft. might not in any case where the question was whether or not there had been a sale of goods on credit, call witnesses to prove that pltf. had dealt with other persons upon a certain credit; or, in an action for an assault, that pltf. might not give evidence of former assaults committed by deft. upon other persons or upon other persons of a particular class, for the purpose of showing that he was a quarrelsome individual, & therefore that it was highly probable that the particular charge of assault was well founded. The extent to which this sort of thing might be carried is inconceivable. The only ground upon which it could at all be suggested that such an inquiry could be permitted on cross-examination, would be, that it was a means of testing the credit of the witness or the accuracy of his memory. But I doubt even that (WILLES, J.).—HOLLINGHAM v. HEAD (1858), 4 C. B. N. S. 388; 27 L. J. C. P. 241; 4 Jur. N. S.

434. Liability for work & labour—Orders given for similar work.—On the trial of an action by ptlf. against deft. for work done & materials supplied to certain houses on the orders of a third person, deft. denying that he is the owner of the houses or the real principal, evidence is admissible that other persons had received orders from deft. to do work at the same houses, without showing that ptlf. knew of these orders at the time he did his work.—WOODWARD v. BUCHANAN (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 285; 39 L. J. Q. B. 71; 22 L. T. 123.

435. Existence of nuisance—Acknowledgment of nuisance caused elsewhere.—A bond given by deft. acknowledging himself to be guilty of a nuisance, is good evidence on the trial of an indictment for a nuisance, in carrying on the same business in another place.—R. v. NEVILLE (1791), Peake, 125, N. P.

Annotation.—N.F. R. v. Fairie (1857), 8 E. & B. 486.

436. Previous conviction of nuisance at same place.—On an indictment for a nuisance in carrying on an offensive trade, a conviction of deft. before justices for an offence against 16 & 17 Vict. c. 128, s. 1, committed at the same place & in the course of the same trade, but anterior to the period comprised in the indictment, was received in evidence:—Held: (1) it was improperly received, the offence of which deft. was convicted not necessarily being a nuisance; (2) even if it had been a conviction for an offence precisely similar to that charged against deft., except that it was anterior in time, it would not have been admissible.—R. v. FAIRIE (1857), 8 E. & B. 486; 30 L. T. O. S. 131; 4 Jur. N. S. 300; 6 W. R. 56; 8 Cox. C. C. 66; 120 E. R. 181.

m. Prior & subsequent facts distinguished.—In an action against a bank for negligence in cashing a cheque, evidence of the subsequent cashing of similar cheques, adduced for the purpose of showing negligence, was excluded. Evidence of prior cashing of similar cheques was admitted.—R. v. ROYAL BANK OF CANADA (1920), 1 W. W. R. 198; 50 D. L. R. 293; 30 Man. L. R. 104.—CAN.

n. a. In criminal proceedings.]—On the trial of a prisoner charged with a criminal act, evidence of the commission by him of other acts of a like character, is receivable to show intent.—R. v. McBRINKY (1897), 29 N. S. R. 327.—CAN.

p. — Fraudulent conversion.]—Accused received from L. two cheques to be paid to a co. on account of shares therein which L. desired to purchase. Accused deposited the cheques in a bank to his own credit, subsequently using most of the proceeds, & never remitted the moneys to the co. He was charged with fraudulent conversion under Criminal Code, s. 355 (1). He was convicted, & the conviction sustained on appeal. The question on appeal was whether accused was prejudiced at the trial by misdirection or nondirection to the jury or wrongful admission of evidence. As to admission of evidence as to retention by accused of moneys received from other appts. for shares.—Held: properly admitted as evidence of similar acts to show accused's state of mind, brought out in his cross-examination.—R. v. r. To rebut fraud.]—Deft., for the purpose of supporting his plea of fraud & showing his bona fides, had offered, in evidence, a transaction between himself & pltf. similar to the one in issue, but which had occurred about a year previously.—Held: such evidence was admissible, as showing grounds for the removal of deft.'s suspicions, & as a fact from which a reasonable inference might be drawn by the jury, bearing upon the question in issue.—NOVA SCOTIA BANK v. ROBINSON (1896), (1878-1908), 1 Cout. Dig. 556.—CAN.

(c) System.

438. Systematic fraud—Evidence of other persons.]—Where the defence to an action on a contract is that deft. was induced to sign the contract by the fraudulent representation of pltf., & pltf.

438 ii. ———.]—Evidence of other similar representations made by the deft. to persons other than pltf. under similar circumstances & with the object of inducing those persons to act in the same way, is admissible on the question of intent, & to rebut a possible defence of accident or inadvertence.—LAMB v. JOHNSON (1914), 15 S. R. N. S. W. 65.—AUS.

438 iii. ———.]—In an action to set aside a bill of sale of a mineral claim on the ground that it was a forgery by one of defts., evidence was given by pltf. & his witnesses as to matters which, whether material or not, were intended to make the judge give a ready credit to pltf.'s case. For the defence witnesses were allowed to give evidence showing that pltf. & his witnesses, in respect of the same mineral claim, had been parties or privy to a fraudulent transaction involving perjury & conspiracy & tending to show that a like fraudulent scheme was being attempted in this case, & the result was that the judge was so influenced by this evidence that he gave judgment for defts.—Held: the said evidence on behalf of defts. was properly admitted.—D'AVIGNON v. JONES (1902), 9 B. C. R. 359.—CAN.

438 iv. ———.]—To an action on a written agreement signed by deft., for the purchase of a quantity of goods, deft. pleaded that pltf.'s usual course of business was to induce persons to sign contracts of sale on the false representation that said contracts were merely contracts constituting such persons agents of pltf. for the sale of the goods; that deft.'s signature to the contract sued on was obtained by such false & fraudulent representations; that, relying on such representations, defts. signed the contract without reading it, & that as soon as was practising a systematic fraud, evidence is admissible of persons having been deceived in a similar manner.—BARNES v. MERRITT & Co. (1899), 15 T. L. R. 419, C. A.

439. Systematic negligence—Insanitary mode of conducting business—Evidence of other persons affected.]—Pltf. in an action of negligence alleged that he had contracted an infectious disease through the negligence of deft., a barber, in using razors & other appliances in a dirty & insanitary condition. In support of his case he tendered the evidence of two witnesses who deposed that they had contracted a similar disease in the deft.'s shop:—Held: as the negligence alleged was not an isolated act or omission, but was a dangerous practice carried on by deft. the evidence of these witnesses was admissible.—HALES v. KERR, [1908] 2 K. B. 601; 77 L. J. K. B. 870; 99 L. T. 364; 24 T. L. R. 779, D. C.

440. Course of business.]—It is not sufficient prima facie evidence of a letter being sent by the post, that it was written by a merchant in his counting-house, & put down upon a table for the purpose of being carried from thence to the post office, & that by the course of business in the counting-house, all letters deposited on this table are carried to the post office by a porter.—HETHERINGTON v. HENDERSON (1889), 22 N. S. R. 138.—CAN.

438 v. —.—.]—In an action by vendor for specific performance of sale of land, where deft. set up defence that the contract was induced by misrepresentation, there being conflicting evidence of pltf. & deft., evidence was given of alleged similar misrepresentations by pltf. to prospective purchasers in other cases, intended as corroborative, & received subject to objection:—Held: it was wrongly admitted.—BOYD v. LARSON, [1919] 1 W. W. R. 808; 58 S. C. R. 275; 46 D. L. R. 126.—CAN.

438 vi. —.—.]—An action was brought by a life insurance co. claiming to have a policy set aside on the ground of fraud. There was no averment in the statement of claim that the alleged fraud was part of a fraudulent system, nor any allegation that deft. had been a party to any similar acts of fraud. At the trial it was proposed, without previous notice to deft., to adduce evidence connected with the effecting of other policies by deft. under similar fraudulent circumstances as evidence of a system of fraud:—Held: the evidence of the similar frauds would be admissible if the substance of the allegation that the fraud was part of a system were stated in the statement of claim.—*EDINBURGH LIFE ASSURANCE Co. v. SUB-SECT. 9.—CHARACTER.

A. In General.

441. Competency of witness.]—It is not essential that witnesses who state that they would not believe another person on his oath, should have ever heard such person give evidence upon oath; as the real question is, whether the witnesses have such a knowledge of the person's character & conduct, as enables them conscientiously to say that it is impossible to place any reliance on any statement that such person may make.—R. v. BISPHAM (1830), 4 C. & P. 392.

442. General rule.]—Character of deft. cannot be gone into in a civil action.—ANON. (1773), Lofft, 321; 98 E. R. 673.

443. — Penal action.]—I cannot admit this evidence [as to character] in a civil suit. The offence imputed by the information is not in the shape of a crime. It would be contrary to the true line of distinction to admit it, which is this: that in a direct prosecution for a crime, such evidence is admissible, but where the prosecution is not directly for the crime but for the penalty, as in this information, it is not (EYRE, C.B.).—A.-G. v. BOWMAN (1791), 2 Bos. & P. 532, n.; 126 E. R. 1423.

e. Systematic corruption—Isolated act not sufficient.]—The petition against the return of a member for the House of Commons at the general election in 1904 contained allegations of corrupt acts by resp. at the election of 1900, which were struck out on preliminary objections. On the trial of the petition evidence of payments by resp. of accounts in connection with the former election was offered to prove agency & a system & was admitted on the first ground. A question as to the amount of one account so paid was objected to & rejected:—Held: the question was not admissible as proof of a system, could not be established by evidence of an isolated corrupt act.—COWIE v. FIELDING, SHELburne & QUEEN'S ELECTION CASE (1906), 37 S. C. R. 604.—CAN.

d. Systematic immorality—Principle of admission.]—In an action for a libel that pltf. was at the time of the publication of the libel "leading a life of open & flagrant immorality," to which deft. had pleaded pleas of justification setting forth particulars of pltf.'s alleged conduct during the period to which the libel referred:—Held: evidence was admissible to prove similar acts of immorality committed by pltf. before & after the period referred to, on the principle of the maxim "Et antecedentibus et consequentibus fit optima interpretatio."—EYES v. HENDERSON, 1 J. R. 127.—N.Z.

Held: evidence of similar misrepresentation made by S. to another person was admissible to show S.'s intention in making them.—KINGSLEY v. AFRICAN LAND CORPN., LTD. (1914), T. P. D. 666.—S. AF.

438 viii. —.—.]—Deft. resisted a claim for specific performance of an alleged agreement for exchange of lands, on the ground that he had been induced to sign the agreement by the fraudulent representation of the agent for both parties that under a certain clause in the agreement he would not be bound unless he confirmed the agreement within seven days. Deft.'s counsel, when cross-examining the agent, claimed the right to prove that the same agent a few days later induced another person to sign an agreement for an exchange containing a similar clause by the same misrepresentation:—Held: the evidence ought not to be admitted.—MCINTOSH v. PARK, [1917] N. Z. L. R. 598.—N.Z.

a. — Evidence of same person defrauded on other occasions.]—Where a party claimed damages from another on the ground of having fraudulently executed a mercantile order, knowing it to have been intended for pursuer:—Held: he was not entitled to lay before the jury evidence that similar offences had formerly been committed by the same defender against him, to establish that the order in question had been fraudulently executed.—DICKSON v. DICKSON & Co. (1830), 8 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 933; 5 Murr. 223.—SCOT.

b. SECT. 4.—HEARSAY.

SUB-SECT. 1.—STATEMENTS OR DECLARATIONS BY LIVING THIRD PERSONS.

A. In General.

447. General rule.]—Upon the trial of an ejectment respecting Blackacre, between A. & B. in which it was necessary for A. to prove that he was the legitimate son of J., A. after proving by other evidence that J. was his reputed father, offered to give in evidence a deposition made by J. in a cause in Chancery, instituted by A. against C. in order to perpetuate testimony to the alleged fact disputed by C. that he was the legitimate son of J., in which character he claimed an estate in remainder in Whiteacre, which was also claimed in remainder by C. B., deft. in the ejectment, did not claim Blackacre under either A. or C., pltf. & deft. in the Chancery suit:—Held: according to law, the deposition of J. could not be received upon the trial of such ejectment against B. as evidence of declarations of J. the alleged father, in matter of pedigree.

The grounds on which it appears to me that the deposition is not receivable in evidence as the declaration of the witness are these: because it was made post litem motam, after a controversy raised upon this very point: because J., the witness who made it was brought forward to speak to the point by a person who had a direct interest in establishing it: because the deposition is upon interrogatories formally put to J. by an interested party; & because B., against whom it is proposed that the deposition should be read, had no opportunity of putting any questions on his own behalf (BAYLEY, J.).

By the general rule of law nothing that is said by any person can be used as evidence between contending parties unless it is delivered upon oath in the presence of those parties. In England, where the jury are the sole judges of the fact, hearsay evidence is properly excluded, because no man can tell what effect it might have upon their minds. To the general rule with us, there are two exceptions: first, on the trial of rights of common & other rights claimed by prescription; & secondly, on questions of pedigree. With respect to all these, the declarations of deceased persons, who are supposed to have had a personal knowledge of the facts, & to have stood quite disinterested, are received in evidence. In cases of general rights, which depend upon immemorial usage, living witnesses can only speak of their own knowledge to what has passed in their own time; & to supply the deficiency, the law received the declarations of persons who are dead. There, however, the witness is only allowed to speak to what he has heard the dead man say respecting the reputation of the right of way, or of common, or the like. A declaration with regard to a particular fact, which would support or negative the right, is inadmissible. In matters of pedigree, it being impossible to prove by living witnesses the relationships of past generations, the declarations of deceased members of the family are admitted: but here, as the reputation must proceed on particular facts, such as marriages,

To rebut allegation of fraud.]—It was proposed to give evidence of the good character of defender to meet the charge of fraud made against him:—Held: evidence of the character of defender cannot be given in a civil action.—CLARK v. SPENCE (1825), 3 Murr. 450.—SCOT.

445 i. To establish fact of theft.]—In an action for slander imputing theft, deft. having pleaded & endeavoured to support plea of justification:—Held: evidence of the pltf.'s general bad character for honesty was properly rejected. Semble: it would have been inadmissible even without the justification; but if "not guilty" only be pleaded, deft. may show, solely in mitigation of damages, & to rebut the presumption of malice, that before speaking the words it was a common rumour in the neighbourhood that deft. had been guilty of the specific offence charged.—EDGAR v. NEWELL (1865), 24 U. C. R. 215.—CAN.

447 iii. —.]—In an action against a sheriff for the sale of goods, without paying rent:—Held: the statement of the tenant in possession, made before the distress, that the first year's rent had been paid, was not evidence in the cause.—GALBRAITH v. FORTUNE (1860), 10 C. P. 109.—CAN.

447 iv. —.]—The chief clerk of the parts department of a motor car co. was presented by pltf. as a witness to give evidence from his records for the purpose of identifying a motor car as one that was alleged to have been stolen. The records were memoranda made by the co.'s employees & inspectors in the course of their duties & filed in the chief clerk's department. The co. had a rule of secrecy as to the identity of their inspectors, & these inspectors were not known to the births, & the like, from the necessity of the thing, the hearsay of the family as to these particular facts is not excluded. General rights are naturally talked of in the neighbourhood; & family transactions among the relations of the parties. Therefore, what is thus dropped in conversation upon such subjects, may be presumed to be true. But after a dispute has arisen, the presumption in favour of declarations fails; & to admit them, would lead to the most dangerous consequences. Accordingly, I know no rule better established in practice than this, that such declarations shall be excluded. With respect to questions of prescription, I have known many instances in which the rule has been acted upon. I never heard the contrary contended either as counsel or judge. I think the rule is equally applicable to questions of pedigree (LORD MANSFIELD, C.J.).—BERKELEY PEERAGE CASE (1811), 4 Camp. 401, H. L.

It is a general rule that such evidence [hearsay] is not admissible except in some few particular cases where the exception, for aught we know, is as ancient as the rule. . . . 477. — Not evidence of the facts stated.]—In an action by B. against A. for false imprisonment, A. pleaded a justification, that B. had been guilty of embezzlement. B. & his witnesses having made the charge before a magistrate, depositions were taken in the hearing of B., & he made a statement in answer. On the trial of the action for false imprisonment:—Held: these depositions, & pltf.'s statement in answer, were receivable in evidence for deff. as being matters stated in the hearing of pltf., to which he made an answer, but the depositions were no proof of any fact therein stated.—JONES v. MORRELL (1844), 1 Car. & Kir. 266.

478. — —.]—Two workmen were lifting a drill weighing one & a half cwts. when the drill slipped. One of the men on getting back to his home told his wife he had a pain in his side. Two days later the wife called in a doctor. The doctor treated the pain in the man's side as being due to a strain, but there were no objective symptoms of strain. Five weeks later the man died from broncho-pneumonia, & the doctor then expressed the opinion that the man had strained his liver, & that the injury extended ultimately to the lungs. The widow further gave evidence that during the time that the man was ill he was visited by his employer, who asked him what was the matter, & the man said he had strained himself lifting the drill, whereupon the employer gave him £2 "to go on with," & told him that his compensation would amount to 35s. per week. This evidence was objected to. The county ct. judge found that the deceased had suffered injury by accident in the way alleged, & that death from broncho-pneumonia had resulted therefrom. He further stated that in coming to this conclusion he did not rely upon the deceased's statement to his employer, "except as not being inconsistent with the facts of the case":—Held: there was sufficient evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. The statement was admissible not as direct evidence of the facts therein stated, but as showing the conduct of the employer on hearing such statement, upon which the judge was at liberty to draw inferences of fact.—CHANTLER v. BROMLEY (1921), 14 B. W. C. C. 14, D. C.

Issue being joined upon a replication de injuria, a witness called by A. proved that A. & B. went with him to D. on the day following that on which the bill had been dishonoured, when B. reminded D. that D. had on the presentment of the bill for payment stated that A. had forged D.'s acceptance, & that D. neither admitted nor denied that he had made such a statement. A witness called by B. stated that D., when he dishonoured the bill, did say that the acceptance was forged by A.:—Held: this statement was admissible in evidence in mitigation of damages. Semble: this statement would have been evidence for B., even if evidence of the subsequent conversation had not been given by A.—PERKINS v. VAUGHAN (1842), 4 Car. & Kir. 988; 5 Scott, N. R. 881; 12 Car. & Kir. 38; 6 Jur. 1114; 134 E. R. 405.

489. —.]—(1) A woman's hand was injured by blood poisoning. She alleged that the injury was caused by pricking her thumb on a nail while working on her employers' premises. They alleged that the injury was received at her home. At the hearing she was cross-examined as to alleged statements made by her to certain persons that she had done it at home, & their evidence as to these statements was heard. The evidence of witnesses called for her of statements made by her to them as to the alleged accident two days after its alleged occurrence was disallowed.

We have simply to apply here the general rule of evidence that statements may be used against a witness as admissions, but that you are not entitled to give evidence of statements on other occasions by the witness in confirmation of her testimony (NEVILLE, J.).

That is a special class of case in which such evidence has for a very long time been allowed to be admitted, but it has nothing to do with such a case as the present (SWINFEN-EADY, L.J.).—JONES v. W. deposed that he, pltf., & C., a clerk of pltf.'s attorney, were together at pltf.'s house: pltf. said that if W. would give evidence as to the accident he should share the compensation; pltf. knew that W. was not present at the accident, & W. said he was not, & C. said if W. would not come forward he, C., would get other witnesses. Two other witnesses deposed to similar proposals made to them by C., but not in pltf.'s presence, to give false evidence. Pltf. was not present at the accident; & neither he nor C. had been called as witnesses:—Held: the evidence was rightly received, as amounting to evidence of an admission, by conduct, of pltf. that he had a bad case.—*MORIARTY v. Upon one occasion of his being examined as a witness upon an inquisition deft. deposed that he was tenant to A. In an action of ejectment to recover possession of the premises:—Held: there was evidence upon which the jury might find that he had admitted himself to be tenant to A. so as to entitle pltf. to succeed upon a demise by A.—DOE d. 524. — In suit to perpetuate testimony—Necessity for user or adoption by party.]—A deposition made in the year 1815, in a suit to perpetuate testimony by a witness examined on commission on behalf of a predecessor in title of defts., was admitted in evidence at the trial of this issue as being a statement made by a person vouched by the party on whose behalf deponent was examined, & consequently an admission by conduct of a predecessor in title of defts. This deposition had been sealed up by the examiners, but was now found unsealed:—Held: the mere fact that the deposition was now found to be unsealed was not evidence of user or adoption by the party on whose behalf deponent was examined, & in the absence of evidence of such user or adoption, the deposition was inadmissible on the ground on which it was admitted.—EVANS v. MERTHYR L. URBAN COUNCIL, [1899] 1 Ch. 241; 68 L. J. Ch. 175; 79 L. T. 578; 43 Sol. Jo. 151, C. A.

525. Oral evidence—Distinguished from written evidence.]—Oral testimony, called in judicial proceedings to prove a certain contention, is not such an admission by conduct of the truth of that contention as to be admissible, in other proceedings, as evidence against the party who tendered the testimony.

Oral evidence must stand on a somewhat different footing from written evidence (RUSSELL, J.).—BRITISH THOMSON-HOUSTON CO. v. BRITISH INSULATED & HELSBY CABLES, LTD., [1924] 1 Ch. 203; 93 L. J. E. Admissions with a View to Compromise.

526. General rule.]—Hitherto I have made it a rule never to receive any admissions whatever, which were made on a reference that was not effective. I think I have carried that rule too far, & for the future I shall receive evidence of all admissions, such as deft. would be obliged to make in his answer to a bill in equity, & will reject none but such as are merely concessions for the purpose of making peace, & getting rid of a suit. These I think ought not to be admitted in evidence to prejudice deft., when the object for which they were made is at an end (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—SLACK v. BUCHANNAN (1790), Peake, 7, N. P. Annotation:—Mentd. Froysell v. Lewelyn (1821), 9 Price, 122.

527. —.]—An admission of a handwriting made by deft., pending a treaty for compromising the suit, is evidence against him.

Certainly any admission or confession made by the party respecting the subject-matter of the action, obtained while a treaty was depending, under faith of it, & into which the party might have been led by the confidence of a compromise taking place, cannot be admitted to be given in evidence to his prejudice; but the fact of a handwriting being a person's or not, stands on a different foundation; it is matter no way connected with the merits of the cause, & which is capable of being easily proved by other means (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—WALDRIDGE v. KENNISON (1794), 1 Esp. 143, N. P.

Annotation:—Mentd. Froysell v. Lewelyn (1821), 9 Price, 122.

528. —.]—An agreement, headed "An agreement for compromise," & made between a father & son, whereby the father engaged that on the son's signing certain deeds, for the purpose of settling the title to some reversionary family property, with respect to which there was some dispute between them, he, the father, would give up to the son a promissory note, given by the son to the father, for £1,000:—Held: admissible as evidence in an action brought by the administrator of the father against the son, to recover the £1,000, on the note, for the purpose of taking the demand out of Stat. Limitations which had been pleaded, as being an admission that the note was, at the date of the agreement, in existence & unpaid; for such an agreement is not within the rule of law which excludes from evidence admissions made during a treaty for a compromise of litigation. That rule is applicable only to treaties for the purpose of ending suits, which are not, eventually, brought to a conclusion; but does not apply to agreements perfected & executed; although the subject-matter & objects of such agreements may be a compromise of previously existing differences between the parties.—FROYSSELL v. LEWELYN (1821), 9 Price, 122; 147 E. R. 41.

529. —.]—A landlord being sued for repairs done upon his estate, it is agreed that the tenant shall advance the amount out of the rent, & that the landlord shall pay two-thirds of deft.'s costs. The costs not being paid, the action proceeds. This arrangement is not such an acknowledgment of deft.'s original liability as will entitle pltf. to a verdict; even supposing that it is not inadmissible in evidence as being in the nature of a compromise.—LOFTS v. HUDSON (1828), 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 481; 7 L. J. O. S. K. B. 242.

530. —.]—Words said by way of compromise of an action are never receivable in evidence in that action (LORD ERSKINE, C.J.).—Re BRERETON, Ex p. BIGNOLD (1836), 2 Mont. & A. 633; 1 Deac. 712; 6 L. J. Bcy. 17, Ct. of R.

533. — Confined to compromise of suits.]—FROYSSELL v. LEWELYN, No. 528, ante.

534. — Proposal to refer matter to arbitration—Subsequent admission to proposed arbitrator with view to compromise.]—On non assumpsit pleaded & notice of set-off given to an action for goods sold & delivered, a witness was called to prove a conversation with pltf., in which the latter began by proposing to refer the matter in dispute between him & deft. to the arbitration of witness, but this being refused, pltf. proceeded to admit that he had received on account of deft. £800, a sum more than covering the demand in the action:—Held: this conversation was receivable in evidence under the notice of set-off, & ought not to be rejected as an offer of compromise, although pltf. expressly requested the witness to state the conversation to deft., to induce him to come to a compromise.

If a part of a conversation be received in evidence, then the whole conversation ought to be presented to the jury.—THOMSON v. AUSTEN (1823), 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 358; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 99.

535. — Discharge by tenant of alleged liability of landlord.—LOFTS v. HUDSON, No. 529, ante.

536. Interview to effect compromise — Expressed intention to repeat statements made.—Where a person called on deft. with a view to making an amicable arrangement, & said, "you may expect I shall repeat what you say":—Held: the conversation which ensued was not a privileged communication, & it was properly received in evidence.—LIDLAW v. LEECH (1851), 16 L. T. O. S. 344.

G. Admissions by Particular Parties.

(a) By Predecessors in Title.

537. Admissible against parties claiming under them—Assignor & assignee.—Declarations made by the owner of an estate against his own interest, are admissible in evidence against his vendee, although such vendor be alive & even in ct. at the time that his declarations are proposed to be used.—WOOLWAY v. ROWE (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 114; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 849; 3 L. J. K. B. 121; 110 E. R. 1151.

538. ——Upon an issue between A. & B., whether C. died possessed of certain property, evidence may be given of declarations made by C. that she had assigned the property to A.—IVAT v. FINCH (1808), 1 Taunt. 141; 127 E. R. 785.

539. — Incumbent & successor.—An answer by a former rector to a bill filed to establish a modus of a certain measure of meal, as to one farm, admitting that the parish is exempt, in consideration of a commutation for meal, is not only admissible but strong evidence to prove a district modus.—DE WHELPDALE v. MILBURN (1818), 5 Price, 485; 146 E. R. 671, Ex. Ch.

540. ————An ancient document, signed by the rector of a parish for the time being, setting out the payment of tithes by a modus is admissible in evidence in support of such modus, although such document was not produced from the registry of the bishop or archdeacon, but was found among the title deeds of a landowner in the parish, on the ground that, as it was evidence against the rector who signed it, it was admissible against his successors.—MADDISON v. NUTTALL (1829), 6 Bing. 226; 3 Moo. & P. 544; 8 L. J. O. S. C. P. 27; 130 E. R. 1266.

541. ————Where a vicar brings ejectment claiming in right of his vicarage, a letter written by a former vicar is admissible in evidence for deft.—DOE d. COYLE v. COLE (1834), 6 C. & P. 359, N. P.

542. — Vendor & purchaser.—WOOLWAY v. ROWE, No. 537, ante.

543. — Admissions under seal.—In a suit by resp., lately an insolvent, to set aside on the ground of misrepresentation or mutual mistake a release by the official assignee of resp.'s equity of redemption of a certain mtge., for accounts against applts., the mtgees., & in effect to have the benefit of a subsequent resale by the releasee's purchaser, it appeared that the official assignee had in the release admitted the truth of the representations made to him, & that resp. had thereafter taken a conveyance from him of all the estate vested in him under the insolvency:—Held: the onus was upon resp., who was primâ facie bound by the admissions under the seal of his vendor, to prove the falsehood of the representations, & not upon applts. to establish their truth.—MELBOURNE BANKING CORPN. v. BROUGHAM (1882), 7 App. Cas. 307; 51 L. J. P. C. 65; 46 L. T. 603; 30 W. R. 925, P. C.

Annotation:—Mentd. Mainland v. Upjohn (1889), 41 Ch. D. 126.

544. — Intestate & administrator.—In trover for a watch, deft. pleaded that it was the property of pltf., & proved that it had been in deft.'s possession for four years previous to the death of a former owner; but having also put in evidence letters of administration granted to him of the effects of the former owner:—Held: the declarations of such owner were evidence against him.—SMITH v. SMITH (1830), 3 Bing. N. C. 29; 7 C. & P. 401; 2 Hodg. 130; 3 Scott, 352; 5 L. J. C. P. 305; 132 E. R. 320.

545. — Bishop & successor.—MEATH (Bp.) v. WINCHESTER (MARQUESS), No. 38, ante.

PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.—G. (a).

538 i. Admissible against parties claiming under them.—In trespass for mesne profits against one who came into possession under the tenant in the action of ejectment, the agreement for the consent rule, signed by the attorney of the tenant in possession, & the judgment in ejectment against the casual ejector, are evidence for pltf., the first as a precedent to connect the tenant, under whom deft. in this action claimed, with the action of ejectment, & the latter, to show pltf.'s right to the possession of the property.—FRASER v. HARDING (1845), 3 Kerr, 94.—CAN.

538 ii. ——Declarations of a party adverse to his title are admissible against a person claiming through him, if made while the title was in the party making the declarations.—HAMILTON v. HOLDER (1874), 2 Pug. 222.—CAN.

538 iii. ——The deed of conveyance of land in C. recited that the vendor was "seized of, or otherwise well entitled to, the property intended to be sold, for an estate of inheritance in fee simple"; & it purported to convey such an estate. In a suit for dower by the vendor's widow against the heirs of the purchaser:—Held: as the purchaser bought the property as & for an estate of inheritance & paid for it as such, the recital was primâ facie evidence against the purchaser, & persons claiming through him that the estate conveyed was what it purported to be, it being an admission by conduct of parties which amounted to evidence against them.—SARKIES v. PROSONOMOYEE DOSSEE (1881), 1 L. R. 6 Calc. 794.—IND.

538 iv. ——Testator, by his will, left his house & business establishment to his wife for life, & after her death to his son, & a pecuniary legacy to his daughter; the son borrowed the money from his sister, & as security, he & his mother executed to his sister a bill of sale of the property which had been left to them; in a contention between the sister & an execution creditor of the son, as to the bona fides of the bill of sale:—Held: to show the nature of the transaction, the will, though unproved, ought to have been received in evidence as a signed declaration of the former owner of the property before it passed out of his possession.—O'SULLIVAN v. BURKE (1875), 1 R. 9 C. L. 105.—IR.

b. Not admissible to cut down title.—Declarations by a party having the documentary title to land, made after the lapse of sufficient time to give another title by possession, are not admissible to cut down the latter's title.—HAMILTON v. HOLDER (1874), 2 Pug. 222.—CAN.

c. Not admissible in favour of parties claiming under them.—W. sold certain mineral claims to A., who sold in turn to defts., after which W., as agent for pltf., located a fraction between two of the claims in pltf.'s name:—Held: defts. could not invoke against pltf. a statement in a bill of

Sect. 4.—Hearsay: Sub-sect. 2, G. (a), (b) & (c) i.]

546. — Former tenant.]—In an action for ptlf.'s close & destroying a hatch, deff. pleaded that the water of the stream ought to have flowed to his mill, & because the hatch prevented its so doing, he pulled it down. Evidence may be given of what a former tenant said as to asking permission to have the water, as this is an act done, & may be proof of an exercise of a right by one side, & an acquiescence in it by the other.—WAKEMAN v. WEST (1837), 8 C. & P. 105, N. P.

547. Party claiming under predecessor in title — Lessee of deceased vicar.]—On the trial of a modus, the receipts of a lessee of a deceased vicar are evidence, & if a witness proves that her father & brother were tenants of the tithes for above forty years, that is sufficient to let in their receipts, without proving a lease to them.—CARRINGTON v. JONES (1824), 2 Sim. & St. 135; 57 E. R. 297; sub nom. JONES v. CARRINGTON, 1 C. & P. 497. Annotation:—Mentd. Carrington v. Cornock (1829), 2 Sim. 587.

548. Admission must relate to predecessor's title.]—On an interpleader issue to try the right to certain goods claimed by ptlf. under an assignment to secure a debt alleged to be due to him, the admissions of the assignor before the date of the assignment, that he was indebted, are not receivable in evidence for ptlf.

It was suggested, that the admission of the son might be received as evidence against deff., the execution creditor, as a person claiming under him; & probably an execution creditor, though in one sense he claims against the debtor, yet, in truth, may be considered as claiming under him, for he can take only such title as the debtor had. Admitting this view to be correct, it does not apply to such admissions as that offered in evidence in this case, which do not qualify or affect the title of the assignor to the chattel assigned (PARKE, B.).—COOLE v. BRAHAM (1848), 3 Exch. 183; 18 L. J. Ex. 105; 12 L. T. O. S. 272; 154 E. R. 808.

549. Title must be claimed by derivation.]—TUCKER v. OLDBURY URBAN COUNCIL, No. 515, ante.

550. —.]—In an action by A. against B. in which the title to a chattel is in question, admissions by a person previously entitled which were made during the continuance of his or her interest, & which qualify or affect the title, may be given in evidence against B.; but such evidence is not admissible where no question of title arises & where the question at issue is merely the right to a sum of money.

It is said that where "title" is in question, statements made by persons from whom that title is derived, which qualify or affect the title are evidence against those who have acquired the title. It is I think true that, if a chattel is transferred, admissions made by the transferor at the time of or prior to the transfer, which qualify or affect

(b) By Lessees.

552. General rule.]—In an action to restrain trespass upon land & for a declaration of title, where ptlf.'s title is disputed by deff., an ancient document produced from ptlf.'s custody, & purporting to be signed by a deceased person, by which the deceased agreed to pay a sum in consideration of ptlf.'s predecessor in title stopping proceedings against him for trespass upon part of the land in question, & also agreed that he would refrain from trespassing upon the land for the future, is admissible in evidence as showing an act of ownership by ptlf.'s predecessor in title.

The fact that deceased was a tenant of the predecessor in title of deff. who claimed commonable rights over the land in question will not prevent the document being admissible.—BLANDY-JENKINS v. DUNRAVEN (EARL), [1899] 2 Ch. 121; 68 L. J. Ch. 589; 81 L. T. 209; 43 Sol. Jo. 656, C. A. Annotation:—Generally, Mentd. Evans v. Merthyr Tydvil U. D. C. (1898), 79 L. T. 578.

555. In action for recovery of land.]—Ejectment against T., the tenant in possession, & L., who came in to defend as landlord. The lessor of ptlf. having proved his title against L., the latter set up the title of the tenant T., who had paid rent to the lessor of ptlf. as tenant from year to year. In order to show the determination of T.'s interest, the lessor of ptlf. produced an admission signed by T. after the commission day of the assizes, whereby he acknowledged having attorned to L., upon L.'s executing a writ of possession in a prior ejectment:—Held: this admission was evidence against L. as well as T.—DOE d. MEE v. LUTHERLAND (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 784; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 313; 6 L. J. K. B. 267; 111 E. R. 978.

d. Admissions made by parties when deed executed not admissible.]—Ptlf. claimed under a deed from one C. of "all that parcel of land being composed of lot 26, as laid down upon a plan of lots laid out by T. & W., being on the west side of G. street in the town of B.," adding a description which left a small strip at the south end of the lot uncovered:—Held: evidence of what took place between the parties when C. afterwards conveyed the small strip to deff., & as to deff.'s possession thereunder, & the acquiescence therein of the person through whom ptlf. claimed, etc., was properly rejected.—GILLEN v. HAYNES (1873), 33 U. C. R. 516.—CAN.

PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.—G. (b).

e. In action of trespass.]—Ptlf. brought an action of trespass, claiming to be entitled to the locus under a deed from the I. & R. N. Co. Deff. claimed to be entitled under a deed from the exors. of one S., who had acquired a possessory title by more than twenty years' possession. To meet this, ptlf. gave evidence of admissions by S. that he held the land under a sublease from lessees of the S. C. Co., who then owned the land, but no lease was produced, & no such lease had ever been recorded:—Held: the possessory title of deff.'s grantor could not be affected by the alleged admissions of S., the lease not having been produced.—OREIGHTON v. KUHN (1882), 2 R. & G. 147; Cass. Dig. 514.—CAN.

563. Admissions by guardian ad litem—As against infant or lunatic.]—(1) A guardian [ad litem] is only appointed for the purpose of defending the rights of the infant, & although for the advantage of an infant a guardian might perhaps be permitted to give evidence on affidavit, he would not be permitted to give such evidence against the interest of an infant (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).

(2) Pltf. who sues a lunatic may apply to have a guardian ad litem appointed, & it would be a singular consequence if the person appointed upon the application of pltf. could make admissions which could be given in evidence against the lunatic deft. 568. Admission by alleged agent—Agency admitted in other party's pleadings.]—Pltf. having brought an action against A., for goods supplied to a joint-stock co., of which deft. was a member, & the action having been stayed under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 35, until pltf. should prove his claim before the master, which he failed to do, he obtained an order to be allowed to proceed in the action, & to substitute C., the official manager of the co., as deft. in lieu of the then deft. Pltf. thereupon entered a suggestion on the record, which stated that "the action was commenced & had hitherto been prosecuted against A., as a person authorised to be sued as the nominal deft., on behalf of the co." :—Held: the acts of A. were not admissible in evidence on the trial of the cause against C., as pltf.'s suggestion alleged that A. had been sued as a mere nominal deft.—ARMSTRONG v. NORMANDY (1850), 5 Exch. 409; 19 L. J. Ex. 343; 15 L. T. O. S. 258; 14 Jur. 579; 155 E. R. 179.

570. Admission by committee of lunatic.]—A., B., & C. were committees of a lunatic. To a bill filed against the lunatic & themselves, as committees, they put in an answer stating certain facts. That cause went to issue, & witnesses were examined. The lunatic died; A. & the wives of B. & C., who were relatives, obtained letters of administration to her estate as her next of kin. Pltf. in the original suit then filed a bill of revivor against A., the two wives, & their husbands, merely praying for a revival of the suit. The ordinary order was made. Defts. to the bill of revivor put in an answer, in which they craved to have the full benefit of the answer to the original bill; there was no replication to this answer. The original answer contained statements which at the hearing were admitted to be read against the defts. :—Held: under the circumstances of this case these statements were properly admitted in evidence.—STANTON v. PERCIVAL (1855), 5 H. L.

575. Admission by indemnifying creditor—As against sheriff in action for false return.]—In an action against the sheriff for a false return to a writ of fi. fa. where the defence rests upon the validity of a commission of bkpcy., if it appears that the assignees are the real parties, a declaration by one of them who was the petitioning creditor, made subsequently to the suing out of the commission, that bkpt. did not owe him £100 is admissible evidence on the part of pltf.—DOWDEN v. FOWLE (1814), 4 Camp. 38, N. P.

Annotation:—Distd. Harwood v. Keys (1832), 1 Mood. & R. 204.

576. Admission by wife—As against husband in whose name she sues.]—Where an action is brought by the orders of a wife in the name of her husband to recover a sum of money taken from her on the ground that it was the produce of goods she had been concerned in stealing—what she afterwards said in her husband's absence respecting the money, when examined on the charge of being concerned in the robbery, is evidence for deft.—CAREY v. ADKINS (1814), 4 Camp. 92, N. P.

577. Admission by debtor—As against trustee for division of assets.]—A. having deposited with B. £100 to distribute amongst A.'s creditors in proportion to their claims, no one of these can maintain an action against B. before the proportions of all the claimants have been ascertained. A.'s declaration in such case is evidence to show that C. is a creditor of his to a specific amount.—ROBSON v. ANDRADE (1816), 1 Stark. 372, N. P.

578. Admission by cestui que trust—As against trustee.]—In trover for a deed which deft. had, by letter, admitted he detained at the request of W., & in the detainer of which W. was substantially interested:—Held: declarations of W., in favour of pltf.'s claim, were properly received in evidence.—*HARRISON v. 579. ———.]—On the trial of an ejectment upon demise of J., deft., to prove that the premises had passed by a deed conveying a messuage with the appurtenances, offered in evidence another deed by which M., for whom J., if pltf. recovered, would be trustee during M.'s life, conveyed the messuage by a description which, as contended, disposed of the premises in question as appurtenant thereto. M.'s conveyance recited a previous unsatisfied mtge. of the messuage, by her late husband, who had devised to her for her life, & purported to be made in consideration of the forbearance of certain sums owing by her as her husband's extrix., & of further advances then made to her. Deft. offered M.'s deed, first as a declaration made by the cestui que trust of the lessor of pltf., & therefore a party equitably represented by the party on the record; secondly, as an act of user of the premises, as appurtenances, by the occupier:—Held: M.'s conveyance was not admissible, inasmuch as M., in her conveyance, appeared, not only to admit a fact in derogation of her own title, but to gain a benefit by the forbearance & advance of money.—DOE d. ROWLANDSON v. WAINWRIGHT (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 691; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 598; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 508; 7 L. J. Q. B. 222; 3 Jur. 7; 112 E. R. 1000.

580. ———.]—To render the declarations of cestui que trust admissible for a deft. in an action by the trustees, the nature of his interest must appear, in order that it may be seen that he is the party really & substantially suing.—*MAY v. G. (d).

k. Admission by defendant—As to title.]—Application was made to set aside a verdict for def't. in an action for trespass to lands, & for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence favourable to pltf. At the trial, the point submitted to the jury was whether def't. occupied as tenant of W. or in assertion of his own right.

ptlf. when he gave him a note of def't.'s to take up D.'s note, given for the price of goods, was admissible without producing def't.'s note.—STEPHENSON v. FRASER (1885), 24 N. B. R. 482.—CAN.

PART II. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 2.—
G. (c) ii.

h. Admission by party for whose benefit action brought.]—Action upon a policy by A., the person insured, averring an assignment to B. & C., notified to defts. & indorsed on the policy, & an agreement by them that it should stand for the benefit of B. & C. Plea, denying the assignment, etc.:—Held: the declaration of B., one of the parties for whose benefit the suit was brought, was admissible as evidence for the defts.—ROSS v. COMMERCIAL UNION ASSURANCE CO. (1867), 26 U. C. R. 559.—CAN.

Whether admissible as against plaintiff.]—Admissions between co-defts. cannot be used as evidence against pltf., & the cost of those admissions cannot be included in an order for the taxation of the general costs of the action.—*DODDS v. 588. Whether evidence of knowledge of partner

The issues submitted to the jury on this point were found in favour of deft. The newly discovered evidence went to show that deft. on several occasions had admitted the title of W. & if believed by the jury would be conclusive on the point upon which the case turned. A new trial was ordered.—GARLAND v. CURRY (1887), 20 N. S. R. (8 It. & G.) 4.—CAN.

1. — As to boundary line.]—Dft. addressed the following letter to pltf.: "In reference to your claim that my building on W. street is on your property, while I have contended to date that it was not, I have now to say that after having a talk with M., who made the survey, I must now admit that the building is some sixteen inches or so on your land, & that I agree with the survey as made by M., & hereby accept same as the proper line between us".—Held: the letter might be treated by the trial judge as an admission by deft. that the line as laid down by the surveyor was the correct one.—MCINTYRE v. WHITE (1911), 10 E. L. R. 248.—CAN.

m. Admission by execution debtor —Not admissible as against plaintiff.]—In an interpleader to try the right to goods seized under execution against A. & B., & claimed by pltf., C., a brother of B.:—Held: B.'s statement, while in possession of the property with pltf.'s assent, that it belonged to his sister, could not be evidence, as against pltf., to disprove pltf.'s right.—EARNSHAW v. TOMLINSON (1867), 26

U. C. R. 610.—CAN.

n. Admission favourable to both plaintiff & defendant —How far whole statement credible.]—Where counsel for one party in an action places in evidence an admission made by the opposite party, which admission contains some statements in favour of the contention of pltf. & some in favour of that of deft., it is not necessary to give equal credence to the several statements, but the jury must consider under the circumstances how much of the entire statement they deem worthy of belief.—HUCK v. C. P. R. (1916), 34 W. L. R. 1177; 9 Sask. L. R. 288; 29 D. L. R. 571.—CAN.

PART II. SECT. 4. SUB-SECT. 2. — G. (e).

583 i. General rule.]—In an action brought by pltf. against deft. for breach of agreement not to go into business for a certain time, by reason of which breach pltf. claimed that he had been compelled to pay a higher rate of wages, etc.:—Held: a paper purporting to be a scale of wages paid by deft.'s firm, & found in pltf.'s workshop, & which was stated to be in the handwriting of deft.'s partner, was properly admitted in evidence.—WHITTAKER v. WELCH (1874), 2 Pug. 436.—CAN.

583 ii. —.]—In an action against two defts., where it is sought to charge them as partners, a declaration made by one is inadmissible to prove the necessary.—Circular issued in firm name.]—In an action of contract against two, one of whom suffered judgment by default, & the other pleaded, it appeared, at the trial, that deft. who pleaded had stated to a witness that she considered herself a partner in the business carried on by the other deft., & that, shortly after this statement, a circular had issued from the house at which the business was carried on, announcing that thenceforth the business was to be conducted in the names of the two defts. There was no evidence that this circular ever came to the knowledge of deft. who pleaded:—Held: nevertheless it was admissible in evidence.—NORTON v. SEYMOUR (1847), 3 C. B. 792; 2 New Pract. Cas. 99; 16 L. J. C. P. 100; 8 L. T. O. S. 339; 11 Jur. 312; 138 E. R. 317.

589. Admission made after dissolution of partnership—As to transaction before dissolution —When joint liability has ceased.]—An answer put in by one of several partners, after dissolution of the partnership, containing an admission of a representation having been made by such partner in a partnership transaction, prior to the dissolution:—Held: not admissible as evidence of such admission against his co-partners, on the ground that since the dissolution of the partnership the party whose answer it was had become bkpt. & obtained his certificate, & had therefore at the time of putting in the answer no common liability with the co-partners. Even independently of that objection, such answer would not have been admissible in evidence, though made in the existing suit, without other evidence to identify the party whose answer it was with the partner.—PARKER v. MORRELL (1848), 2 Ph. 453; 2 Car. & Kir. 599; 17 L. J. Ch. 226; 12 L. T. O. S. 1; 12 Jur. 253; 41 E. R. 1018, L. C.

590. — Of payment of partnership debt made after dissolution.]—Declarations of one partner, as to the payment, subsequently to a dissolution, of a debt due to the partnership, are admissible against the other partner.—PRITCHARD v. DRAPER (1831), 1 Russ. & M. 191; 39 E. R.

partnership, & at all events before such evidence is admissible at all, defts.' counsel has a right to interpose & cross-examine the witness called to prove the declaration.—BURPEE v. SMITH & MANN (1880), 20 N. B. R. 408.—CAN.

583 iii. —.]—The statement of one partner on his examination in a suit against the firm as to transactions which occurred during the partnership binds all the partners, unless they seek, by an examination of some of themselves, to contradict or qualify the statements of the partner whose evidence they object to.—TAYLOR v. COOK (1885), 11 P. R. 60.—CAN.

583 iv. —.]—Pltf. sought to give evidence, in proof of the partnership, of ante litem statements by the former deft. that the latter was his partner in the transaction in question:—Held: inadmissible, as the foundation for the admission of such evidence is the implied authority & agency of the person making the statement to make it on behalf of the person sought to be bound by it, arising from the nature of their relationship, which was itself the matter sought to be proved.—*BRITISH COLUMBIA IRON WORKS Co. v. 591. Admission made before partnership.]—In an action for work & labour by A. & B. who were partners at the time that the cause of action accrued, deft. put in evidence a letter written by C. who had since the transaction become a partner with B. in the room of A., admitting that pltf. had given credit to another party:—Held: inadmissible, without proof that C. had authority from B. to make the statement.—TUNLEY v. EVANS (1845), 2 Dow. & L. 747; 14 L. J. Q. B. 116; 9 Jur. 428.

(f) By Co-Plaintiffs.

592. General rule.]—The declarations & conduct of co-pltf. are evidence against any one of them.—HUGHES v. EVANS (1823), 1 Sim. & St. 185; 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 129; 57 E. R. 74.

593. General rule.]—In an action against two persons on a bill of exchange accepted by one of them in blank in the name of himself " & Co.," & filled up & delivered by the other, the former having suffered judgment by default, the question was left to the jury upon the whole of the facts, whether defts. were partners at the time, & if not, whether deft. who denied the joint acceptance had acted in such a way as would lead a reasonable man to suppose that they were partners, & whether pltf. in fact acted upon the faith that they were so, & gave credit to them as such; & acts such as signing a bill & orders for goods, on which the bill was accepted, in the partnership name & style, were cogent evidence of liability for pltf.

Anything which is evidence against B. [one of the co-defts.] would be general evidence in the cause, because pltf. must establish the liability of both defts., his action being joint. Anything said or done by B. would therefore be evidence in the cause, but not admissible against G. [the other co-deft.] alone (WATSON, B.).—FALDO v. GRIFFIN (1858), 1 F. & F. 147.

594. — Admission tending to prove conspiracy.]—If three defts. have jointly imprisoned pltf., the declaration of one of defts., made some weeks after, in the absence of the others, tending to show that the imprisonment arose from malice, is admissible in evidence in an action for false imprisonment brought against all three.—WRIGHT v. COURT (1825), 2 C. & P. 232.

595. — Admission by respondent.—Not admissible against co-respondent.]—The admissions or confessions of resp. are not admissible evidence against the co-resp.—ROBINSON v. ROBINSON & seen by the other partner, cannot be admitted as evidence against the representatives of the one partner, in an accounting at the instance of the exor. of the other.—SMITH v. LOGAN (1830), 4 Wils. & S. 47; aff., 5 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 32.—SCOT.

p. Admission made after dissolution of partnership.—As to transaction before dissolution.]—A witness stated in his examination that defendants had had a share in all his business, though he had not a share in all theirs, but that their connection in business was terminated & settled, & that he could not lose or gain by this suit. This evidence was objected to on the ground that he was a partner & interested in the suit:—Held: witness was not a general partner of defendants; they were parties to transactions of a peculiar nature; & the witness should be admitted.—WRIGHT v. LIDDEL (1829), 5 Murr. 35.—SCOT.

596. — — — —.]—In a husband's suit for dissolution of marriage on the ground of his wife's adultery with D., the co-resp., the evidence principally consisted of confession by the wife of adultery with D. On the ground that the confession, though evidence against the wife, was not evidence against D., the ct. granted a decree nisi, but dismissed the suit as against D.—CRAWFORD v. 607. Whether admissible against administrator durante absentia.—In an action by a special administrator, under Administration of Estates Act, 1798 (c. 87), the declarations of the exor. named in the will made by him whilst he was the acting exor., are not admissible against pltf.—RUSH v. PEACOCK (1838), 2 Mood. & R. 102, N. P.

608. Admission not relating to the executorship.—In covenant against two exors. upon a covenant of testator for quiet enjoyment against all claiming under him, the breach assigned was that the two defts. having at the time when the indenture was made, lawful title in their own right, entered, & evicted the covenantee. Entry & eviction by the two was proved; the only evidence showing that it was under lawful title was a declaration by one deflt., after the entry, that the two had lawful title through testator, under a deed prior to that now sued upon :—Held : assuming it to be admissible as against the party making it, the declaration was not evidence against the other deflt., as it did not relate to the affairs of the exorship & therefore, no proof had been given to support the action of covenant.—FOX v. WATERS (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 43; 4 Per & Dav. 1; 9 L. J. Q. B. 329; 4 Jur. 555; 113 E. R. 727.

609. Admission against wishes of co-executor.—An acknowledgment by one of two exors. & devisees in trust of real estate against the wishes of the other that more than six years' interest is

r. Admissibility in subsequent action between co-defendants.—Pltf. & deflt. had been co-defts. in a common law action. During negotiations for the settlement of that action an interview "without prejudice" was held between the parties to this suit as co-defts. in that action on the one side & the solr. for the then pltf. on the other side. At this interview an admission not material to the issue in that action, but material as between the then defts. as pltf. & deflt. in this suit was made by the present deflt. The joint answer of the co-obligors admitted the delivery of the bond, & that one of them had destroyed it; but traversed the allegation as to mistake :—Held : declarations made by the obligor to whom the bond had been delivered, tending to prove pltf.'s allegation, were admissible against the co-obligor.—CROSSE v. —The owner of land having, at his own expense, built a chapel, which was used for the purpose of public worship, & the congregation having subscribed a sum of money for the purpose of enlarging & improving the same, he, in consideration that the money so subscribed should be expended for that purpose, demised the premises by lease for twenty-three years, reserving a peppercorn rent, during his life, & £10 per annum after his death. A declaration of trust was afterwards executed by some of the lessees, declaring that they would hold the premises in trust for the congregation assembling at the chapel, & that in case the public worship should be there discontinued, then that they would assign the premises for civil purposes :—Held : the declaration of trust, although executed only by some out of the several lessees, was evidence against all of the purpose for which the lease was granted.—DOE v. 614. — Admission in connection with matter in excess of authority.]—A. having assigned his stock in trade & business to two trustees, one of them directed pltf. to go to Brussels to procure the liberation of A., who was detained there as a prisoner for debt, & it was arranged that L. should remit pltf. money while there. Pltf. went there, & L. sent a letter to him there announcing that he had done so. In an action by pltf. against the trustees for a compensation for going that journey:—Held: the declarations of a person whom the trustees had placed at the house of business to manage the shop, were not evidence to show that pltf. was entitled to be paid for taking an account of the stock.

If he conducts the business he is an agent to bind defts. in every thing that concerns the business, but not I think to employ a person to take stock (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—LAWRENCE v. THATCHER (1834), 6 C. & P. 669, N. P.

615. ——In debt against an exor. for a legacy, which, it was alleged, he was, by agreement with the legatee, to retain & to pay interest upon, deft. pleaded Stat. Limitations. It was proposed to take the case out of the Stat. of Limitations, by putting in letters written by deft.'s son, who assisted him in his trade, & received for him money due to him in the way of his business as a shoe manufacturer:—Held: though this would be good evidence to show that the son was his father's agent in matters relating to the father's trade, it was not such evidence of agency as would render the letters of the son admissible in evidence in this case, as it was not evidence to show that the son was authorised to make admissions as to a legacy or exorship. accounts. To show agency as to accounts, evidence must be given of some authority pointing to such accounts.—WHITEHOUSE v. ABBERLEY (1845), 1 Car. & Kir. 642, N. P.

616. — Admission within scope of agency.]—In a cause of collision the libel pleaded declarations of the man who was at the helm of the ship proceeded against, at the time the collision took place:—Held: the declarations could not be pleaded, he not being the agent of the owners.

The declaration of an individual is only to be taken when he is a party in the cause, or an agent of that party, the subject being within the scope of his agency. Upon that principle the admissions of the master are to be received as evidence (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE EUROPA (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 66; 13 Jur. 856.

A., a landowner, objects to a railway passing through his lands. B. promises that it shall be carried past his land by means of a tunnel. A parliamentary notice is sent to A. stating that the railway would pass through his land by means of a tunnel, & his consent is asked. He does not oppose it. The Act passes. The co. begin to construct their railway on the surface of his land. In an action by A. against the co. for not carrying it through his land by a tunnel, A. seeks to give in evidence a conversation between himself & B.:—Held: he must first prove B.'s agency.—LIDDEL v. ABERDEEN STEAM TRAWLING & FISHING CO., LTD.*, [1909] S. C. 335.—SCOT.

638 i. —As to cause of damage.]—In an action for collision :—Held :

evidence of declarations made by the captain of defts.' vessel, as to the cause of the accident, on the day after it had happened, were inadmissible, but the verdict should not be interfered with for their reception, as they appeared to have been only repetitions of what was said by him at the time of the accident.—SHAW v. DE SALABERRY NAVIGATION CO. OF MONTREAL (1859), 18 U. C. R. 541.—CAN.

k. —Regarding goods sold by him.]—In an action brought against the charterers of a vessel for non-delivery of goods shipped under a bill of lading signed by the captain, a declaration of the latter, while in charge of the vessel, that he had sold the goods, was properly admitted in evidence.—*RITCHIE v. iv. Counsel, Solicitors, etc.

643. Admissions by counsel—Whether admissible as proof of amount of debt.—To take a case out of Stat. Limitations pltf. produced a deed whereby deft. had assigned to pltf. & one C. the whole of his property, in trust to secure 6s. 8d. in the pound to his creditors, in which deed was a recital that deft. was indebted to pltf. & the other creditors whose names were thereunder written in the several sums set opposite their respective names in a schedule annexed to the deed. The deed also contained a proviso that "the deed & all the covenants therein" should be void, unless all the creditors signed by a given day. The deed was not executed by all the creditors; neither was pltf.'s name or the amount of his debts inserted in the schedule; nor did he execute the deed:—Held: the amount of pltf.'s debt could not be supplied by the admission of counsel at the trial.—KENNETT v. MILBANK (1831), 8 Bing. 38; 1 Moo. & S. 102; 1 L. J. C. P. 8; 131 E. R. 314.

644. Conditions precedent to admissibility.—Where a party appears by counsel before the court or a judge at chambers in any stage of the cause, & counsel makes an admission of a fact, though unsupported by affidavit, the court will regard such statement as presumably true, & will admit it in evidence when offered by the other side.—HALLER v. See, generally, BARRISTERS, Vol. III., pp. 345, 346.

645. Admissions by solicitor—Within scope of authority—Offer to third party.—Offers made by pltf.'s attorney in the hearing of a third person to do an act relative to the deft., which lay within the scope of his authority, are not admissible evidence to affect the pltf. with such offer. Otherwise, if the offers had been made to the deft.—WILSON v. TURNER (1808), 1 Taunt. 398; 127 E. R. 888.

646. Offer to defendant.—WILSON v. TURNER, No. 645, ante.

647. Admissions for purposes of trial—Whether receivable at new trial.—An agreement by the attorneys to admit on the trial of a cause the execution of an instrument, is evidence on every trial of the cause, though not renewed after the first trial.—ELTON v. LARKINS (1832), 1 Mood. & R. 196; 5 C. & P. 385, N. P.; subsequent proceedings, 8 Bing. 198.

648.—Previously to the trial of an ejectment, deft.'s then attorney signed admissions, commencing, "We hereby agree to admit on the trial of this cause," etc. On the trial the admissions were read. The Ct. of K. B. afterwards granted a new trial, & the attorney for deft. died. The second trial took place on Feb. 11, & on Feb. 7, deft.'s then attorney gave notice to the attorney of the lessor of pltf. that he should make no admissions; & the latter sent back an answer stating that the admissions already made were binding:—Held: on the second trial these admissions were receivable in evidence.

Are not these admissions receivable as being admissions made by a person who was at that time attorney for deft. (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—DOE d. WETHERELL v. BIRD (1835), 7 C. & P. 6, N. P.

See, generally, PRACTICE.

649. If employed in former proceedings.—The only evidence to affect pltf. was, that one S. whom he had employed as the attorney in an action on one of the bills sued on, the actions on which were afterwards consolidated, made a statement, before the other bill was due, that "all the bills," meaning the bills now sued on & those on which the composition had been accepted, were pltf.'s bills:—Held: although the admissibility of the evidence had not been objected to at the trial, as it was the only evidence against pltf., & it was doubtful whether it was admissible, the verdict for deft. was unsatisfactory as not supported by evidence, & a new trial was granted.—BLACKSTONE v. WILSON (1857), 26 L. J. Ex. 229.

650. Before litigation begun—Mere conversation.—In the year 1845, & before ejectment brought, N. applied to W. who was afterwards attorney for deft. in the ejectment, to demand possession of the property, & they had a conversation:—Held: on the trial of the ejectment, evidence of this conversation was not receivable.—DOE d. HULIN v. RICHARDS (1845), 2 Car. & Kir. 216.

651. Discussion between solicitors of both parties.—In a discussion between the attorneys of pltf. & deft., touching the dispensing with certain witnesses at the trial, pltf.'s attorney stated to deft.'s attorney that the debt was one owing from the late husband of deft.:—Held: such statement could not be given in evidence against pltf.—PETCH v. LYON (1846), 9 Q. B. 147; 1 New Pract. Cas. 603; 15 L. J. Q. B. 393; 11 Jur. 37; 115 E. R. 1231.

652.—A plea of set-off referring to an agreement "expressed to be made," between pltf. & deft., & a notice, on the part of deft., to admit the agreement referred to in the plea:—Held: conversation between the attorneys after the notice to admit inadmissible to extend the admission under such nature.—CORBETT v. LEES (1859), 1 F. & F. 679, N. P.

653. Solicitor acting for both parties—Funds misappropriated.—Pltf. lent to deft. £1,000, upon the security of an indenture, which contained a covenant by deft. to surrender certain copyhold premises to pltf.'s use. No surrender was made. D., who acted as attorney for both parties, signed a receipt for the money, & the title-deeds were delivered to him, & he prepared & delivered to deft., but without pltf.'s knowledge, a schedule of the deeds, at the foot of which was a memorandum signed by D., acknowledging the receipt of the deeds, & undertaking to deliver them up on payment of the principal money & interest. The mortgage deed remained in D.'s possession, & he from time to time received the interest & paid it over to pltf. The principal money was paid to D., who appropriated it to his own use, & died insolvent:—Held: D.'s receipt for the principal, & the memorandum signed by him, were admissible in evidence for deft.—WILKINSON v. CANDLISH (1850), 5 Exch. 91; 19 L. J. Ex. 168; 155 E. R. 39.

669. General rule.]—(1) It was proved that in 1859 the agent of the owner of S.'s tenement paid to him sixpence, stating verbally that it was for the lights in G.'s house:—Held: the agent being dead, this was evidence of payment of the rent by G. in 1859.

(2) The principle upon which written entries of a deceased person are admissible in evidence is this, that in the interest of justice where a person who might have proved important material facts in an action is dead, his statements before death relating to that fact are admissible, provided that there is a sufficient guarantee that the statements made by him are true; & it is properly considered that when the statements made by a person were against his interest, those statements in the general run of cases are true. Nor is there any distinction between the written entries of such a deceased person, under such circumstances, & his verbal declarations, although the evidence adduced to prove mere verbal declarations must of course be more carefully watched (THESIGER, L.J.).—BEWLEY v. SUB-SECT. 2.—DECLARATIONS AGAINST INTEREST.

A. In General.

688. General rule.—If a person have peculiar means of knowing a fact, & make a declaration or written entry of that fact, which is against his interest at the time, it is evidence of the fact as between third persons after his death, if have been examined to it in his lifetime. Therefore an entry made by a man-midwife in a book, of having delivered a woman of a child on a certain day, referring to his ledger in which he had made a charge for his attendance, which was marked as paid, is evidence upon an issue as to the age of such child at the time of his afterwards suffering a recovery.—*HIGHAM v. p. Action against administrators after issue joined—Declarations of deceased debtors—Whether admissible.—C. sued M. & R., M. accepted service & acknowledged amount due, but R. pleaded to the action. Before trial both defts. died. Then C. R. & R., as administrators of R., were, before trial, made parties to the action. At the trial C. was examined as a witness in support of his own case, & when asked what had taken place between him & deceased M. & R., the judge ruled that the evidence was inadmissible:—Held: in an action against administrators made parties to an action after issue joined, but before trial, pltf. could not give any evidence in his own favour of dealings with a deceased deft.—*CHESLEY v. 689. —.]—Upon a question whether certain ancient books, from 1586 to 1693, preserved in the archives of the Dean & Chapter of E., entitled Rentals, & containing columns of the names of their estates with the rents reserved on each, & solvits written in different hand-writings against such rents, were entries made by the receivers of the dean & chapter charging themselves with the receipt of the rents, parol evidence cannot be received to prove them to be receivers' books, by showing that the receivers of the dean & chapter for the last sixty years had kept their books of accounts in the same form. But it appearing that some of the entries in such books, though not the entries as to the rent of the estate in question, contained internal evidence of their being the books of receivers; by such entries as "solvit mihi," & "solvit per me." Signed with the initials N. W.; which entries imported that N. W. was therein accounting to the dean & chapter for money paid to himself, & with the receipt of which he debited himself; the ct. directed a new trial, in order to have the inspection of the books again submitted to the judge at Nisi Prius.—*Doe d. 690. —.]—It is no objection to the admissibility of a book, containing an account in which a deceased receiver charges himself with money paid to him, that, on the opposite side of the account, the receiver discharges himself to the same extent, or that the account, being in his handwriting, is not signed by him; or that the name of the party on whose account the money is received, does not appear in the book, it being shown aliunde, that the person making the entry did not receive the money on his own account. An entry in a man's own handwriting, charging himself with the receipt of money, is evidence after the party's death.—Rowe v. BRENTON (1828), 8 B. & C. 737; 2 State Tr. N. S. 251; 3 Man. & Ry. K. 700. —[J.—]—The admissibility in evidence of statements by a deceased person as being against his interest is governed by the following rules: (a) deceased must have made a statement of some fact of the truth of which he had peculiar knowledge. The rule applies only as to acts done by deceased & not by third parties; (b) such fact must have been to deceased's immediate prejudice—that is, against his interest at the time when he stated it; (c) deceased must have known the fact to be against his interest when he stated it; (d) the interest to which the statement must be adverse must be a pecuniary or a proprietary one.

705. May be written or oral.—[J.—]The principle laid down in *Higham v. 707. May be by conduct—Entering on allotment under enclosure award.—[J.—]In 1818, R. enclosed a piece of land of 11 perches lying by the side of a lane which was a highway in the manor of W. At that time G. was the owner in fee of the adjoining freehold land. In 1820 G. died having devised his estates to H. W. G. for life with remainders over. In 1836 a private Act was passed by which comrs. were empowered to enclose & allot the wastes of the manor, including encroachments made within 20 years of the passing of the Act & pieces of waste land lying by the sides of any public roads or lanes. In 1837 R. died & W. F. R., his heir, took possession of the 11 perches. In 1838 the comrs. made & published their award by which they awarded to H. W. G. two allotments, one of 24 perches which included the 11 perches, & another of 29 perches, similarly situate. H. W. G. took possession of the second allotment; but W. F. R. remained in possession of the piece of 11 perches till he sold it in 1859 to deft. In 1874 H. W. G. died & pltf. succeeded to the estate under the will of G. He then brought ejectment against deft. to recover the 11 perches:—Held: the admission of H. W. G. against his interest by accepting the allotment under the award, was strong evidence that the land was waste of the manor, & rebutted the presumption arising from the situation of the slips of land that they belonged to him as owner of the adjoining land. Consequently pltf.'s right of entry commenced from the time of the award, when there was a tenancy for life, & not from 1818; therefore Stat. Limitations had not run against pltf. & he was entitled to recover.—GERY v. REDMAN (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 161; 45 L. J. Q. B. 267; sub nom. REDMAN v. GERY, 24 W. R. 270.

deaths, be made use of in evidence, as an admission against interest, to prove these payments against third persons.—FOSTER v. M'MAHON (1847), 11 I. Eq. R. 287.—IR.

708. Sufficiency of acknowledgment of receipts.]

—In an action by the corpn. of Exeter, for petty customs & port duties payable on goods landed at T., pltf.s., to show the receipt of such dues in former times, produced a series of accounts purporting to be of the receipts by the receivers of the city. It was proved that the receivers accounts were regularly audited, & that no one could, at the time to which the evidence related, be mayor till he had been receiver & had his accounts audited. Down to a certain time, the accounts were not signed at all; afterwards they were regularly signed by the auditors only. One entry of the latter class stated the receipt by B., a receiver, of a sum for town dues from W.; & with this entry, was found a paper stating that W. had received a sum for town dues, almost exactly corresponding with that stated in the entry, & at the time of which it bore date. No evidence was given as to the handwriting of the latter paper. B. & W. were both dead. The documents were more than thirty years old. No one of them stated the receipt to be "by me"; but the third person was used:—Held: all the documents were admissible evidence.—EXETER CORPN. v. WARREN (1844), 5 Q. V., steward to pltf.'s ancestor, the then Earl of A. In one of those books J. V. was debited, in 1782, with the receipt of rent for the premises in question. The balance of the account for the half year was struck but was not signed: under it was written in a different hand "The above balance is accounted for in a general statement at the end of the year's account ending Michaelmas 1793, entered in a subsequent book." This entry was dated Feb. 18, 1795, & was signed by the then earl & by "J. V. jun." The balance was carried down in the account, & balances were struck in each half year: none were signed by J. V.; but under each was a similar entry signed by the earl & J. V. jun. until the end of the last book, where was entered: "Balance due to J. V., £70, Feb. 18, 1795. The above account was this day settled; & the balance, £76, due thereon to J. V. sen., was paid by the Earl of A. to J. V. jun., & the vouchers delivered up to his lordship." This was signed by the earl & J. V. jun. No evidence was given of the character or position of J. V. jun., or that he was dead, or that he had ever existed:—Held: inasmuch as the entry was produced from the proper custody, & purported to be 55 years old, it was not necessary to prove that J. V. jun. was dead. Inasmuch as J. V. jun. charged himself with the receipt of the last balance, & the entry of the payment of rent was part of the balance in that year which was carried down so as to form part of the last balance, the entry was admissible evidence of the payment of rent.—*DOE d. D. Whether Personal Knowledge Necessary.

724. General rule.]—(1) An entry by a deceased person charging himself, is admissible against strangers, even though it appears that the facts stated in that entry were not known to him of his own knowledge.

(2) Ancient answers of conventional tenants of a manor, stating the rights of the lord of manor, are admissible in evidence even against the freeholders of the manor, but, if they state facts only, e.g. that "the commons of the manor do belong to the tenants of the manor unstinted, who have always enjoyed the same under the yearly rent of 33s. 4d. as by the records thereof remaining with the auditor of the duchy appeareth; unto which, for the more certainty, we refer ourselves," they are not admissible in evidence.

(3) Declarations of a deceased lord of a manor, as to the extent of his rights over the wastes of a manor, are not admissible in evidence: aliter, if spoken of the extent of the wastes only.—CREASE v. BARRETT (1835), 1 Cr. M. & R. 919; 5 Tyr. 458; 4 L. J. Ex. 297; 149 E. R. 1353.

Manchester & Milford Ry. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 685; Mors-Le-Blanch v. Wilson (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 227.

725. ——(1) The next ground of argument is that in all cases where the party has known the facts & is dead, & has made declarations & these declarations are against his interest, & would, if he had been living, subject him to a prosecution, such declarations are receivable in evidence. That is the broad & general proposition. That proposition cannot be sustained (LORD LYNDEHURST, C.).

(2) It is not true that the declarations of deceased persons are in all circumstances receivable in evidence, when in some way or other they might injuriously affect the interest of the party making them (LORD LYNDEHURST, C.).

(3) Nor is it true that because, while living, a party would be excused from answering as to certain facts, his declarations as to those facts become evidence after his death (LORD LYNDEHURST, C.).

(4) In the first place we must see that the evidence there was admitted, not because the subject matter of the declaration was within the peculiar knowledge of the party making the declaration, but that it was a declaration made against an interest of a very specific nature, viz., a pecuniary interest (LORD BROUGHAM).

(5) The rule, as understood now, is that the only declarations of deceased persons receivable in evidence made against the proprietary or pecuniary interest of the party making them, when the subject matter of such declarations is within the peculiar knowledge of the party so making them (LORD BROUGHAM).—SUSSEX PEERAGE CASE (1844), 11 Cl. & Fin. 85; 6 State Tr. 726. ——(1) On an issue as to the right of L. to a certain fishery, entries of a deceased receiver, charging himself with the receipt of rent from a sub-receiver, due from certain persons, of whom the sub-receiver was one, for fixing a net in the fishery, are evidence in support of L.'s right.

(2) If a person have peculiar means of knowing a fact, & make a declaration or written entry of that fact, which is against his interest at the time, it is evidence of that fact, as between third persons, after his death (PARKES, B.).

(3) If an entry is admissible as being against the interest of the party making it, it carries with it the whole statement. But if the entry is made merely in the course of a man's duty, it does not go beyond those matters which it was his duty to enter (POLLOCK, C.B.).—PERCIVAL v. NANSON (1851), 7 Exch. 1; 21 L. J. The single question here is, whether these entries be not admissible evidence? It is clear that where a steward charges himself with the receipt of money, it shall be received in evidence before a jury, to show that such sum was received by him. But it has been objected that the steward's accounts should have been signed by him: if the entry be not in the handwriting of the steward, undoubtedly it must be signed by him: but here all these entries were written by the steward himself, & therefore they were evidence to charge him with the receipt of the money; & if so, they should have been received in evidence on the trial of this cause (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—*BARRY v. a. Admission of receipt of sum of money—Supporting claim for larger sum.—In an action by the exors. of A., the father, against the extrix. of B., the son, on an agreement said to be lost, to recover £300 alleged to have been lent by A. to B., the defence was that the money was a gift, on condition that the son should pay the father an annuity at the rate of 4 per cent. during his life. It was clearly proved that the £300 was advanced by A. to B., & that B. gave a note or writing of some kind for it; & it appeared that A., during his lifetime, had, in Oct. 1861, sued B.'s extrix. for the money. B. died on June 15, 1861. Pltf. gave in evidence the following receipt, signed by A., dated Apr. 28, 1861, which had been found among A.'s papers, attached to a memorandum book kept by him: "Received from my son B. the sum of £48 for interest of £300 at 4 per cent. due May 1 next, according to agreement, which I cannot find, so I have put the receipt on this paper." There was no evidence to show at what time this was made. Deft. put in the following receipt, also signed by A., dated May 3, 1858: "Received from my son B. the sum of £12, being one

An entry in a book found among the muniments of the N. family was tendered in evidence, for the purpose of proving the affirmative of the issue. The entry, which was made by a steward of that family, spoke of an indenture which "recited a lease made by the Earl of A.," & which, tracing the lands into the possession of R. H. went on to say that "R. H. demiseth unto, etc., all those pasture grounds lying in K., in the parish of P., parcel of the manor of H.":—Held: this entry was a mere recital of some document which the writer had seen or heard of, & was not admissible either as an entry made by a person in the discharge of his duty, or as an entry against the interest of the person who made it, nor was it evidence of reputation to prove that the lands were parcel of the manor.—PADWICK v. —At the trial of an action of detinue by pltf., as administratrix of her deceased husband, for the recovery of a policy of insurance, effected by him on his own life, evidence was tendered by defts. & admitted, that the policy had been given by deceased in his lifetime to his mother, deft. R., accompanied with words to the effect that it was given to her for her own use & benefit; evidence of other conversations of the deceased to the same effect was also tendered by deft. & admitted. Pltf., who questioned the truth of this evidence, tendered evidence of conversations between herself & her deceased husband, tending to show that deceased intended the policy as a provision for his wife, pltf., or at all events that she should share in the produce & benefit of it, but this evidence was rejected by the learned judge as inadmissible:—Held: assuming the policy to have been given to deft. as alleged & proved by her at the trial, it was no longer the property of deceased, & any words of his tending to derogate from the validity of the gift were clearly not admissible in evidence, & therefore the evidence tendered by pltf. to that effect was rightly rejected, on the ground that the conversations in question were statements of the deceased in his own favour; & for the converse reason, the evidence of deft., objected to by pltf., was rightly received as being admissions of deceased against his own interests.—RUMMENS v. —Where an entry in the handwriting of a deceased person is primâ facie against his interest, it is admissible as evidence for all purposes, irrespective of its effect or value when received. The following entry in the handwriting of a deceased person: "J. W. paid me three months' interest," which was followed by other entries pointing to a loan to J. There was no evidence that at or about the time of the survey B. had any interest in either lot 3 & 4; but it was shown that he obtained a conveyance of lot 2 two months afterwards, & of lot 3 in 1830. Surveyors were not at that time under any obligation to make notes of surveys; & it was not proved that the entry was made contemporaneously with the transaction:—Held: the notes of the survey were not sufficiently connected with the entry of payment to be read with it as an entry against interest.—O'CONNOR v. The declaration of a deceased person, to the effect that he had destroyed a will which gave him a life interest in certain freehold property, was admitted, as being prima facie against the presumption, arising from his possession of it, of his being the freeholder, although on a full examination of all the facts it would appear that the declaration was actually to his advantage, because, apart from the existence of a will, he, in fact, took no interest in the property. —*Re ADAMS, BENTON v. Mere possibility of future liability—Statement by clerk that goods received.]—It was the duty of a confidential clerk, who managed a branch business of pltf.s, as general merchants, to keep them duly advised of all business transacted; in discharge of this duty, he wrote them a letter, stating that deft. had sent three cases to the office, & giving details of the transaction under which they were sent:—Held: this letter was not admissible in evidence against deft. after the clerk's death, as it was neither a declaration against direct pecuniary interest, nor an entry made in the discharge of a duty to do a particular act & make a record of it.

In the present case all the admission by [the clerk] that can be said to be against interest amounts to no more than an admission that he has the care of the three chests which have arrived at the office, & the possibility that the statement might make him liable in the case of their being lost is an interest of too remote a nature to make the statement admissible in evidence (BLACKBURN, J.). —*SMITH v. Equal possibility of advantage & disadvantage—Entry in stockbroker's book of purchase of shares for client.]—During the trial of an action to establish pltf.'s right to be indemnified by the two defts., or one of them in respect of 200 shares transferred into pltf.'s name as trustee for defts. or one of them, pltf. desired to prove that the shares had been bought on the Stock Exchange for one of defts. through his brokers, Messrs. G. & D. G. was dead, & pltf. tendered in evidence an entry in the day book of the firm of a purchase of 200 shares by G., for the particular deft.; & having proved that the entry was in the handwriting of G., that it was made by him in the ordinary course of business at the time of the purchase as a memorandum of the transaction, & that the ledger of the firm was made up from the day book, contended that it was admissible in evidence as a declaration made by a deceased person, first, because it was made against the pecuniary interest of the person making it; & secondly, because it had been made in the ordinary course of business:—Held: it was not admissible upon the first ground, because it might, according to the turn of the market, have been to the advantage of the deceased; nor upon the second ground, because it was not made in the performance of any duty.—*MASSEY v. (a) In General.

759. General rule.]—In trespass for taking pltf.'s goods, with a plea of not possessed, it was proposed to show that the goods were not his, by showing, inter alia, that he was not 21. To show this, it was proved, that, by the custom of the law of the Jews, children are circumcised on the eighth day from their birth, & that it was the duty of the Chief Rabbi to perform this rite, & make an entry of it in a book. It was proposed to give in evidence the entry in this book of pltf.'s circumcision, the entry being in the handwriting of a Chief Rabbi, who was dead:—Held: (1) the entry was not receivable in evidence.

809. Declaration by deceased husband that wife's will not duly revoked—Husband entitled to lesser estate under will than under intestacy.]—In a probate suit it was alleged that testatrix destroyed her will at a time when she was not of sound mind, memory, or understanding. Under the will which had been destroyed her husband took a life interest in her estate, whereas under an ante-nuptial settlement he was, in the events that had happened, entitled absolutely to her estate:—Held: a statement by the husband, who had died before the suit was brought, that he did not think testatrix was of sound mind when she destroyed her will, was admissible in evidence as being in disparagement of his own title by limiting it to a life estate.—FAWKE v. MILES (1911), 27 T. L. R. 202.

810. Whether declarant must be in sole possession.]—A. had, 45 years ago, enclosed a piece of ground from the waste, & built a cottage on part of it; he died 29 years ago, &, after that, his widow & daughter lived on the premises till the death of the former, a month before the trial:—Held: the declarations of the mother were evidence for the lessor of pltf., although she was not in the sole occupation of the premises, & although she was not on the premises when such declarations were made.—*DOE d. E. made the following endorsement upon it:—"Received of W. D. the sum of £280, on account of the within note, the £300 having been originally advanced to E. H." In an action brought by W. D. [after the death of J. E.], who had paid the whole amount due against J. H., to recover contribution against him "as a co-surety":—Held: the endorsement was admissible in evidence, to prove not only the payment of the £280, but also that the money was originally advanced to E. H. as principal.—DAVIES v. HUMPHREYS (1840), 6 M. & W. 153; 9 L. J. Ex. 263; 4 Jur. 250; 151 E. R. 361.

& transactions together, in the course of which a bond for £4,000 was given by A. B. to C. D. Both of them afterwards died. E. F., the representative of C. D., obligee, filed a bill to enforce the bond. G. H., the representative of A. B., the obligor, filed a bill to have the accounts between A. B. & C. D. taken, & the bond made subject to such accounts, & proved an account in C. D.'s handwriting. A decree was made in both suits referring it to the master to take the accounts, & to inquire under what circumstances the bond was given, & in the decree the account in C. D.'s handwriting was entered as read:—Held: on exceptions to the master's report, this account was receivable by the master in evidence as well against as for G. H. the representative of A. B.—DICKIN v. WARD, WARD v. DICKIN (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 266; 20 L. J. Ch. 211; 17 L. T. O. S. 57; 15 Jur. 834; 64 E. R. 820.

820. —[(1) Written statements by a deceased person are not admissible as made in the course of duty unless it is shown that it was the duty of the deceased person to do the particular thing & to record the fact of having done it contemporaneously.

(2) Confidential plans or reports made to the War Office are not admissible as evidence of reputation if they were not intended as permanent records affecting the property or revenue of the Crown or any grant by the Crown.

B. Form of Declaration.

821. May be written or oral.—A deceased person who was employed to serve notices to quit, & whose duty it was to inform his employer of their service, was sent with a notice to serve on R. C., & on his return he signed a memorandum, "Sept. 29, served R. C." It turned out that, in fact, he had served not R. C., but his father, W. C. It was then proposed to show that he stated this fact to his employer on his return, but that the memorandum having been prepared beforehand was not altered:—Held: this evidence was not admissible, as it was not made in the course of business or discharge of a duty.

Semble: there is no difference in the admissibility of a declaration made by a deceased person, in the course of business or discharge of duty, whether such declaration be in writing or by word of mouth.—STAPYLTON v. CLOUGH (1853), 2 E. & B. 933; 2 C. L. R. 266; 23 L. J. Q. B. 5; 22 L. T. O. S. 100; 18 Jur. 60; 2 W. R. 60; 118 E. R. 1016.

Annotation:—Reid. Smith v. Blakey (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 326.

822. Necessity for signature.]—It was the practice that the proceedings of the Provost & Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, should be entered in a book, & that the entries should be signed by the Registrar of the College, who was a notary public, & who signed the entries in that character. One or two of the entries were not so signed:—Held: an unsigned entry was not admissible in evidence, notwithstanding that it was proved to be in the handwriting of the person who usually made the entries at the time when it was made.—FOX v. BEARBLOCK (1881), 17 Ch. D. 429; 50 L. J. Ch. 489; 44 L. T. 508; 45 J. P. 648; 29 W. R. 661.

C. Relation to Declarant's Own Acts.

824. General rule.]—In an action of ejectment to recover 22 acres of land, claimed as parcel of a certain manor, lessor of pltf., who sought to trace his title through one Sir E. C. in order to prove a lease to one H. & assignments by him to P. & by P. to Sir E. C. & that the land in question was part of the manor, offered in evidence an old book found in the muniment room of the family to whom the manor belonged. This book, amongst other entries & receipts in the hand-writing of the then steward, contained an entry of the lease in question, & a minute to the effect that "H.'s widow hath assigned to Sir E. C. who claimeth ten years to come." An ineffectual search for the originals had been made, & notice had been given to def. to produce them:—Held: the book was not receivable in evidence, as containing an entry made by a person in the course of his business; & if it was admissible as evidence of reputation, it merely went to show the extent of the manor.

By an entry in the course of business I mean at a time contemporaneous with that duty; there must be some evidence to show that it was contemporaneous, & a matter which it was the steward's business to do; as, for example, suppose it were his business to enter the dates of leases which he granted, the entry of the dates of the leases might be admissible as matters done in the course of his business. This is not an entry of any thing done by the steward, but only what he has gathered by hearsay of a title which he has put down in his book (PARKE, B.).—DOE d. PADWICK v. SKINNER (1848), 3 Exch. 84; 18 L. J. Ex. 107; 13 J. P. 200; 154 E. R. 766; sub nom. PADWICK v. SKINNER, 12 L. T. O. S. 131.

828. Entry in postage book of letter to be posted—Whether evidence of posting.]—Neither proof of an entry made by a deceased person in the ordinary course of business in a postage book of a letter to be posted, nor proof of possession by the deceased person for the purpose of posting, is sufficient evidence of postage.—ROWLANDS v. DE VECCHI (1882), 1 Cab. & El. 10.

Surveyors were not at that time under any obligation to make notes of surveys, & it was not proved that the entry was made contemporaneously with the transaction:—Held: the entry was not admissible as one made in the course of business, or in the performance of a quasi public duty.—*O'CONNOR v. 829 ii. —.]—To determine a disputed boundary line between two lots, the field notes of S., a land surveyor, were offered in evidence but objected to on the ground that they were not made by S. in the execution of his duty as such surveyor:—Held: the objection was good, & the evidence inadmissible.—*MCGREGOR v. 832 i. In course of business.]—In replevin for goods sold for taxes, pltf. having succeeded for want of evidence of any demand by the collector, def. moved for a new trial on affidavits showing the discovery, since the trial, in the collector's blank receipt book, opposite to the receipt intended to have been given for these taxes, of a minute made by the collector, "Wrote Jan. 21, 1864." The death of the collector was shown, but not when he died, nor when the entry was made, nor that it was in the usual course of business to make such an entry:—Held: it would be insufficient to establish a demand, & a new trial was refused.—*BARTON v. first plea, pltf's. offered in evidence two entries made by a deceased clerk of pltf.'s attorney's in a diary kept by him according to the course of business in the office, in which it was his duty to enter daily every transaction in which he was engaged. By the first of these entries the clerk acknowledged the receipt by him of £100 for the purpose of tendering it to the deft. This was received without objection. The second entry was as follows: "Attending Mr. L., tendering him £100 for each of the plates, etc., when he declined to let me have the same," etc.—Held: both these entries were properly admitted, both operating to charge the party by whom they were made, & appearing to have been made in the usual course of business, by a party having peculiar means of knowing the fact, & no interest in mis-stating it, & capable of being examined to the fact had he been living.—MARKS v. 851. Entry by parish overseer's assistant—As to removal of pauper.]—The examinations on which an order of removal was made stated that G. was employed by the overseers of resp. parish to remove the paupers to applt. parish, under a prior order of 1826, & that after he returned from removing them he signed this endorsement on the order: "Delivered to Mr. W., overseer of D., by T. G."; that G. was dead, & his handwriting was proved. On the trial of the appeal, it appeared that G. was not an overseer, but had been employed by the overseers to remove the paupers, & that they had been seen on the morning in question leaving resp. parish with G. & that they returned the same night with 4s. Appls. objected to the admissibility of the endorsement in evidence; & also contended that resps. were estopped by a prior order of removal in 1844, which was quashed without entering into the merits of the settlement, "by reason of the informality & insufficiency of the examinations":—Held: the examinations contained evidence of the removal under the prior order of 1826.

Semble: the endorsement was evidence, as being made by a person deceased, in the course a fishing vessel which deceased was building:—Held: entries made by a deceased clerk in the ordinary course of his duties were receivable in evidence.—KAULBACH v. BEGIN (1915), 49 N. S. R. 66.—CAN.

h. Entry by steward—In rent-book.]—An entry in a rent-book in the handwriting of pltf.'s deceased mother, who had managed his affairs, admitting the receipt of rent by her, amounts to a recognition by her that certain entries of payments, recorded in the preceding part of the same page in the handwriting of a person since deceased, of rent which ought to have been received by her, represented receipts for which she was accountable, & were consequently admissible in evidence.—RICHARDS v. 852. Letter written by agent to principal—As to terms of agreement.—Letters written by a deceased agent to his principal subsequently to the date of an agreement alleged to have been made by him on behalf of the principal, detailing conversations with the other party, are not admissible on behalf of the principal to prove that no such agreement was entered into, or that the agent was not authorised to make it, & that the principal never knew of nor ratified it. Although the alleged agreement was verbal only, & the agent afterwards, & after the writing of the letters, signed a written agreement confirming the verbal one, the letters are inadmissible to prove that the agent was not authorised to sign the written agreement. It makes no difference that the agent is dead, unless the letters were written at the time of the conversations detailed, & it was the agent's duty to communicate them to his principal at that time.—*TURNER v. 860. — — — — —]—At the trial of a probate suit the entries in a diary of a deceased solr. were admitted as evidence:—Held: (1) the evidence was properly admitted as being made in the usual course of business; (2) the fact of the entry being made in a diary was sufficient evidence that it was made contemporaneously.—ESCH v. NELSON (1885), 1 T. L. R. 610.

861. In letter on client's behalf.—(1) A letter written nearly twenty years ago by a solr., since deceased, to one of the trustees, in which, professing to act as the solr. for the cestui que trust, he stated that he was authorised by him to say that he was willing to accept a certain sum of money in liquidation of what was due to him from the trustees, was received in evidence, the solr. being dead, against the cestui que trust, although the latter denied any knowledge of the solr., upon the ground that it was a letter written in the course of the business of the person writing it. (2) The value of such evidence is a question for the consideration of the jury, or of the ct., which has the province of a jury in considering any question of fact.

(3) A bill of costs & a cash account of deceased solr. of trustee were held admissible in evidence in a suit instituted by the cestui que trust, twenty years afterwards, to charge his trustees.

This bill of costs is also admissible in evidence because here a solr. is charging himself with various sums he had received & this makes it receivable in evidence, the entries being against the interest of the party making it (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*BRIGHT v. 864. Entry in case book.—Entries made by a doctor in his case book as to the nature of the complaint for which he treated a patient are not, after the death of the doctor who made them, admissible in evidence as entries made in the course of business in pursuance of a duty, at all events where he was not in partnership & did not prepared at the same time & returned to his office in the evening, having endorsed on the duplicate of each notice a memorandum of his having delivered it to the tenant; & two of them were proved to have been delivered by him on that occasion:—Held: on the trial of an ejectment after the attorney's death, the endorsement so made by him was admissible evidence to prove the service of a third notice.

a. Admission of mistake by land surveyor.—A land surveyor was called upon by the Surveyor-General to explain an overlapping in the diagrams of two farms which he had surveyed several years before. 873 ii.—Upon the question of the legitimacy of one E. H. an entry, dated in 1804, in the Roman Catholic registry of marriages & baptisms of a parish was offered in evidence of the baptism of the said E. H., in which she was described as the child of J. H. & H. his wife, signed by a clergyman who was proved to be deceased, & to have been the Roman Catholic curate of the parish. Evidence was also given that it was the duty of the clergyman, when baptising, to make an entry of the baptism, & to add a statement showing whether or not the child was born in lawful wedlock:—Held: the entry was inadmissible because it was not contemporaneous, & because there was no evidence to show that the curate officiated at, or had personal knowledge of, the marriage.—RYAN v. RING, LANNEN, INTERVENIENT (1889), 25 L. R. Ir. 184.—IR.

relative to a collision & signed by him & the captain nearly two days after the collision, cannot be used as evidence on behalf of the ship in which they were made, after the decease of the persons making & signing them. (2) Depositions made by persons on board a ship relative to a collision cannot, even after the decease of the deponents, be used as evidence on behalf of that ship at the trial.

(3) When such evidence as this, where the party who furnished it is dead, is admitted, it must be evidence which relates to an act done by himself & not by others. We all know, as a matter of common knowledge in these proceedings, that it is the duty of the mate to enter not only what manœuvres are executed on board his ship & the navigation of his vessel, but to state what the cause of the collision was, & whether it was in consequence of the manœuvres & navigation of the other ship (PHILLIMORE, J.).

(4) Neither do I think that the entry can be considered as contemporaneous; also it was in the interest of the party who made it; & the authorities point to this—that when such evidence is admitted it must relate to acts done by the person who makes the entry & not by others. But the mate must enter, not only manœuvres for his own ship, but also the consequences of the manœuvres & navigation of the other ship. These different sets of facts are so inextricably mixed up that it is very difficult, if not impossible, to separate them. I therefore for these reasons reject this evidence (PHILLIMORE, J.).—THE HENRY COXON (1878), 3 P. D. 156; 47 L. J. P. 83; 38 L. T. 819; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 18; sub nom. THE HARRY COXON, 27 W. R. 263.

— Report made a month after survey.]

—On a motion by a shareholder to rectify the register of members of a co. by removing the name of appct. therefrom on the ground of misrepresentations in the prospectus of the co., appct. tendered as evidence of untruths in the prospectus a report which had been made by an agent of the co. who was employed by the directors to inspect & report to them on the estates which had been acquired by the co. Objection was taken to the admissibility of the report as evidence because the same was made one month after the inspection had taken place, the agent having been lying half that time unconscious in a hospital. He had died shortly before the motion came on for hearing:—Held: a document could not be admitted as evidence after the death of the writer, even though made in the course of his duty, unless it was contemporaneous; & in the present case the report in question came within that well-established rule.—Re DJAMBI (SUMATRA) RUBBER ESTATES, LTD. (1912), 107 L. 884. Presumption of contemporaneity.]—In an action for railway calls, pltf. proved that it was the course of business for C., a clerk, to fill up printed notices of the calls & direct them to the shareholders, & then to put the notices into a basket; & it was the practice for another clerk to post the letters which were in the basket, which he had done on this occasion. C. was dead, but a list of shareholders, containing the name of deft., was produced in his handwriting, & endorsed by him, “Letters sent out.” C. had received instructions to make out such list, & had been seen filling up & directing the notices, with such a list before him:—Held: the list so endorsed was admissible as evidence that notice of the call had been sent to deft., notwithstanding it was not distinctly shown when the endorsement was made.—*EASTERN UNION RY. DUNRAVEN (LORD) v. LLEWELLYN, No. 1026, post.

998. — Right of free warren claimed by all copyholders.]—(1) Reputation is admissible evidence of a claim of free warren, by prescription, over an entire manor. Therefore, a private act for the inclosure of common lands within the manor, in which the interest of copyholders appeared by the recital, & which contained a proviso expressly saving the rights of the lord to free warren in the manor, in as ample a manner as the lord had theretofore enjoyed it, is admissible evidence to prove the right as against a copyholder.

(2) On the same ground, the declarations of deceased copyholders as to the existence of the franchise over all the copyholds, is admissible for the like purpose.—CARNARVON (EARL) v. VILLEBOIS (1844), 13 M. & W. 313; 14 L. J. Ex. 233; 153 E. R. 130.

Right must be claimed as public right—Highway.]—In an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, deft., in order to prove that there was a public highway across the locus in quo, put in evidence a copy of a map made by order of a former lord of the manor of which the land in question formed part:—Held: the map was not admissible as amounting to a declaration by a deceased person as to public right; inasmuch as, first, the map, if a declaration at all, was a declaration only as to the matter in respect of which it had been used, viz., the defining of the copyholds; & secondly, the map itself did not describe the road as a highway.—PIPE v. 903. Competency of declarant—Justices—As to boundaries of hundred.]—In an action against the hundred of B., for the felonious demolition of Nottingham Castle by rioters, pltf. produced in evidence certain orders made by the justices at the quarter sessions for the county, in which the castle was described as being in that hundred. No proof was given that the justices who made those orders were residents in the county:—

Held: the orders were admissible as evidence of reputation, for that the justices, from the nature of their office, must be presumed cognisant of the subject.—NEWCASTLE (DUKE) v. 904. Effect of interest of declarant.]—A former owner of the demesne of a manor had made the following entry in a private manuscript volume, "About 1763, soon after I came to the estate, I called it at three or four churches that there was no road through the demesne but to the Hall, & the mill & the tenants above wall to church, which I hope will be remembered for the good of the family":—Held: this memorandum was not admissible in evidence on behalf of the present owner.

A person cannot by a declaration make evidence to be used for himself or for his successors after his decease. If this be a declaration at all, it was made by a person whose mind could not be free from bias; & I am not aware that any case is to be found in which the declaration of a deceased person, obviously for his own interest, has been received in evidence (JOYCE, J.).—BROCKLEBANK v. in the former suit as in the present.—FREEMAN v. PHILLIPPS (1816), 4 M. & S. 436; 105 E. R. 914.

SUB-SECT. 5.—DECLARATIONS AS TO PEDIGREE.

A. In General.

908. General rule.—BERKELEY PEERAGE CASE, No. 447, ante.

909.—ISAAC v. GOMPERTZ (1837), Hub-back on Evidence of Succession, p. 650.

910.—Discussion of the principles upon which hearsay evidence is admissible in cases of pedigree.

Qu. : whether the reasons & grounds upon which births & times of births, marriages, deaths, legitimacy, consanguinity, etc., are allowed to be proved by hearsay, from proper quarters, in a controversy merely genealogical are not applicable to declarations made by a deceased person as to where his family came from, where he came from, or “of what place” his father was designated.

A general rule against allowing particular facts or single acts to be proved by hearsay, which is frequently applied in cases of public right, or custom, must be considered as extending, though probably in a less wide or less ample manner, or with more qualifications to cases of pedigree.

A birth, however, from a single woman, a birth from a married woman, a death, a marriage, is a particular fact or a single act, which, of course, is provable by hearsay, hearsay from a proper quarter, on a question of pedigree. & as I apprehended it to be settled that the time absolutely or relatively of a particular birth may be, so I am not aware that the time absolutely or relatively of a marriage or death may not be, thus proved upon a question of that nature; but for such a purpose is there a solid ground of distinction between time & place? There may be, but I do not distinctly perceive it (KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C.).—SHIELDS v. BOUCHER (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 40; 63 E. R. 962.

Annotations :—Consd. Haines v. Guthrie (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 818. Refd. Bauer v. Mitford (1859), 7 W. R. 570.

911.—(1) Hearsay evidence is admissible in cases of pedigree, being statements of living witnesses as to that which they have heard persons now deceased say with respect to the pedigree of their family; they being proved aliunde to be members of that family by extrinsic evidence.

(2) Although the ct. will admit hearsay evidence in cases of pedigree, it looks at such evidence with great jealousy, the parties giving it being interested witnesses; but discrepancies may go to confirm the truth of such statements.—BAUER v. MITFORD (1859), 7 W. R. 570; subsequent proceedings, 29 L. J. Ch. 268.

912.—The declaration of deceased members of a family, though admissible in cases of pedigree, as evidence to prove pedigree, are not admissible to prove the facts which constitute a pedigree, such as birth, death, or marriage, where the case is not one of pedigree.

In an action for goods sold, an affidavit made by the deceased father of deft. in another action, to which pltf. was not a party, stating deft.'s age, was given in evidence to support the defence of infancy:—Held: the evidence was wrongly admitted.—HAINES v. GUTHRIE (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 818; 53 L. J. Q. B. 521; 51 L. T. 645; 48 J. P. 756; 33 W. R. 99, C. A.

913.—Admissible if not primâ facie untrue or biased.—(1) By the law of Scotland statements of a deceased person in relation to facts, which must presumably have been within his personal knowledge, & to which if alive, he could have been examined as a witness, may after his death be received as secondary evidence through the medium of writing, or through the medium of a living person who heard the statement. Where, therefore, a member of the family writes a note in a manuscript book to the effect that he has sent original letters to a certain person, & they cannot be found, the copies of such letters, the handwriting, & that the copies were from original letters being proved, the note, & the copies of the letters, are evidence of the truth of the statements within the writer's personal knowledge, & appearing to be so by the letters themselves. (2) So also a statement, whether oral or written, is not vitiated if made with a purpose, where the object was an obvious & legitimate one & one supporting & not discrediting the presumption of truth. But the statement of a deceased person is not admissible as evidence when its terms, or the circumstances in which it was made are such as to beget a reasonable suspicion either that the statement was not in accordance with the truth or that it was a coloured or one-sided version of the truth; & this rule should be applied with greater strictness in criminal cases. (3) A minute of date of 1749, from an original unsigned minute book, produced from the proper custody & kept in accordance with a charter of a society, is admissible evidence.

(4) A memorandum in a register of a church by its deceased rector made about 108 years ago, though not a contemporaneous entry made in the regular course of the register is admissible as evidence, & goes to prove that the rector did the things stated in the memorandum.—LAUDERDALE PEERAGE (1885), 10 App. Cas. 692, H. L.

914.—Ordinary rule of evidence relaxed.—The law has, in questions of pedigree, relaxed the rules of evidence applicable to the investigation of all other questions, & has admitted much looser evidence in such cases, such evidence as would be excluded in other instances (DR. LUSHINGTON).—MAULE v. MOUNSEY (1844), 1 Rob. Eccl. 40; 8 Jur. 850; 163 E. R. 958.

923. — Relationship of persons known to declarant.]—Demandant offered in evidence a Welsh pedigree. At the foot of the pedigree was the following memorandum: "Collected from parish registers, wills, monumental inscriptions, family records, & history, this account is now presented as correct & as confirming the tradition handed down from one generation to another to T. L., Esq., of C. G., this 4th July 1733 by his loving kinsman, etc. W. L." The signature was proved to correspond with that to the will of W. L., one of the ancestors of demandant. On the back of the document was indorsed: "A true account of my family & origin, T. L. C. G." This document was found by the person who produced it, fifty years ago, amongst the papers of the C. G. family, in a drawer in the mansion-house of the C. G. estate, which had devolved upon him, & the witness proved the indorsement to be in the handwriting of T. L. of C. G.:—Held: the document was admissible to show the relationship of those persons who were described by the framer of the pedigree as living, & who might be presumed to be personally known to him.—*DAVIES v. A. & B. were dead, & there was evidence that, after the birth of C., B. had stated that she had had a son, who was older than C., & had died before the birth of the latter. The Christian name of the son could not be ascertained, & there was no other evidence of his birth or death:—Held: B.'s statements were admissible as a declaration by a deceased person on a question of pedigree.—In the Goods of THOMPSON (1887), 12 P. The issue of the union were two children, a daughter & another child who died. About 1879, the husband returned to this province bringing the daughter with him. Evidence was also given of declarations made by the husband on his return that he had been legally married in the same manner as he would have been had the marriage taken place here, & that the daughter was his legitimate child; & that he had brought her up as such:—Held: apart from the Indian marriage, there was evidence from which a legal marriage according to the recognised form amongst Christians could be presumed, & the daughter was his legitimate child & "legal heir."—ROBB v. ROBB (1891), 20 O. R. 591.—CAN.

PART II. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 5.—B.

936 i. General rule—Whether relationship necessary.]—In India, in cases of pedigree, the declaration of illegitimate members of the family & also of persons who, though not related by blood or marriage to the family, are intimately acquainted with its members & state, is admissible in evidence after the death of the declarant, in the same manner & to the same extent as those of deceased members of the family.—GEURMEER HOSSAIN CHOWDHRY v. USEEMUNISSA KHATOON (1862), 1 Hay, 528.—IND.

B. Competency of Declarant and Witness.

935. General rule.]—Qualification as to evidence of tradition, even upon pedigree. It must be from persons, having such a connection with the party, that it is natural & likely, from their domestic habits, that they are speaking the truth, & could not be mistaken. Upon that principle descriptions in wills, monuments, bibles, etc., are admitted.—WHITELOCKE v. BAKER (1807), 13 Ves. 510; 33 E. R. 385, L. O.

Annotations:—Consd. Berkeley Peerage Case (1811), 4 Camp. 401; Johnson v. Lawson (1824), 2 Bing. 86. Refd. Monkton v. A.-G. (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 147; Slaney v. Wade (1836), 7 Sim. 595; Shields v. Boucher (1846), 1 De G. & Sm. 40; Haines v. Guthrie (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 818.

936. — — — — Whether relationship necessary.]—(1) Declarations, in pedigree cases, can only be received when made by persons related to the family.

(2) Traditional evidence by Roman Catholic priests in Ireland, as to legitimacy of parties, rejected.—CASEY v. O'SHAUNESSY (1843), 7 Jur. 1140.

937. — — — —.]—T., being already married to W., married another woman, by whom he had children, one of whom was deft. Deft. was called to prove declarations by the deceased T. with respect to the first marriage, for the purpose of showing that it was invalid. No proof independent of the declaration itself was given of relationship between T. & deft.:—Held: the declaration was therefore inadmissible, & perhaps the evidence would be inadmissible on the ground that the declaration was by a person whose mind would not be free from bias, it being manifestly for the interest of the deceased to disavow his first marriage.—PLANT v. TAYLOR (1861), 7 H. & N. 211; 31 L. J. Ex. 289; 5 L. T. 318; 8 Jur. N. S. 140; 158 E. R. 453.

938. Question of competency for judge—Though petent witnesses as to their having heard the names of the ancestors recited by members of pltf.'s family on ceremonial & other occasions:—Held: admissible evidence in support of the pedigree on which pltf. based his claim. Such evidence is not open to criticism merely on the ground that the witnesses are relatives. The relationship of a class of witnesses should be considered only with the ordinary caution with which testimony is sifted where sympathy with one side is to be taken for granted, & should not be treated as making them interested or unreliable witnesses. The fact that one of such persons besides being a relative was assisting pltf. in the case, & that the other witnesses were connected with this person by blood or service, is not necessarily sufficient ground for discrediting their evidence.—DEBI PERSHAD CHOWDHRY v. RADHA CHOWDHRAIN (1905), 1 I. L. R. 32 Cal. 84; L. R. 31 Ind. App. 160; 9 C. W. N. 164.—IND.

936 iii. — — — —.]—A document, ancient & genuine, purporting to be a family pedigree, was produced in evidence in a mutation case by J.

The record was brought before the civil ct. in a suit in which pltf.'s relationship to H., the last male owner of certain property, was in question. J. stated that he had received the pedigree from his grandfather. It was not proved who had prepared the pedigree:—Held: it was not necessary to show who had made the statements mentioned in the pedigree, & it was admissible in evidence under Evidence Act, s. 32 (6).—JAHANGIR v. SHIKORAJ SINGH (1915), 1 L. R. 37 All. 600.—IND.

936 iv. — — — —.]—Upon the trial of a question of legitimacy, the certificate of a clergyman, deceased, as to the marriage of the parents, cannot be received in evidence, nor can it be considered in the nature of a declaration in a question of pedigree, the clergyman not being a member of the family.—*FARRELL v. Therefore, in an action of ejectment, declarations by a woman, that her first husband used to say that the estate would go to F., & after his death, to his heir, under whom the lessor of pltf. claimed :—Held : admissible in evidence to show the relationship & affinity of F. to the lessor of pltf.—DOE d. 968. —.]—(1) The admissibility of declarations by members of the family terminates with the commencement of the controversy, & the termination of this admissibility is not affected by any knowledge or ignorance on the part of the declarant of the existence of that controversy; nor is it affected by its being shown that such proceedings were fraudulently commenced with a view to exclude the possibility of any such declaration.

(2) The commencement of the controversy, & not of the institution from which it springs, is the commencement of the lis mota, & terminates the admissibility of family declarations. (3) A declaration made expressly with a view to a probable future contest is admissible quantum valeat. Not so, however, when made in a prior cause on the same subject-matter. (4) A prior cause carried on between the same parties will not be a lis so as to exclude declarations, unless the very point subsequently in dispute upon which it is sought to bring such declaration to bar was then in litigation.—SHEDDEN v. (2) Family memorials, to be admissible as evidence of pedigree, must be spontaneous & have originated before any question has been raised (JAMES, V.-C.).—HILL v. HIBBIT (1870), 25 L. T. 183; 19 W. R. 250, L. C.

(2) The rule if we had been dealing with the law of England here would not have admitted what was stated after the year 1851 by [B.]; for though he was a relative, & the relative of all others who perhaps knew most about it, it was clear that his statement was made post litem motam, after the time he had married another wife (LORD BLACKBURN).

(3) In an attempt on the part of A. to set up an irregular marriage according to the law of Scotland between herself & B., statements prepared by D., pltf. in an action against B. as the alleged husband of A. for A.'s board & lodgings; which statements were signed & in one case corrected by interlineations—by deceased persons who, if alive, would have been competent witnesses, were sought to be used as evidence:—Held: they were not admissible.

(4) There must always be a good deal of caution & consideration about whether the evidence of a deceased man was proving a fact, or whether it was some general, rambling, vague statement. It is only facts which lay within his own knowledge that could be proved in that way; but the dead man's statement of what he could have proved if called as a witness would as a general rule be, valeat quantum, admissible (LORD BLACKBURN).—DYSART PEERAGE CASE (1881), 6 App. Cas. 489, H. S., maternal grandmother of G., the lunatic, made a deposition before the master, in which she stated the connections of the family. In 1854 G. died. In an ejectment in which the question was who was heir-at-law ex parte paternâ of G., the deposition of S., at that time deceased, was tendered in evidence as a declaration of a deceased relative on a matter of pedigree. No evidence was given either way as to whether, in 1806, there was any real dispute as to who was the heir of G. The evidence was objected to as being post litem motam, but received. On a rule for a new trial:—Held: the evidence was properly received; the inquiry as to who was heir-at-law before the master not being in itself a controversy or lis pendens within the rule, & it being no objection that the

SECT. 6.—REPUTATION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—AS TO MATTERS OF PUBLIC AND GENERAL INTEREST.

A. Distinguished from Evidence of Particular Facts.

989. General rule.—Traditionary reputation is evidence of boundary between two parishes & manors; & this though the old persons deceased making the declarations claimed rights of common on the respective wastes, which might be enlarged by such evidence; there being no litigation pending or in contemplation at the time which could induce a belief that they had in view to make evidence for themselves, though the boundary had long before been & afterwards continued to be veratio questio.—NICHOLLS v. PARKER (1805), 14 East, 331; 104 E. R. 629. Annotations:—Refd. Davies v. Morgan (1831), 1 Cr. & J. 587; Barracough v. Johnson (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 99.

990. ———.]—(1) It is no objection to evidence of reputation of a modus, that the deceased person from whom it came was liable to pay tithes.

(2) The essence of reputation is, that if you prove a fact, as, for instance, payment of a sum of money, it must be accompanied with this, that it was so paid in consequence of a reputation (MACDONALD, C.B.).—HARWOOD v. SIMS (1810), Wight. 112; 145 E. R. 1194.

991. ———.]—(1) Composition real by grant of land in lieu of tithe, not proved by reputation of the fact of such an agreement having existed & being the origin of the exemption claimed, although corroborated by evidence of non-payment of tithe for the district, claiming the exemption unless a deed or evidence of one having once existed be put in proof.

Now this is not a modus in discharge of the whole parish, but of A. only, a tract of land lying within the parish (THOMSON, C.B.).

(2) Tradition is only admissible in generalities, & not to show particular facts (GRAHAM, B.).—CHATFIELD v. FRYER (1815), 1 Price, 253; 145 E. R. 1394.

995. ———.]—When a matter of history which is not of general importance is in issue, a statement bearing on the point in issue made by a particular person, since deceased, under no duty to make it is not admissible unless the statement purported to be made from reputation. As to whether or not a church is a parish church is not a matter of general importance.—POWKE v. BERINGTON, [1914] 2 Ch. 308; 83 L. J. Ch. 820; 111 L. T. 440; 58 Sol. Jo. 379.

996. Application of rule—Former existence of houses at particular spot.]—The question being whether a turnpike stood within the limits of a town, CHAMBRE, J., admitted evidence of reputation that the town extended to a certain point, & allowed it to be proved that old people, since dead, had declared that to be the boundary, but not that these people had said that there formerly were houses where none any longer stood; observing that that was evidence of a particular fact, & not of reputation.—*IRELAND v. 1000. — Tree planted on boundary.]—The question in a cause being, whether a particular road, admitted to exist, was public or private, evidence was offered that a person, since deceased, had planted a willow on a spot adjoining the road, on ground of which he was a tenant, saying, at the same time, that he planted it to show where the boundary of the road was when he was a boy:—Held: such declaration was not evidence, either as showing reputation, as a statement accompanying an act, or as the admission of an occupier against his own interest.—R. v. BLISS (1837), 7 Ad. & El. 550; 2 Nev. & P. K. B. 464; Will. Woll. & Dav. 624; 7 L. J. Q. B. 4; 1 Jur. 959; 112 E. R. 577.

MARSDEN URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL* (1908), 72 J. P. 475; 6 L. G. R. 1186.

See, generally, HIGHWAYS.

B. In respect of What Matters.

1003. General rule—Confined to matters of public interest.]—Evidence of reputation, as to the payment of a farm modus, is inadmissible, on the ground that hearsay evidence is not admissible on a question of private right; & therefore, & in obedience to this rule, the evidence of old persons, who deposed to having heard their parents & relations, & other persons, since dead, state that a certain farm modus was payable in respect of a particular farm, was rejected.—LONSDALE v. HEATON (1830), 1 You. 58; 159 E. R. 905.

1004. Application of rule—Ownership of estate.]—Where testator, between fifty & sixty years ago, devised land to his son for life, remainder to his grandson for life, remainder to the heirs of the body of the grandson, remainder to the lessor of pltf. in tail; between which latter & deft., the devisee in fee of the son, the question was, whether the land in dispute which had been occupied by the son in the lifetime of testator, was part of the entailed estate, or had been acquired by his own purchase:—Held: evidence of reputation that the land had belonged to S., & was purchased of him by first testator, was not admissible, though coupled with corroborative parol evidence that the land had belonged to S. before the occupation of it by the son, & also by a deed of conveyance of another farm in the same place from first testator to a younger son about the same period, in which it was recited that the land thereby conveyed had been then lately purchased, amongst other lands, by testator of S.—DOE d. DIDSBURY v. THOMAS (1811), 14 East, 323; 104 E. R. 625.

1005. — Right to profit à prendre—Claimed by tenants of particular estate.]—Where by agreement dated 1656, between the lord & certain tenants of customary tenements within a manor, the tenants covenanted that they, their heirs or assigns, would not cut down, sell or dispose of any wood standing or growing, or hereafter to stand or grow, without the licence of the lord, & the lord covenanted to set out yearly, upon request of the tenants sufficient for the repairing of their houses, etc., & other necessary uses in & about the tenements, & that in case any of the tenants, their heirs, or assigns, should plant any wood upon the tenements it should be lawful for them to cut down, use, & dispose of all or any such wood for repairing their houses, etc., or for any other necessary uses without disturbance of the lord:—Held: (1) evidence that the tenants of deft.'s estate for thirty years & upwards had publicly, & without interruption from the lord, & with his knowledge, cut & sold the planted wood on the estate in large quantities, was admissible; (2) evidence of reputation that the tenants of deft.'s estate had the right of cutting & selling planted wood was not admissible.

Reputation is certainly out of the question, because the tenants' right could only arise by some grant or deed (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—BLACKETT v. LOWES (1814), 2 M. & S. 494; 105 E. R. 465.

See, further, EASEMENTS, Vol. XIX., p. 203, Nos. 1548, 1549.

1006. — Tithe modus—Parochial modus.]—On an issue directed to ascertain whether a modus was payable in respect of a certain part of a farm, a verdict was found for deft. in equity. A new trial being moved for:—Held: (1) the rejection of evidence of a lease in 1704 was immaterial, as it only carried back some few years farther the fact of payments, which had been established for a period sufficiently long by other evidence. Semble: reputation in this case was not evidence, & the lease was not, it being in effect the declaration of the lessor of his own right; (2) the validity of a farm modus is not to be tried by a comparison of value with the whole tithe at any remote period; (3) ancient documents cannot prevail against all proof of usage, unless they were consistent with each other, & excluded, not the probability but the possibility of the modus; (4) reputation is admissible in each case of private right, where a class or district of persons was concerned, & is evidence as to a parochial modus but not as to a farm modus, or to support a prescriptive right, except as to a right of way; (5) proof of a fixed payment for a farm during a long period, even without mention of a modus, is evidence of a modus.—WHITE v. LISLE (1819), 4 Madd. 214; 56 E. R. 685; subsequent proceedings, 3 Swan. 342, L. C.

Annotation :—As to (1) & (3) Refd. Raine v. Cairns (1841), 4 Hare, 327.

1007. — — — — —.] — On a question of parochial modus, referred to a trial at law, testimony, offered as evidence of reputation, in proof of the custom on which the right to the advantage of the modus decimandi was founded, that the money payments constituting the alleged modus had been uniformly made, beyond living memory, & that the witness had heard old persons who at that time occupied lands in the parish, & were long since dead, say that it had always been the custom to make such payments, was held to be admissible evidence of reputation on that subject, against an objection taken of interest in making such a declaration on the part of the deceased persons on whose information the evidence was founded.—MOSELEY v. DAVIES (1822), 11 Price, 162; 147 E. R. 434; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. DAVIES v. MOSELEY (1824), M'Cle. 143.

liability—Disputed liability to repair bridge ratiōne tenuræ.]—Presentment against the inhabitants of a county for not repairing a bridge. Plea: that A. was liable to repair it ratiōne tenuræ. Issue on A.'s liability:—Held: evidence of reputation was admissible to prove A.'s liability.

In an action for tolls claimed by a corpn., an ancient schedule produced from among their muniments, copies of which were delivered by their officer to the lessee of the tolls, & by the lessee to the collectors, by which they have actually collected, is admissible, in evidence for the Corporation.

1019. —.]—In an action for injuring pltf.'s reversionary interest in a several fishery in an estuary of the sea, & in the soil of the bottom of the sea, both in the possession of F. as her tenant, issues were taken on pltf.'s right to the fishery & ownership of the soil. The controversy was, whether the soil belonged to pltf. or to G. Pltf. gave in evidence the proceedings in an action by F. against G. One count in that action was for injuring F.'s fishery by tearing up soil, described as being the soil of the now pltf., & thereby destroying the fish. To this there was a plea of Not guilty. The amount of damages was referred; & the arbitrator awarded nominal damages. It was proved that the act complained of in that action was committed in a part of the same estuary, & that the soil there was claimed by the same title as the soil which was the subject of the present action, & that deft. in the present action became tenant to G. subsequently to the award. The proceedings were admitted; & pltf. had a verdict:—Held: they were improperly admitted, the award not being evidence of reputation; & the proceedings not being admissible for pltf., who was not a party or shown to be a privy to F., though deft. was privy to G.—WENMAN (LADY) v. 1022. Survey containing alleged presentment by jury—Presentment unsigned.]—In support of a customary payment of 4d. per wey for all coal gotten within a certain manor & seignory & exported to sea, the plaintiff tendered in evidence a book, purporting to be a survey taken in the year 1650, after the manor & seignory had been granted to Oliver Cromwell by Parliament, & purporting to be taken by virtue of a commission to certain persons named in the survey given by Oliver Cromwell, Lord-General of the Parliamentary Forces. After specifying certain rents, it stated, that the jury present (inter alia) there is 4d. due unto the lord for every wey of coals that is transported out of the lordship. The document was not signed by the jury, nor was any commission proved:—Held: this survey was inadmissible either as a public document, or as evidence of reputation.—BEAUFORT (DUKE) v. 1023. Usage extending over many years—Parish rated to relief of poor as one parish.]—The parish of M. has for all secular purposes since the 43

Eliz. (c. 2) been treated as one parish. In fact it consists of two distinct rectories & advowsons, & for all ecclesiastical purposes it constitutes two distinct parishes:—Held: a rate for the relief of the poor of Mablethorpe treating it as one parish is good, such long usage being conclusive as to M. being before & at the passing of the 43 Eliz. c. 2, one parish by reputation.—R. v. 1025. General rule.]—Upon the trial of an issue in prohibition, whether the usurpation of office in a quo warranto information mentioned was committed out of the jurisdiction of the County Palatine, & within that of the city, of Chester; a document from the remembrancer's office of the Ct. of Exch. was produced, purporting to be a decree made, after hearing of a complaint against the citizens of Chester, & their answer, by the Lord High Treasurer of England, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Under Treasurer, & the Chief Baron, with the advice & assent of a Queen's Serjeant, & the Queen's Attorney & Solicitor General, & others of the same ct.:—Held: (1) this document was not admissible in evidence as a decree, because it was not a decree of the Ct. of Exch. nor of any ct. known to the law at the time when it purported to have been made; (2) nor as an award, because there appeared no voluntary submission of parties; (3) nor as evidence of reputation, because the parties making the decree had no knowledge of the subject, except that which they derived in the course of the proceeding.—ROGERS v. 1026. —.]—On a question between the lord of the manor of O. & the owner of a freehold estate within the manor, whether a certain close was part of the lord's waste or part of the adjoining estate of deft., after proof having been given that there were very many lands & tenements held of the manor, the tenants whereof in respect of those lands had always exercised rights of common for all their commonable cattle on the waste of the manor, evidence was offered, on the part of the lord, of declarations ante litem motam of deceased persons who had been such tenants & had exercised such rights, that the close was parcel of the waste. Similar declarations made by deceased residents within the manor not being tenants were also tendered. No evidence was given of any exercise of any rights of common on the close:—Held: the want of evidence of acts of enjoyment would not affect the admissibility of evidence of reputation; & declarations by residents within a manor were as receivable as declarations by tenants of the manor; but these declarations were not admissible in evidence, since there is no common law right for all tenants of a manor to have common on the waste of the manor, but each tenant who has the right of common appendant, has it as an incident by law attached to his particular grant, & the numerous private rights of common of the several tenants do not compose one public right so as to render evidence of reputation as to the boundary of the waste admissible.

If evidence of reputation be admissible on the ground of publicity, it would seem to follow that prima facie the evidence of any deceased person would be admissible. But the cts. have qualified the generality of this view by requiring that such deceased person should be in some way connected with the subject of inquiry (PARKE, B.).—DUNRAVEN (LORD) v. 1028. General rule.—Pltf. in trespass was the occupier of a farm called Tyr Adam, situate within a manor adjoining a mountain, & claimed to be exclusive owner of that part of the mountain next adjoining his farm. The question in the cause being whether he was exclusive owner of the soil, or had a right of common only over that part of the mountain; deft., in order to show that pltf. had not the right of soil, produced from the rolls of the manor an instrument, purporting to be a presentment in the year 1759, wherein the jurors, after reciting that they were sworn to view such part of the waste land as lay within the lordship as was claimed by B. to belong to his tenement called Tyr Adam, upon their oaths said that they had considered the claim & the evidence, & presented that all the land within the boundaries were part & parcel of the common called K., & that neither B. nor the tenants or occupiers of the tenement called Tyr Adam, had any right to the same, or any further or greater right than such as the other freehold tenants of the lordship had for their commonable cattle:—Held: this instrument was not admissible in evidence either as a presentment, because the homage had no right to decide the claim made by an individual to the freehold, they being interested, nor as an award, because there was no mutual submission, nor as evidence of reputation, because it was the declaration of the homage post litem motam.—RICHARDS v. The return stated that the comrs. had inquired into the matter, being attended by the parties interested, & that a jury of the body of the county had been sworn to inquire & true verdict give concerning the boundary, & thereupon the comrs. set out the boundary by marks & stones:—Held: this was a proceeding in the nature of a verdict before a ct. of competent jurisdiction, & therefore admissible in a question of manorial boundary where reputation was admissible, & it was not to be excluded on the ground that it had taken place post litem motam, or because it did not appear that any decree had been made.

This, however, was not a case in which there were any suits or lis mota. It appears from the commission that it issued in order to prevent anything of the kind occurring (LITTLEDALE, J.).—BRISCO v. 1040. Meaning of words—Conversation.]—A witness who has heard a conversation cannot be asked "What did you understand by that?" without previously laying a foundation for such a question by showing that something had previously occurred, in consequence of which the words would convey a meaning different to their ordinary meaning: having done so, the witness may then be asked, "What did you understand," etc.

There can be no doubt that words may be explained by bystanders to import something very different from their obvious meaning. A bystander may perceive that what is uttered is uttered in an ironical sense, & therefore it may mean directly the reverse of that which it professes to be. Something may have passed before which gives a peculiar character & meaning to some expression; & some word which is ordinarily used, or popularly, may, from something that has gone before, be restricted & confined to a particular sense, or may mean something different from that which it does mean; & the proper course for the counsel who proposes so to get to the plain & obvious meaning of words used by a pltf. or deft. is to ask, not "What did you understand by those words?" but "Was there anything to prevent those words from conveying the meaning which, ordinarily, they would convey?" because, if there was, evidence of that may be given, & then the question may be put, when you have laid the foundation for it, "What did you understand?" Something occurred by which the witness might understand the words in a sense different from their ordinary meaning; & generally no question ought to be put in such a form as possibly to lead to an illegal answer. The understanding of a person who hears an expression is not a legal mode by which it is to be explained. If words are uttered, or printed, the ordinary sense of those words is to be taken to be the meaning of the speaker, or the person who uses them; but a foundation may be laid by giving something else that had occurred; some other matter may be introduced, & then when that is introduced the witness may be asked, with reference to that other matter, what was the sense in which he understood it with reference to that; but the question, "What did you understand?" without reference to any other matter is not the correct mode of putting a question (POLLOCK, C.B.).—DAINES v. HARTLEY (1818), 3 Exch. 200; 18 L. J. Ex. 81; 12 Jur. 1093; sub nom. DANES v. HARTLEY, 12 L. T. O. S. 271.

1041. As evidence of negligence—Dangerous state of station platform.]—A railway co. had a platform extending from their station to their steamboat pier, on the river H., 4 ft. 3 in. in width. On one side the platform was protected by railings, but on the side next the railway, which ran parallel with it for some distance, there was a guard of wood 9 inches high. In an action against the company under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), two witnesses stated they considered it a dangerous platform:—Held: this was merely an expression of opinion, & there was no evidence of negligence to go to the jury.—Rigg v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. Co. (1866), 12 Jur. N. S. 525; 14 W. R. 834.

1042. Probable course of action—In hypothetical circumstances.]—(1) Pltfs., house agents, were instructed by defts. to offer a leasehold house for sale, for which they were to receive a commission of 2½ per cent. on the amount of premium if they found a purchaser, but one guinea only for their trouble if the premises were sold "without their intervention." The particulars were entered on pltfs.' books, & they gave a few cards to view. U. who had observed on passing that the house was to be disposed of, but who had not then seen over it, called at pltfs.' office & obtained a card to view the premises in question, amongst others, the terms being written by pltfs.' clerk on the back of the card. U. went to the house a few days afterwards, but thought the price asked, £2,200, too high, & he went away. U. had no further communication with pltfs.; but he subsequently renewed his negotiation with a friend of deft.'s, & ultimately became the purchaser of the lease for £1,700:—Held: there was evidence for a jury that U. had become the purchaser of the premises "through pltfs.' intervention," & pltfs. were entitled to the stipulated commission.

(2) At the trial the judge put the following question to U.: "Would you, if you had not gone to pltfs.' office & got the card, have purchased the house?" &, overruling an objection by deft.'s counsel, received his answer, which was, "I should think not." Semle: the answer was properly received.—*MANSELL v. 1043. Resemblance—Picture & alleged copy.]—In an action claiming damages under Art Copyright Act, 1862 (c. 68), s. 11, for the infringement of copyright in a picture, pltf. did not produce the original picture, but gave evidence that he had seen it, & that a photograph sold by defts., which he produced, was directly taken from an engraving which was an exact copy of the original picture, & he produced the engraving:—Held: this evidence was admissible to prove the infringement, & was evidence for the jury that the photograph sold by defts. was a copy of the original picture.

others thought he had adopted the proper plan:—Held: not a case in which there should be a nonsuit on the ground that the evidence was consistent either with the existence or non-existence of negligence, but the question was for the jury.—HENDERSON v. BARNES (1871), 32 U. C. R. 76.—CAN.

d. —.]—In an action for negligent driving, deft. was asked by his counsel whether anything more could have been done than was done to prevent the collision which occurred:—Held: improper as being the point which the jury had to decide; deft. should have stated the facts, without giving his opinion, & left it to the jury to determine whether he could have done anything more than he did to avoid the collision.—COURNER v. KIRKBRIDE (1883), 23 N. B. R. 404.—CAN.

m. ——— ——In an action by judgment creditors of deceased husband of deft. to set aside, under 13 Eliz. c. 5 assignments made by deceased to deft. of certain co. shares, with intent as alleged, to defeat creditors, plffs. moved for an interim injunction restraining deft. from disposing of the shares:—Held: the depositions of deceased husband, in other causes, taken upon his examination as a judgment debtor, were not admissible in evidence upon the application.—*TORONTO CARPET CO. v. n. ——— Proceedings in same cause—Inquiry before Royal Commission.]—By consent of parties, certain evidence which had been taken before a Parliamentary Royal Commission was filed of record "to avail as evidence" on the trial:—Held: notwithstanding the consent, such evidence could not be accepted as evidence in the cause.—*PACAUD v. 1076 ii. ——— ——On a second trial an objection made by deft.'s counsel to using evidence taken on a former trial was overruled, & plff.'s counsel thereupon read the evidence of several witnesses on the former trial, including several witnesses called for the defence. SECT. 11.—EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE.

See Part IV., Sect. 6, post.

Part III.—Modes of Proof and Weight of Evidence.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1088. Inference distinguished from surmise.]—(1) A workman employed in fairly light work in a colliery was taken ill. He went home & died the same day from angina pectoris. The man's heart was found to be in a bad condition of long standing. The medical evidence was that angina pectoris might be brought on by several causes, & might be due to circumstances which could hardly be called an accident at all :—Held : though as a matter of conjecture it was probable, it was not proved as a matter of legitimate inference from the facts, that the death was due to an accident arising out of & in the course of the employment.

(2) No fact can be proved in this world with absolute certainty. All that can be done is to adduce such evidence of facts as that the mind of the tribunal is satisfied that the fact is so. This may be done either by direct evidence, or by inference from facts. But the matter must not be left to rest in surmise, conjecture, or guess (BUCKLEY, L.J.).—*HAWKINS v. PART II. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 2.

1085i. By reading judge's notes.]—The judge's notes of the testimony of a witness since deceased are evidence in a subsequent trial of the same cause to prove that witness's testimony, though the second trial is before a different judge.—DOE d. LONCHETER v. MURRAY (1848), 1 All. 216.—CAN.

o. Commissioner's notes.—Taken at preliminary inquiry.—On the trial of an action to set aside a bill of sale :—Scndle : as the Collection Act requires the comr. to file the evidence taken before him, such evidence must be taken in writing, & is the best evidence as to what was said during the inquiry.—FARLINGER v. THOMPSON (1905), 37 N. S. R. 513.—CAN.

p. By witnesses.—Actual words must be sworn to.—Where pltf. has been examined as a witness on a former trial respecting the same subject, it is necessary, in order to prove his testimony, that the witnesses should swear to the words used by him, & not merely to the effect of them.—FRASER v. BLACK (1851), 2 All. 312.—CAN.

q. Counsel's notes.—How verified.—Counsel moving on his own notes of trial, in the absence of the minutes, must verify them by affidavit.—STEPHENSON v. DULHANTY (1854), James, 339.—CAN.

r. Sufficiency.—In a suit by a creditor to set aside a deed on the ground that it was made to deft. on a secret trust for grantor & to defeat his creditors :—Held : grantor's statements after the conveyance that it was a real transaction, were admissible evidence for deft., but were not entitled to much weight.—WOOD v. IRWIN (1869), 16 Gr. 398.—CAN.

1089. May be express or implied.]—HEANE v. ROGERS, No. 1110, post.

1090. Affidavit not denied.]—A claim for the specific performance of an agreement stated the agreement. An affidavit was made on behalf of pltf., that the agreement had been made, & that the attesting witness to it was a clerk of deft., & that deft. had refused to allow his clerk to prove the agreement. An affidavit was made by deft. in which an allusion was made to "the agreement in pltf.'s claim set forth." Deft. did not deny that the agreement had been made. No other proof was given of the agreement :—Held : under the circumstances, the agreement was sufficiently proved, & pltf. was entitled to a decree.—TYNTE v. BULLER (1854), 23 L. J. Ch. 504 ; 2 W. R. 309.

Admissions by conduct.—See Sub-sect. 5, post.

SUB-SECT. 3.—VALUE AS EVIDENCE.

A. In General.

1091. Extra judicial declarations—Compared with sworn evidence of same witness.]—Greater regard should be had to the evidence of a witness on oath, than to his extra-judicial declarations.—DYER v. CALWELL (1755), 2 Lee, 120.

1092. Sufficiency—Dependent on party making admission.]—Evidence which would not be sufficient to prove a fact for a party when given by his own witnesses, may be so when given by his adversary's.—ANON. (1698), 1 Ld. Raym. 732; 91 E. R. 1389.

1093. — Compared with finding by jury.]—Admission by a party concerned in matters of fact is stronger than if it had been determined by a jury, & facts are as properly concluded by admission, as by trial.—SHEFFIELD v. BUCKINGHAMSHIRE (DUCHESS) (1739), 1 Atk. 628; 26 E. R. 395, L. C.

1094. — Subsequent denial in pleadings.]—On evidence of an agreement's being confessed by deft., decreed to be carried into execution, though the agreement was proved by one witness only, & positively denied by deft.'s answer.—ONLY v. WALKER (1740), 3 Atk. 407; 26 E. R. 1035.

1095. — As a bar to relief.]—(1) Admission of a debt obtained by fraud or force not set aside on motion, but may be a ground for a new bill although the former still depending.

(2) The general complexion of a case is not sufficient to overturn the rules of evidence, yet it is a reason for sifting into the circumstances as far as is consistent with the rules of the ct. (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).

(3) If a man will create evidence against himself by admission, it is better that he should suffer than rules of ct. be overturned (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—TOWNSEND v. LOWFIELD (1747), 1 Ves. Sen. 35; 27 E. R. 874, L. C.

1096. —.]—It is said that there is a thing which was intended to be a deed, & which contains a direct recital & a statement which amounts to an admission by deft. That admission, like every other admission made by a deft., or made by his agents in course of business, is admissible as evidence against him; but it is always for the ct. to consider what weight, if any, is to be given to an admission, or any other evidence; it is not conclusive merely because it is legally admissible (JAMES, L.J.).—BULLEY v. BULLEY (1874), 9 Ch. App. 739; 44 L. J. Ch. 79; 30 L. T. 848; 22 W. L. R. 779, L. J.

1099. —.]—The whole of what a party says at the same time, must be given in evidence, & what he says in his favour must not be taken as true, but must be left, under all the circumstances, for the jury to say whether they believe it or not (BEST, C.J.).—SMITH v. BLANDY (1825), Ry. & M. 257, N. P.

1102. Cannot operate to excuse illegality.]—Plff.'s counsel have admitted, that the officers of excise were not bound to produce the public books. Indeed it would be highly inconvenient if they were liable to be called upon by every individual for that purpose. Now that goes the whole length of determining this case; for if the wager be such that the best evidence by which it must be proved is improper to be admitted, that circumstance shows that the wager is in itself illegal; & if so, no admission of the party that he has lost the wager can make that legal which is in its nature illegal (ASHHURST, J.).—*ATHERFOLD v. 1104. In party's own favour—Discharge of bankrupt.]—In an action by the payee of a bill of exchange accepted by deft. for a valuable consideration, evidence that plff. had been discharged as an insolvent debtor after the bill became due & had given in a blank schedule is not enough to show that the bill had been satisfied.—*HART v. B. Circumstances in which made.

1106. Matter for consideration of jury.]—Where an admission is relied upon against a party, the jury, in estimating the effect due to it, are justified in considering the circumstances under which it was made, & whether deft. made it under an erroneous notion as to his legal liability.

A provisional committeeman of a railway was sued for work done by plff., on behalf of the co., in 1845, for a portion only of which he had given any authority to pledge his credit. In 1846 the committee circulated a letter which operated as an admission of the whole of plff.'s claim against the co.:—Held: the judge was right in directing the jury to consider the circumstances under which the admission was made, & the mistaken view which was at that time entertained of the liability of members of provisional committees, & to qualify the effect of the admission accordingly.—NEWTON v. BELCHER (1848), 12 Q. B. 921; 6 Ry. & Can. Cas. 38; 116 E. R. 1115; sub nom. NEWTON v. BELCHER, SAME v. LIDDARD, 18 L. J. Q. B. 53; 12 L. T. O. S. 213; 13 Jur. 253.

Annotation:—Refd. Newton v. Liddard (1848), 12 Q. B. 925.

1107. Admission made under erroneous view of law.]—A party to a cause who is proved to have made admissions may defeat their effect by showing that they were made under a mistake of law: provided that no person has been induced by them to alter his condition.—NEWTON v. LIDDARD (1848), 12 Q. B. 925; 6 Ry. & Can. Cas. 42; 116 E. R. 1117; sub nom. NEWTON v. BELCHER, SAME v. LIDDARD, 18 L. J. Q. B. 53, 55; 12 L. T. O. S. 213; 13 Jur. 253.

1108. —.]—Deft. had been asked by letter to become a member of a provisional committee. He gave a written consent. A few days after he attended a meeting of the committee, & signed a consent to act & take shares. At the same meeting, a managing committee was appointed, with instructions to pursue the most energetic measures for advancing the objects of the co. Orders were afterwards given by the secretary, without consulting deft. The first order in this case was on the 11th, & the meeting which deft. attended was on the 16th:—Held: (1) deft. would be liable for any orders of the managing co., in pursuance of the authority conferred upon them by the resolution of the meeting.

Deft. had subsequently promised to pay his quota if another member of the committee would do so; (2) not to be an admission of his liability, as it was made under an erroneous impression as to the law, & the jury should consider such an offer in reference to his knowledge of the law, as it was understood at the time.

(3) An admission founded on a mistake of the law is not binding.—BARKER v. WHITWORTH (1850), 14 L. T. O. S. 550.

1109. — Submitting to distress.—Payment of rent under a distress is not a conclusive admission of title in the distrainor, but may be rebutted by showing that he never had any title. Pltf. claimed as extrix. & devisee of the administratrix of one of three lessors, & showed that rent had been paid by deft., the lessee, to her testatrix & to herself, on two occasions, after distress:—Held: this prima facie case was answered by showing that one of the other lessors was still living.

The evidence given on the part of deft. did not show absolutely that the title was out of pltf. & in some one else; but it showed a reason why he paid the rent. Payment of rent, even under a distress, is not a conclusive admission of title (JERVIS, C.J.).—KNIGHT v. COX (1856), 18 C. B. 645; 27 L. T. O. S. 187; 20 J. P. 744; 139 E. R. 1523; sub nom. COX v. KNIGHT, 25 L. J. C. P. 314. Annotation:—Reid. Carlton v. Bowcock (1884), 51 L. T. 639.

1110. Admission made by mistake—Where third party not prejudiced.—The express admission of a party to the suit, or an admission implied from his conduct, is evidence, & strong evidence, against him; but he is at liberty to show that any such admission was misunderstood or untrue, & he is not estopped or concluded by it, unless it has had the effect of altering the condition of some third person (BAYLEY, J.).—HEANE v. ROGERS (1829), 9 B. & C. 577; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 480; 7 L. J. O. S. K. B. 285; 109 E. R. 215.

a. Conditions of reception.—Deceased, while working on a building as an independent contractor, was struck & instantly killed by the falling of the boom of a derrick that had been erected on the building by defts., who were the building contractors. The machine was of the best type & in good repair, & was operated by a competent man, who was not guilty of any negligence or misconduct.

Pltfs. alleged that there was a defect in the machine. The only evidence of knowledge of the alleged defect by defts. was that of two witnesses, one of them stating that the operator of the hoist told him, after the accident, that the machine was defective & that he had notified defts. of the defect prior to the accident, & that this statement was made by the operator 15 or 20 feet from deft. W., one of the members of deft. firm, who did not contradict the statement. The other witness, who stood beside W. at the time the statement was made, testified that he heard what the operator said:—Held: the evidence that W. heard the statement was of the vaguest character; & the remark was not addressed to him; that the allegation was not that he, but the firm, of which he was a member, had been notified, as to which he may have had no knowledge, so that even if he heard what the operator said, he may not have been in a position to contradict it. This —Allegations & admissions, used for the purpose of defence against attempted extortion, under the form of legal proceedings, or for the purpose of obtaining justice irregularly when regularly it could not be had, ought not to be used as evidence of the rights of the parties:—Held: allegations & admissions, made in the course of arbitrary proceedings against parties in the Star Chamber, & in a treaty for compromise which arose out of the sentence, & in the proceedings which took place before the House of Commons in an attempt to obtain relief from the oppression of that ct., could not in any way influence the judgment of this ct.—*SKINNERS' CO. v. C. Statements in Party's Presence.

1112. General rule.—A party who is present may be just as much bound by the statement of a third person as if he spoke himself (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—INGRAM v. WEBB (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 147.

1113. —.—Divorce by reason of cruelty, by the wife against the husband, sustained almost entirely by the evidence of the children & near relations of the parties, but who saw no act of personal violence on the part of the husband, except his pushing the wife, & spitting in her face.

In cases of this kind, where it is often, & must often be, impossible to produce evidence of what occurred between husband & wife, admissions, in cases where every innocent man would deny with indignation if he could, are important evidence, for it is the best & most credible testimony the res gestæ would admit of (DR. LUSHINGTON).—SAUNDERS v. SAUNDERS (1847), 1 Rob. Eccl. 519; 5 Notes of Cases, 408; 9 L. T. O. S. 358; 163 E. R. 1131.

1114. Child, living with mother, called by particular name.—Held: where it is proved that the separated wife was the mother of a particular child, & it is also proved that it was the habit of persons in the house where the mother & child lived to call the child by a particular name, & that such persons would not be likely to do so unless they had the authority of the mistress of the house, such proof is some evidence of the fact that the child went by that name with the authority of the mother.—FEARON v. AYLESFORD (EARL) (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 539; 53 L. J. Q. B. 410; 50 L. T. 508, 662; 32 W. R. 718, D. C.; on appeal, 14 Q. B. D. 792, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 4.—EFFECT OF PARTICULAR ADMISSIONS.

1115. Admission of possession—Refusal to give up possession.]—Ejectment against assignees of a bkpt.; proof, that upon being required to give up possession of the premises, they answered that it was not consistent with their duty to do so, is sufficient proof of possession.—DOE v. RADNOR (EARL) v. TAYLOR (1819), 2 Stark. 535, N. P.

1116. — Whether admission of previous possession.]—An admission by a party, that he is in possession of certain premises, is no evidence of his possession on any day antecedent to that on which the admission is made.—TINDAL v. WHITROW (1823), 1 C. & P. 22, N. P.

1117. Whether admission of party's title to sue—Admission of all facts "except the merits."]—Deft., in a suit by assignees of a bkpt., was told, at an interview with the attorney for the assignees, which was arranged by his own attorney, but which he thought proper to attend alone, that his attorney had proposed that he should admit every fact, except the merits, provided plffs. would waive their right of holding him to bail; & he was asked, whether that proposal was made with his authority. He replied, that it was; & that he was ready to carry it into effect, as the only question he wished to try was, whether he was liable on the undertaking he had given:—Held: this amounted to an admission of the right of the assignees to sue, although no mention was made of it in the conversation. Semble: it would have been otherwise, if, without further explanation, he had only said that he wished to try upon the merits.—DAVIES v. BURTON (1829), 4 C. & P. 166, N. P.

1118. — Letter entitled in pending cause.]—In an action, brought by bkpt.'s assignees, a letter written by deft. entitled in the cause, is not such an acknowledgment of their title as assignees, as will render it unnecessary to produce the commn. & the subsequent proceedings.—LANCASTER v. BARKER (1827), 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 289.

1119. Admission suggesting offence committed—Whether party liable for offence—Refusal by witness in bankruptcy to answer "question."]—Comrs. of bkpt. committed a witness for refusing to read the entries in an account:—Held: (1) they were liable to an action for false imprisonment for so doing, because this was not a question; (2) the circumstance of the witness speaking of it as a question at the time of his refusal made no difference.—ISAAC v. IMPEY (1830), 10 B. & C. 442; 4 C. & P. 113; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 377; 3 Man. & Ry. M. C. 40; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 169; 109 E. R. 514.

1120. Promise to pay further instalment—Admission of debt due.]—It is sufficient proof that money is still due on a warrant of attorney, when the clerk of pltf.'s attorney swears that it is due; he having already received thereon different payments, & having also lately seen deft., when he promised to pay a further instalment.—MIDDLETON v. STOCKDALE (1842), 6 Jur. 509.

1121. Admission of debt—Whether explanation of items precluded.]—Pltf. is not precluded from explaining admissions in the particulars of demand of payments made to him by deft., & of showing on what account such payments were made. Thus, in an action for use & occupation to recover £12 8s. 10d. the balance of an account of £64 0s. 10d. where the particulars of demand contained an admission, "on account whereof pltf. admits she has received at various times sums of money, amounting in the whole to £21 12s. 0d.," & pltf., at the trial, proved a debt to the amount of £14 3s. 6d.:—Held: pltf. might explain on what account the £21 12s. 0d. had been paid; & on evidence given, that £12 10s. 0d. of that sum had been paid for a debt not due to pltf., & that she was entitled to recover £5 1s. 6d., being the difference between the amount of the debt proved & that part of the payments in the particulars of demand remaining unexplained.—MERCY v. GALT (1849), 3 Exch. 851; 6 Dow. & L. 656; 18 L. J. Ex. 317; 13 L. T. O. S. 167; 13 Jur. 412; 154 E. R. 1089.

1122. Admission before & after action brought—Receipt of trust funds.]—Trust funds may be ordered to be brought into ct. by the trustee, an accounting party, upon admission contained in letters written before action brought that he has received the money, & a recital to that effect contained in the settlement, his execution of which as trustee has been proved; although there is no formal admission in his pleadings, or affidavits, that he has received & holds the money.—*HAMPDEN v. t. Admission of third person.—As to transfer of goods.]—In an action against a sheriff for taking goods under an execution against P., which pltf. claimed under a previous assignment made to him by P. in payment of a debt, declarations of P.'s son, in whose possession pltf. had left the goods, as to the circumstances of the transfer, are not evidence against pltf. though the fact of such possession is proper for the consideration of the jury in determining the bona fides of the transfer.—*DOAK v. d. What amounts to judicial admission—Confession of judgment.]—A confession of judgment for a portion of the amount claimed is a judicial admission of pltf.'s right of action & constitutes complete proof against the party making it.—CITIZENS LIGHT & POWER CO. v. ST. LOUIS TOWN (1904), 34 S. C. R. 495.—CAN.

e. Title by adverse possession —

*Declarations of occupant of land.]—*The declarations of one in adverse possession made on the premises while in occupation, importing a claim of a statutory title in himself, are admissible in an action of ejectment against his representatives to support the presumption of title from possession, whether they are against interest or not, & whether made before or after the statutory title accrued.—*RUNDLE v. 1127. —Non-application for annuity—Admission of satisfaction.]—A married woman being entitled to an annuity, charged on a plantation & residuary estate in J., devised to A., her husband, under an authority from A. received the produce of the estate from 1811 to 1816, & never accounted for it; during that period she never applied for wise for more than sixty years; that the A.-G. was of opinion that whatever rights the province may have had were extinguished, & that no claim should be made by it to said foreshore:—Held: this was an admission touching the title to the foreshore by the only authority competent to make it.—*TWEDDIE v. 1128. —Payment of interest on note—Consent to alteration.]—In an action by the payee against the maker of a promissory note, the note, on being produced, appeared to have been altered; the words “or order” having been substituted for “or other.” The attesting witness who had prepared the note stated that he could not say whether the alteration was in his writing or not, but that he ought to have drawn the note originally with the words “or order.” Deft. had paid two years’ interest on the note:—Held: this was reasonable evidence from which it might be inferred that the alteration had taken place with deft.’s consent.—CARRIS v. TATTERSALL (1841), 2 Man. & G. 890; Drinkwater, 209; 3 Scott, N. R. 257; 10 L. J. C. P. 187; 133 E. R. 1004.

1129. —Partial admission of account—Whether admission of whole.]—Pltf. was the commercial agent of the E. I. Co. at A. It was his duty to send his account to J., the Co.’s agent at B., to examine & to transmit to the governor of M. On pltf.’s accounts, there appeared a balance of 1325 dollars against him, but on reference to the accounts kept by J. of the same transactions, instead of a deficiency, 4771 dollars appeared due to pltf. The Co. then allowed the 1325 only:—Held: this was not a sufficient admission & recognition of the correctness of J.’s accounts, as to entitle pltf. without further evidence, to the 4771 dollars.—MARQUHAR v. EAST INDIA CO. (1845), 8 Beav. 260; 50 E. R. 102.

the only evidence connecting two of them with an order given by the third of them for pltf.’s arrest was the evidence of a witness given on the hearing of a charge against the pltf. in a police ct. when the two defts. were present. The witness stated that he had the authority of all defts. for the arrest. The two defts. heard this evidence given & were silent:—Held: such silence in a ct. of justice could not be given in evidence of an admission by the two defts. of the facts stated by the witness.—*FISHER v. 1132. ———]—Deft., one of the trustees of a settlement, in letters written to pltf., his co-trustee, before the commencement of this action for the administration of the trusts, admitted having received £300, part of the trust funds, & invested in an unauthorised way. Pltf., after deft. had appeared in the action, took out a summons to have the £300 brought into ct., & made an affidavit deposing that he had paid the money to deft., & stating the admissions contained in deft.'s letters as to its application. Deft. did not answer this affidavit or adduce any evidence. The judge ordered the money into ct. on the ground that the letters were a sufficient admission within Ord. 32, r. 6. Deft. appealed:—Held: as deft. had not met the affidavit, there was a sufficient admission that the money was in his hands, & the appeal must be dismissed.

1144. As evidence of partnership.]—In an action on a guarantee for the debt of a third person, signed by one of two partners in the partnership firm, it is necessary to give some evidence beyond the relationship of partners subsisting between them, that the one who signed had authority to bind the other by the guarantee. But for this purpose it would be sufficient to prove a parol acknowledgment from the other partner subsequently to the giving of the guarantee, or to show a previous course of dealing, in which similar guarantees had been given in the partnership firm, with the privity of both partners.—DUNCAN v. LOWNDES & BATEMAN (1813), 3 Camp. 478.

He did not call on the following day, but his wife called & admitted the amount of the debt claimed:—Held: this admission was binding on pltf., there being sufficient prima facie evidence of the wife's agency.—BARKER v. VAUGHAN (1839), 9 L. J. Ex. 4; 4 Jur. 222.

1150. — Necessity for proof of privity.]—A declaration against husband & wife stated that the wife dum sola, together with J., made their joint & several promissory note payable to pltf., & the wife dum sola promised to pay the same to pltf. The declaration was, after issue, amended by adding, that the husband after the marriage, in consideration of the premises, promised to pay pltf. the note. Defts. pleaded Stat. Limitations. The evidence was, that the note was made in 1837, & that interest was paid on it regularly until 1843, when defts. married. On Aug. 10, 1844, a year's interest was paid by female deft., but without her husband's privity. The action was commenced on Aug. 2, 1850:—Held: under these circumstances, no promise was proved within six years, as none could have been made by the wife dum sola within that period, & as the payment made by the wife within six years was without her husband's privity no promise by him could be inferred.—NEVE v. 1153. — — Confined to admissions in the cause.]—In debt for use & occupation, one of pltf.'s witnesses, on cross-examination, said that he had heard from pltf.'s attorney, that there was an agreement in writing:—Held: this was no evidence of the existence of an agreement, so as to render its production by pltf. necessary.

The attorney is not the agent of the client for the purpose of making admissions except in the cause & for the purpose of the cause. All that appeared here was—deft. having been proved to have held the premises at a certain rent—that one of pltf.'s witnesses heard pltf.'s attorney say that there was an agreement in writing. That clearly was no evidence at all to affect pltf. (WILDE, C.J.).—WATSON v. KING (1846), 3 C. B. 608; 1 New Pract. Cas. 534; 8 L. T. O. S. 118; 136 E. R. 243.

The chief clerk, with the consent of the parties, referred it to two accountants, one named by each partner, to make out a balance-sheet of undisputed items,

& also a list of disputed items. The accountants having agreed upon a balance-sheet showing that whatever might be the result as to the disputed items, £541 was due from one of the partners:—Held: this was a sufficient admission by the accounting party to justify the ct. in ordering payment of the amount into ct.—*LONDON SYNDICATE v. 1171. ———. To explain record.]—In an action between A. & B., it became a question whether damages had been recovered in a previous action against A. by a third party in respect of certain acts. A., to prove the affirmative, produced the record in the previous action, which showed counts on different causes of action, one count only being on the acts now in question. The damages were entered on all the counts, & damages entered generally on all. Evidence was then received that the damages had in fact been given for the matters in the one count only:—Held: such evidence was receivable, as explaining the former record, & not contradicting it; although, according to the evidence, it appeared that in the previous action the verdict on one of the other counts ought to have been for the then deft.—*PRESTON v. 1223. Custom of hiring furniture—Exclusion of doctrine of reputed ownership.]—A trader hired household furniture under a written agreement whereby he was to pay a weekly rent & the owner was empowered to repossess himself of same upon the hirer becoming bkpt. The hirer became bkpt. At the time of the bkpcy. the furniture remained in his house in his apparently uncontrolled possession. Although no evidence was adduced of a custom of hiring furniture:—Held: the ct. must take notice of such custom & the goods were not in the order & disposition of bkpt.—Re HAWKINS, Ex p. 1224. ———.]—The custom of hiring furniture for the purposes of hotels is so notorious that no person giving credit to an hotel-keeper is entitled to assume that the furniture of which he is in possession is his own property. The foundation of the doctrine of "reputed ownership" is that a man has been permitted to obtain false credit; this custom is so common & so well known, that a man cannot gain false credit by the possession of furniture.—CRAWCOUR v. 1268. ——— Effect of provisional recognition.—Plffs. were an English limited co. of engineers & merchants. Part of its business was transacted in Russia, & for the purpose of that business plffs., through their London bankers, deposited moneys & Russian Treasury Bonds with the Petrograd branch of the Banque de Commerce de l'Azoff-Don. Having done so plffs. took out two policies of insurance to insure themselves against loss or damage to the insured property "directly caused by fire, rioters, civil commotions, war, civil war, revolutions, rebellions, military or usurped power. . . ." No claim was to attach under the policy (inter alia) "for confiscation or destruction by the government of the country in which the property is situated." In Dec. 1917, during the currency of the policy, the Banque de Commerce was occupied by soldiers & sailors of the Red Guard, & by the Bolsheviks, purporting to act under the authority of an executive committee of the Commissaries of the People. They demanded & obtained control & possession of the bank & everything contained in it, including the insured property. Two actions were brought claiming for losses under the policies, & the question arose with regard to the recognition of the Soviet Govt. as a sovereign power:—Held: on the information then available, the act of the military in seizing the insured property was an act of confiscation by the Govt. of Russia, which was in existence at the material time, & had since been recognised by His Majesty's Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia, & was not an act of a usurped authority. Therefore the claim failed by reason of the clause which provided that no claim was to attach under the policy . . . for confiscation or destruction by the Government of the country in which the property is situated."—*WHITE, CHILD & BENEY, LTD. v. The provisional govt. entered appearances under protest, & motions were set down to set aside the writs & all subsequent proceedings on the grounds, inter alia, that the vessels were in the service of the provisional govt., & therefore immune from arrest; & that the dispute was between foreigners as to the possession of foreign ships, & therefore that, even if the ct. had jurisdiction, it should decline to exercise it. The learned judge invited the assistance of the Foreign Office as to the status of the provisional govt. of Northern Russia, & was informed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs that, while the Allied Powers were co-operating with the provisional govt. in the opposition which that govt. was making to the forces of the Russian Soviet Govt., the provisional govt. had not been "formally recognised either by His Majesty's Govt. or by the Allied Powers as the govt. of a sovereign independent state":—Held: the ct. could not infer from the letter from the Foreign Office that the provisional govt. of Northern Russia had been "informally" recognised as a sovereign independent state.—THE ANNETTE, THE DORA, [1919] P. 105; 88 L. 1304. Mischievous disposition of children.]—(1) Deft. negligently left his horse & cart unattended in the street. Pltf., a child seven years old, got upon the cart in play; another child incautiously led the horse on; & pltf. was thereby thrown down & hurt:—Held: deft. was liable in an action on the case, though pltf. was a trespasser, & contributed to the mischief by his own act.

(2) He merely indulged the natural instinct of a child in amusing himself with the empty cart & deserted horse. We think that deft. cannot be permitted to avail himself of that fact. The most blameable carelessness of his servant having tempted the child, he ought not to reproach the child with yielding to that temptation. He has been the real & only cause of the mischief. He has been deficient in ordinary care; the child, acting without prudence or thought, has, however, shown these qualities in as great a degree as he could be expected to possess them. His misconduct bears no proportion to that of deft. which produced it (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—LYNCH v. NURDIN (1841), 1 Q. B. 29; Arn. & H. 158; 4 Per. & Dav. 672; 10 L. J. Q. B. 73; 5 J. 1305. —.]—The schoolmaster is bound to take such care of his boys as a careful father would take of his boys, & there cannot be a better definition of the duty of a schoolmaster. He is bound to take notice of the ordinary nature of young boys, their tendency to do mischievous acts, & their propensity to meddle with anything that comes in their way. Having phosphorus in his house, he is bound not to leave it in any place in which they may get at it, & if he left it in the conservatory he did not use due care, but otherwise if he kept it locked up. If, therefore, deft. kept the bottle locked up, there would be no evidence of negligence. But if the bottle was left in the conservatory for any time before the accident then there is evidence on which the jury may find negligence & a want of proper care for the safety of the boys (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—*WILLIAMS v. they obtained easy access through a well-worn gap in a fence which the railway co. were bound by statute to maintain. A child between four & five years old playing with other children on the turntable having been seriously injured:—Held: there was evidence for a jury of actionable negligence on the part of the railway co.

(2) It would appear to me, first, that every person must be taken to know that young children & boys are of a very inquisitive & frequently mischievous disposition, & are likely to meddle with whatever happens to come within their reach; secondly, that public streets, roads, & public places may not unlikely be frequented by children of tender years & boys of this character; & thirdly, that if vehicles or machines are left by their owners, or by the agents of the owners, in any place which children & boys of this kind are rightfully entitled to frequent, & are not unlikely actually to frequent, unattended or unguarded & in such a state or position as to be calculated to attract or allure these boys or children to intermeddle with them, & to be dangerous if intermeddled with, then the owners of those machines or vehicles will be responsible in damages for injuries sustained by these juvenile intermeddlers through the negligence of the former in leaving their machines or vehicles in such places under such conditions, even though the accident causing the injury be itself brought about by the intervention of a third party, or the injured person, in any particular case, be a trespasser on the vehicle or machine at the moment the accident occurred (LORD ATKINSON).—*COOKE v. 1307. —.]—Applt., a boy of 14, was employed by resps. at their colliery to pick stones out of coal passing along a belt. Another boy, who was similarly employed a few yards off, mischievously threw a stone, which hit applt. in the eye, so that he lost the sight of it. There was a notice prohibiting stone-throwing, but the boys, of whom there were several, sometimes threw stones at each other to attract attention. On an application by applt. for compensation, the county ct. judge found that the accident arose out of applt.'s employment, as he was exposed to the special risk of stones being thrown by other boys, & made an award in his favour:—Held: the question was one of fact, & there was evidence which, coupled with general knowledge as to boy's habits, was sufficient to support the judge's conclusion.—*CLAYTON v. 1309. — Russian currency.—Plffs., who were coal exporters at Newcastle, shipped in Oct. 1914, to a merchant in Petrograd a quantity of coal for which payment was to be made by acceptances in sterling payable at the London branch of deft. bank. The merchant deposited roubles at defts. Petrograd office & it was arranged that the account should be transferred to the London branch. That branch informed plffs. that the amount was at their disposal "in Russian currency." Metallic coinage was no longer current in Russia:—Held: defts. were not bound to pay in Russian coin but must pay such a sum in English currency as was represented by the roubles held by them, both Imperial Russian notes & Kerensky notes, but not Bolshevik notes, being treated as currency.

The only question in the case is what at the present time is Russian currency. It is really a question rather for the Foreign Office than for a judge, but I must give the best opinion that I can on it. In my view metal coinage is excluded. The Imperial rouble notes were currency; & as the Kerensky govt. was a successor of the Tsar's govt., & while it was in existence, was recognised throughout Russia & by our own govt., I think Kerensky notes must also be considered currency. Bolshevik notes are on a different footing (BAILLACHE, J.).—LINDSAY, GRACIE & Co. v. RUSSIAN BANK FOR FOREIGN TRADE (1918), 34 T. L. R. 443.

1310. English money—Value of pound.—The ct. knows well enough how much money makes a pound, & it is certain enough (per CUR.).—R. v. MARKS (1701), 1 Ld. Raym. 702; 91 E. R. 1308.

1311. — Deterioration in value since 1189.—The parson is prima facie entitled to tithes in full, & it is, therefore, incumbent on one setting up a modus in lieu thereof, to make out his case satisfactorily to the jury; & to show that the payments relied on by him were actually paid as a modus eo nomine, & not as a composition for his tithes. Where it appears from the evidence offered by the party setting up the modus, that that modus is inconsistent with & contradicted by the commonly received notions, upon the deterioration of money since the time of Richard I., the judge is at liberty to draw the attention of the jury to that circumstance as an historical fact, without any evidence being given on that subject.—MORRIS v. NORFOLK (DUKE) (1841), 5 J. P. 725.

1312. ——J.—From the year 1808 to 1854 the fee paid on the celebration of a marriage in a parish church was proved to have been almost uniformly 13s., viz. 10s. to the rector & 3s. to the clerk. There was no evidence extending beyond 1808. The ct. having power to draw inferences of fact:—Held: considering the difference in value of money in 1189 & the present time, of which the ct. would take judicial notice, it was impossible that a payment of 13s. on every marriage could have been made at that period, & the objection of rankness applied, & rebutted the presumption, arising from uninterrupted modern usage, that the fee was taken as of right in the time of Richard I.—BRYANT v. FOOT (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 407; 9 B. & S. 444; 37 L. J. Q. B. 217; 18 L. T. 578; 32 J. P. 516; 16 W. R. 808, Ex. Ch.; affg. (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 161.

1317. Banking—Nature of bank post-bill.—In an indictment for larceny, if the thing stolen be described as a bank post-bill, & be not set out, the ct. cannot take judicial notice that it is a promissory note; or that it is such an instrument as, under 2 Geo. 2, c. 25, may be the subject of larceny, though it be described as made for the payment of money.—R. v. CHARD (1822), Russ. & Ry. 488.

1318. Stock Exchange—Course of business.—The nature & incidents of the employment of a broker on the London Stock Exchange by a customer are perfectly well known to the cts., & differ toto coelo from such a contract as was made in the present case. The broker returns to the customer the actual price made & charges him commission. But a suggestion that it is in accordance with the customs & conditions of the London Stock Exchange for a broker to add on to the price a sum at his own discretion, varying with the price at which he has made the bargain, without communicating the amount to his client, has never, to my knowledge, been made in these cts., & would, in my opinion, be a gross libel on the London Stock Exchange (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—*JOHNSON v. h. Hotel—Place for sale of liquor.—Proof that the house in which liquor was seized was kept as an hotel will

1319. Dangers of particular trades.—It requires no direct evidence to prove that a boy employed to ride a bicycle through London traffic runs the risk of injury by collision with other vehicles. The risk is inherent in the nature of the employment, or, to put it in another way, if a collision occurs, a causal relationship between the employment & the collision can be properly inferred, & in default of further evidence, in my opinion, ought to be inferred by a judge of fact. Most employments have peculiar risks inherent in their nature. A person employed to break stones runs the risk of being injured by a flying splinter. A person employed to climb a ladder runs the risk of injury from a fall. In neither case would positive evidence be necessary to prove that the injury by accident arose out of the employment (LORD PARKER OF WADDINGTON).—DENNIS v. WHITE (A. J.) & Co., [1917] A. 1320. Prize Courts—Carriage of contraband.]—

“In considering this case, I am told, that I am to set off without any prejudice against the parties, from anything that may have appeared in former cases; that I am not to consider former circumstances, but to suppose every case a true one, till the fraud is actually apparent. This is undoubtedly the duty in a general sense of all who are in a judicial situation: but at the same time they are not to shut their eyes to what is generally passing in the world—to that obvious system of covering the property of the enemy, which, as the war advances, grows notoriously more artificial: higher prices are given for this secret & dishonourable service, & greater frauds become necessary; old modes are exploded as fast as they are found ineffectual, & new expedients are devised to protect the unsound parts better from the view of the ct. Not to know these facts as matters of frequent & not unfamiliar occurrence, would be not to know the general nature of the subject upon which the Ct. is to decide; not to consider them at all, would not be to do justice (SIR W. SCOTT).—THE ROSALIE & BETTY (1800), 2 Ch. Rob. 343; 1 Eng. Pr. Cas. 246; 165 E. R. 338.

1321. ———.]—In prize proceedings the ct. is not governed or limited by the strict rules of evidence which bind our municipal cts., as it has always been deemed right to recognise well-known facts which have come to light in other cases or as matters of public reputation; but when any presumptions or inferences have to be considered any concealment or misdescription, or device calculated & intended by neutrals to deceive & to hamper belligerents in their undoubted rights of search for contraband, will pass heavily against those adopting such courses.—THE KIM, THE ALFRED NOBEL, THE BJORNSTERJANE BJORNSON, THE FRIDLAND, [1915] P. 215; 85 L. 1322. ———.]—A quantity of dried fruit was shipped on Swedish steamships in United States ports for carriage to a Swedish port. The fruit was afterwards seized by the Crown on board the Swedish vessels under the “Reprisals” Order on the ground that the goods were contraband & destined ultimately for Germany. The fruit was claimed by the Swedish Victualling Commission.—Held: on the facts, the fruit belonged to the Commission, & was bona fide intended for consumption in Sweden, & therefore, the claim must be allowed.

Hamburg was a great centre for this trade (dried fruit) before the war, & it was well known to the ct. from other cases, & indeed was notorious, that individuals & firms in Sweden had been extensively engaged since the early period of the war in facilitating the transmission into Germany of a large variety of food & other commodities of a contraband character, to their own great profit & the assistance of the German forces—& that notwithstanding or in spite of the prohibition of exportation. This fact could not & would not be ignored by the ct. in the investigation of claims brought before it & in the consideration of the kind of proof which should be forthcoming in such cases (EVANS, P.).—THE PACIFIC & THE SAN FRANCISCO (1917), 33 T. L. R. 529.

See, generally, PRIZE LAW.

1323. Modern methods of warfare.—I think, however, that the cts. are entitled to take judicial notice of certain notorious facts which may be summarised thus: There are a large number of German subjects in this country. This war is not being carried on by naval & military forces only. Reports, rumours, intrigues play a large part. Methods of communication with the enemy have been entirely altered & largely used. I need only refer to wireless telegraphy, signalling by lights, & the employment on a scale hitherto unknown of carrier pigeons. Spying has become the hall-mark of German “Kultur” (BAILHACHE, J.).—R. v. VINE STREET POLICE STATION (SUPERINTENDENT), Ex p. LIEBMANN, [1916] 1 K. B. 268; 85 L. J. K. B. 210; 113 L. 1324. ———.]—The other facts are those notorious facts of which deft. contends a judge, in dealing with a case of this kind, ought to take judicial notice. They may be summarised thus: Germany has throughout the war used her civilian subjects in foreign countries, & they have served her, in a way & to an extent hitherto unexampled. For instance, spying has been almost universal. Every German spy is, of course, an agent of the German Govt., & many German civilians in all grades of society have acted as spies. Germany has not made war by her men in uniform alone, but by all her subjects, wherever found, who were willing to help her by doing such mischief as each in his particular circumstances was able to compass. Niewerth, as a manager of electrical works, was peculiarly well able to construct an infernal machine. British ships were the special object of German spite, as witness the unrestricted submarine warfare, & no service could be more welcome or more in accord with the German policy of frightfulness than that of blowing one up (BAILLACHE, J.).—ATLANTIC MUTUAL INSURANCE CO. v. KING, [1919] 1 K. B. 307; 88 L. J. K. B. 1001; 120 L. T. 191; 35 T. L. R. 164; 14 Asp. M. L. C. 430; 24 Com. Cas. 107.

HANSON, STANLEY & PRINCE (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 735.

1336. Impossibility of telling fortunes by stars.—Applt. was convicted under Vagrancy Act, 1821 (c. 83), s. 4, which makes punishable as a rogue & vagabond "every person pretending or professing to tell fortunes . . . to deceive & impose on any of His Majesty's subjects." He had published advertisements in various newspapers offering to cast nativities, give yearly advice answer astrological questions. A detective wrote to him & received from him a circular setting forth applt.'s views of astrology as a science, & stating that by the positions of the planets in the nativity & their aspects to each other he was able to tell any applt.'s fortune in the various events of life in return for certain remuneration. He never actually told anything to the detective, & there was no evidence to show whether or not he believed in the truth of his professions:—Held: on this evidence applt. was rightly convicted.

In this case res ipsa loquitur. It is absurd to suggest that this man could have believed in his ability to predict the fortunes of another by knowing the hour & place of his birth & the aspect of the stars at such time. 1337. Wesleyan Methodist minister—Whether "office" within Municipal Corporation Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 33.—The name of applt. was on Division 3 of the overseers' list as entitled to be enrolled as a burgess in respect of the occupation of a dwelling-house; but he was objected to on the ground of short occupation. During the qualifying year applt., a Wesleyan Methodist minister, was appointed to a circuit by the Conference of the connection, & thereupon, entered upon the occupation of the dwelling-house, in question, which was the manse provided for the accommodation of one of the ministers of the circuit for the time being. The manse was vested in trustees, but the deeds creating the trust were not produced at the Registration Ct., & applt.'s name was struck off the list. Subsequently, however, copies of the deeds were shown to the revising barrister, who, at the request of the solrs. for applt., annexed such copies to the case stated by him for the ct., the solrs. undertaking to produce the originals if required:—Held: (1) the revising barrister could only decide on the evidence before him at the hearing, & on appeal from his decision the ct. could only consider whether his decision was right on such evidence; (2) there was no evidence before the revising barrister to show that the position of applt. was an "office" within the above Act, & neither the revising barrister nor the ct. could take judicial notice that the position of a Wesleyan Methodist minister was an "office" & the revising barrister was, therefore, right in removing applt.'s name, from the list.—WILLIAMS v. To an indenture of feoffment by the Bank of England, the seal of the bank was affixed by a paper wafered to the indenture, on which paper was written, "Sealed by order of the ct. of directors of the Governor & Co. of the Bank of England, Dec. 12, 1833. J., Secretary":—Held: J. was not an attesting witness, & the execution of the feoffment might be proved by the seal, without calling J.—DOE d. BANK OF ENGLAND v. 1351. ———.]—The notarial certificate & seal verified by the British consul, whose handwriting is sworn to, of the execution of a power of attorney, executed in America to a person in London, to receive money here for the party abroad, is not evidence in a ct. of law of the due execution of the instrument, without the affidavit of the subscribing witness.—Ex p. CHURCH (1822), 1 Dow. & Ry. 1352. ———.]—Where an affidavit is sworn before a notary public of a foreign country not under the dominion of the Queen, the signature of the notary must be verified before the affidavit can be filed, unless by consent; & the ct. cannot take judicial cognisance of the notarial seal alone as a sufficient verification.—Re EARL'S TRUST (1858), 4 K. & J. 300; 70 E. 1354. ——— Colonial notary.]—A petition was made by A., resident in a British colony, that a sum of money might be paid to his agent appointed by his power of attorney. A power of attorney to that effect was executed by A. in the presence of a notary public resident in the colony, who certified such signature by his official seal:—Held: such authority was sufficient under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22.—ARMSTRONG v. 1355. ———.]—By the French Law prevailing in Lower Canada a certificate of a notary public in the Province of Lower Canada is sufficient evidence in the cts. of that Province of the due execution of the instrument referred to in the certificate, & identity of the parties thereto, but the certificate of a notary public in Upper Canada, where the English Law prevails, will not be received in the cts. in Lower Canada per se as proof of due execution of an instrument, or of the identity of the parties; such fact must be established by evidence, as required by English Law. In a petitory action brought in the Superior Ct. in Lower Canada to recover land in that Province, the material evidence of title of pltf. consisted of a deed of sale by a devisee, whose husband's Christian name, as it was alleged, was wrongly described in the will of testator. The deed of sale was executed under a power of attorney, & the only evidence of the identity of the parties was the certificate of a notary in Upper Canada that such power was executed before him by the devisee & her husband. The cts. in Lower Canada refused to give effect to the certificate in the absence of proof of identity of the parties named therein, & dismissed pltf.'s action. On appeal to the Judicial Committee:—Held: this decision would be affirmed on the ground, of the absence of evidence of identity of the parties executing the power of attorney, as being those described in the will of testator, & the same weight of evidence in a ct. governed by the Law of France could not be given to the certificate of an English notary public as to a certificate of a French notary public.—NYE v. 1356. ———.]—The execution of a release was attested by a notary in a colony. There was no evidence that the attestation was for the purpose of using the deed in ct.:—Held: nevertheless, it was a document to be used in ct. within 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22, & the ct. would take judicial notice of the notary's seal & signature.—BROOKE v. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1365. Nature of presumptions.]—There are presumptions of several sorts, some are violent, & some probable: A violent presumption that such a man hath done such a fact must be when a fact is done & no other can be thought of to have done it: as if a man be killed in a room & another man comes out of the room with a bloody sword in his hand & nobody else was in the room. Here is a plain fact done, & though nobody can swear they saw this man do the fact, that he killed him, yet from this evidence there is a very strong proof. . . . But a probable presumption alone is no proof to rely upon; where indeed there is some proof of witnesses positive & the presumption is probable that is added thereto, it may be a good fortifying evidence, but it signifies very little of itself for a foundation (HOLT, C.J.).—BATH & MOUNTAGUE'S CASE (1693), as reported in 3 Cas. in Ch. 55, 96; 22 E. R. 963, 988.

1366. —.]—It has been said that there is to be no presumption in criminal cases. Nothing is so dangerous as stating general abstract principles. We are not to presume without proof. We are not to imagine guilt where there is no evidence to raise the presumption. But when one or more things are proved, from which our experience enables us to ascertain that another, not proved, must have happened, we presume that it did happen, as well in criminal as in civil cases. Nor is it necessary that the fact not proved should be established by irrefragable inference. It is enough, if its existence be highly probable, particularly if the opposite party has it in his power to rebut it by evidence & yet offers none; for then we have something like an admission that the presumption is just. It has been solemnly decided that there is no difference between the rules of evidence in civil & criminal cases, & the rules of evidence prescribe the best course to get at truth, they must be & are the same in all cases, & in all civilised countries. There is scarcely a criminal case, from the highest down to the lowest, in which ets. of justice do not act upon this principle. Lord Mansfield gives the reason for this. "As it seldom happens that absolute certainly can be obtained in human affairs, therefore reason & public utility require that judges & all mankind, in forming their opinions of the truth of facts, should be regulated by the superior number of probabilities on one side & on the other. In the highest crime known to the law, treason, you act upon presumption. On proof of rebellion, or the endeavour to incite rebellion, you presume an intent to kill the King. In homicide, upon proof of the fact of killing, you presume the malice necessary to constitute murder, & put it on the prisoner, by extracting facts in cross-examination, or by direct testimony, to lower his offence to manslaughter, or justifiable homicide. In burglary & highway robbery, if a person is found in possession of the goods recently after the crime, you presume the possessor guilty, unless he can account for the possession. In the case of a libel, which is charged to be written with a particular intent, if the libel is calculated to produce the effect charged to be intended, you presume the intent. It, therefore, appears to me quite absurd to state that we are not to act upon presumption. Until it pleases Providence to give us means beyond those our present faculties afford, of knowing things done in secret, we must act on presumptive proof, or leave the worst crimes unpunished. I admit, where presumption is attempted to be raised as to the corpus delicti, that it ought to be strong & cogent; but in a part of the case relating merely to the question of venue, leaving the body of the offence untouched, I would act on as slight grounds of presumption as would satisfy me in the most trifling cause that can be tried in Westminster Hall (BEST, J.).—R. v. 1367. Effect of presumptions—To prove negative.]—Upon the hearing of a summons under Vaccination Act, 1867 (c. 81), s. 31, against the parent of a child for non-compliance with an order of justices directing him to have his child vaccinated, the burden of proving non-compliance is upon the prosecution. Evidence that the certificate of vaccination required by the Act has not been received by the proper officer is prima facie evidence from which non-compliance with the vaccination order may properly be presumed.

Generally the only way of proving a negative is by presumption, & the ct. has to apply the proper presumption. In the case of vaccination, machinery is provided under the Act whereby, if a child is vaccinated, the fact of vaccination is notified by various persons, & if no notification is made it can only be because some one has omitted to do his duty. The fact therefore that no notification of vaccination has been received by the proper officer is to my mind prima facie evidence sufficient to satisfy the burden of proving the negative proposition that the child has not been vaccinated. That seems to me to be the only possible conclusion. Whether this is the best proof is a question with which we have nothing to do. If the public vaccinator were called, it would still be possible that another practitioner might have vaccinated the child, & the justices would still have to rely upon a presumption, & might refuse to act upon the presumption arising from the evidence of the public vaccinator (CHANNELL, J.).—OVER v. HARWOOD, [1900] 1 Q. B. 803; 69 L. J. Q. B. 272; 64 J. P. 326; 48 W. R. 608; 16 T. L. R. 163, D. C.

If evidence of what he said twenty or thirty years ago had been adduced, then the judges would have said the jury cannot reasonably infer from that, that this was his state of mind in Feb. 1884. 1402. ———.]—If a person has not been heard of for seven years, there is a presumption of law that he is dead; but at what time within that period he died is not a matter of presumption, but of evidence, & the onus of proving that the death took place at any particular time within the seven years lies upon the person who claims a right to the establishment of which that fact is essential. There is no presumption of law in favour of the continuance of life, though an inference of fact may legitimately be drawn that a person alive & in health on a certain day was alive a short time afterwards. Testator died on Jan. 5, 1861, having bequeathed his residuary estate equally between his nephews & nieces. One of his nephews, N., was born in 1829, had gone to America in 1853, had frequently written home till Aug. 1858, when he wrote from on board an American ship of war, but from that time no letter had been received from him, & nothing was afterwards heard about him, except that he was entered in the books of the American Navy as having deserted on June 16, 1860, while on leave:—Held: his personal representative had not established a title to any share of testator's estate, & it must be divided among the nephews & nieces who were proved to have survived testator.—RE PHENÉ'S TRUSTS (1870), 5 Ch. App. 139; 39 L. J. Ch. 316; 22 L. T. 111; 18 W. R. 303, L. J.

1403. ———.]—When a person has been absent for seven years without having been heard of, the only presumption arising is that he is dead, there is none as to the time of his death. Therefore, where a person was entitled for life to a share of residue under the will of testatrix who died in 1890, & nothing was heard of him after Mar. 31, 1895, the trustees of her will were justified in declining to pay the income of the share to persons claiming on his behalf after Mar. 31, 1895, the onus of proving that he was alive at the date of the applications for payment to the trustees being on those claiming the income.

In like manner the onus of proving his survivorship was upon those claiming a share accrued to him as a member of a class of persons under the same will who took it on the death of a beneficiary without issue on Mar. 16, 1896.

But to prevent an intestacy his children taking such accrued shares under a gift to the issue of deceased members of a class of which he was one will not have the onus cast on them of proving his death before that date.—Re ALDERSEY, GIBSON v. HALL, [1905] 2 Ch. 181; 74 L. J. Ch. 548; 92 L. T. 826.

1408. Duty of trustee to similar presumption to court of law.—T. in 1814 sailed from L. for R. & had never since been heard of. Pltfs. as next of kin claimed a fund to which T. had become entitled but deft., into whose possession as trustee the fund came in 1814, retained it in his own hands & refused to pay it over to pltfs. without first securing direct & positive proof of the death of T.:—Held: the trustee must pay over the whole fund together with interest at £5 per cent. from the time when he ought to have invested it, & also the costs of the suit.—DOBSON v. PATTINSON (1857), 3 Jur. N. S. 1202; 5 W. R. 771.

1409. Bank of England not bound to act on evidence sufficient for court of law.—Evidence which the Ct. of Ch. may now, in uncontested cases, consider sufficient to prove a death, is not necessarily binding & conclusive upon, or to be accepted as satisfactory by the Bank of England. The Bank has a discretion to exercise for its own protection & the benefit of the public: & this ct. will not compel it, when exercising that discretion bonâ fide, to depart from its own settled practice. Therefore, an injunction to restrain the Bank from requiring an examined copy of a burial certificate purporting to be duly signed was refused.—PROSSER v. BANK OF ENGLAND (1872), L. His wife died in England in Feb. 1857, leaving a will dated Jan. 1857:—Held: Probate would be granted to the exor. as of the will of a widow.

I think you are entitled to have your motion granted. Seven years have fully elapsed since the husband was heard of, which is a fair ground for presuming that a person is dead, but not for presuming that he died at the beginning or at the end of the seven years. Here, there is ground for supposing that this person died some time ago. If he had remained in Albany, he would probably have been known there; but not having been known, it is probable that he died very soon after his arrival there. 1435. General rule.—A tenant for life entitled beneficially under a will assigned her interests to secure the repayment of certain advances, & the premiums on policies on her life. At the end of Mar. 1866, a small sum of money—usually paid quarterly—was paid to her. Shortly afterwards she went on a pedestrian tour, & had never been heard of since. The small sum which became payable at the end of June was never applied for:—Held: the presumption was that she was dead, & on the evidence she could not be presumed to have died before June, 1866, but she must be taken to have died soon after June, 1866.

It is impossible to distinguish a case of presumption of death from one of presumption of life, for whoever has to make out a case in order to establish a title which depends upon the fact of either the death or the life of any person must prove that fact (HALL, V.-C.).—*HICKMAN v. 1441. — [.]—Testator gave a legacy to be equally divided, within twelve months, between the children of W. who should be living at his, testator's, death, such sum to be raised out of the property hereinafter given to his extrix. for life. He then gave to his extrix. certain real & personal estate for her life, & after her death to the children of W. living at his, testator's, death. At testator's death in Jan. 1847, there were four children of W. living, but another, J., had not been heard of since Feb. 1845, & nothing ever was heard of him afterwards. The extrix. paid to the four children, who were known to be living, four fifth shares of the legacy, but did not raise the remaining fifth. In 1871 the four surviving children of W. & the administrator of J. petitioned that the remaining fifth share of the legacy, with interest, might be paid to the four children, or, if not, then to the administrator of J.:—Held: there being no proof that J. survived testator, the share must be paid to the four children who were known to have survived him.

1450. — Certificate of Registrar-General of Shipping.—Upon motion to presume the death of a man who sailed from this country for Western Australia on board a small vessel which called at Cape Town & was never heard of after leaving that port, the certificate of the Registrar-General of Shipping & Seamen was produced, which stated (inter alia) that the person in question was returned as serving upon the vessel as second mate at the time when she was last heard of, & that he was "supposed drowned." The certificate was furnished in pursuance of the provisions of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), & two members of deceased's family swore to their belief in his death. The underwriters of the vessel had paid the insurance money, as upon a total loss, & notice had been given to the office with whom deceased's life was insured:—Held: the death would be presumed as having occurred on or since the date when the vessel was last heard of.—In the Goods of DODD (1897), 77 L. 1453. —.]—A. left this country on Nov. 9, 1829. On June 16, 1831, his brother-in-law received a letter from America on behalf of A., describing him as having changed his name to B. Three months after this A.'s wife sent a letter to him, addressed to him as B., by the hand of a friend who could not find him. He was not heard of any more, & it did not appear that any inquiries were made by his family:—Held: on this state of facts there was not sufficient information to ground presumption of death, still less of the particular period of death.—Re CREED (1852), 1 Drew. 235; 61 E. R. 441.

1454. —.]—A policy on the life of R. was granted in 1863. An action was brought upon it in 1874, & the question was whether R. was alive or dead. He had been absent from his former home for more than seven years, having left it in 1867. His sister & brother-in-law, who lived where he had formerly lived, gave evidence as to his absence, & said that they had not heard of him for more than seven years. On cross-examination they said that a niece of his had said that when she was in Melbourne, in Dec. 1872, or Jan. 1873, she saw a man whom she believed to be her uncle R., but he was lost in the passing crowd before she was able to get to speak to him. No effort appeared to have been made to find him at Melbourne, & the other relatives believed the niece to have been mistaken. The jurymen expressed a similar opinion. The judge directed the jurymen that they "could not say that the man had not been heard of during the last seven years when one of his relatives declared that she had seen him alive, & well within the last three years; & still less could they say that he had never been heard of, when all the members of the family stated that they had heard what she had stated"; & "that the ground for the presumption of death from a man having been absent for seven years was entirely removed by the direct evidence that every relative had heard that he was alive." & lastly, His Lordship said to the jury, "Under these circumstances unless you are prepared to find that he was dead in Apr. 1875, & find it upon evidence which tends to prove exactly the contrary, & in the absence of that evidence upon which alone the presumption should be raised of his death, your verdict ought to be for debts." The Ct. of Appeal had considered this to be a misdirection, & had ordered a venire de novo. On appeal to the House of Lords:—Held: the decision of the Ct. of Appeal would be affirmed.—PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE CO. v. EDMONDS (1877), 2 App. Cas. 487, II. L.

1455. Sailor leaving ship—No intention to desert.—A sailor left his ship at the end of the year 1849 or very early in 1850 & had not since been heard of:—Held: (1) if he was shown to have intended to desert, it could not be presumed that he was dead in May, 1850; (2) if he intended to return to his ship, the ct. would assume that he had met with an accident, by which he perished a very short time after leaving the vessel & before May, 1850.—LAKIN v. LAKIN (1865), 34 Beav. 443; 12 L. T. 517; 11 Jur. N. S. 522; 13 W. R. 704; 55 E. R. 707.

He never applied for his half-yearly dividends in the ensuing Oct. It appeared that he was of very dissolute habits, & chiefly depended on the dividends for his maintenance. The question being whether he died before Nov. 1860:—Held: not having applied for the dividends due to him in Oct. 1860, & having regard to the state of his health when last seen, the presumption must be that he died before Nov. 1860.—Re BEASNEY'S TRUSTS (1869), L. He also took his best clothes, clean linen, & such jewelry as he possessed. The canal was thoroughly dragged by the police, but nothing was found:—Held: under the circumstances, the ct. was not bound to presume that debtor was dead.—Re LEWIS, Ex p. BECKER (1893), 9 T. L. The affidavit in support thereof stated that pltf. went to America in 1824 & had not since been heard of by deft. No direct evidence was produced that pltf. was living, nor the date of any letter from him since 1827:—Held: the circumstances afforded sufficient ground of suspicion to direct a reference to the master as to that fact.—*HOWE v. 1468. Presumption of death of annuitant—Payment out of principal & accumulation—Upon security to refund.]—A sum of money was set apart in 1815 to answer an annuity to a woman then supposed to be resident in India, but who was never afterwards heard of. In 1837 the master having certified, upon presumption, that she was dead, but without finding when she died, the ct. ordered payment of the principal money to the party entitled to it, subject to the annuity. In 1842 the master having certified, upon presumption, that she had died in 1822, & that no personal representative had been heard of, the ct. ordered immediate payment, to the same party, of the accumulations since that time; & in 1847 it ordered payment of the rest of the fund to the same party though resident abroad, upon his giving his personal security to refund, in case the annuitant or her personal representative should ever establish a claim.—*CUTHBERT v. Upon the whole I am not satisfied that proof is adduced that the wife survived. Taking it to be, they both died together, the administration is due to the representatives of the husband. the ground of his death, no definite period of absence is sufficient in itself to establish a presumption that the person who has not been heard of during that period is dead. The question is, in all such cases, one for the exercise of the discretion of the ct.

Where B. had not been heard of for fifteen years, & no response had been made to advertisements which had been inserted in newspapers circulating in the place where he had last been known to live, the ct., in the absence of more accurate inquiries, refused to authorise the distribution of his property.—Re BEAGLEHOLE (1908), T. 1481. No presumption of survivorship or simultaneous death.—(1) There is no presumption of law arising from age or sex as to survivorship among persons whose death is occasioned by one & the same cause. Nor is there any presumption of law that all died at the same time. The question is one of fact, depending wholly on evidence, & if the evidence does not establish the survivorship of any one the law will treat it as a matter incapable of being determined. Two persons, husband & wife, made their separate wills. In the husband's will the property was given to his wife, "& in case my wife shall die in my lifetime," then to W. in trust for the children on their coming of age, & in case all of them should die under age then to W. for his absolute use & benefit. In the wife's will, made under a power given by her deceased father, in default of the exercise of which the property was to go to relatives specifically named, the property was given to the husband, subject to interests in the children, "& in case my husband should die in my lifetime" then to W. absolutely. The husband & wife & two children perished at sea, being all swept off the deck by one wave, & all disappearing together:—Held: there was no presumption that the husband had survived the wife, or the wife the husband.

H., testator having died in 1880 & divided his converted estate into nine equal parts or shares, were respectively entitled to one-ninth share under his will. The shares were given upon trust to pay the income unto each of his daughters during their lives, & after their respective decease & the decease of their surviving husbands each daughter's share was to be in trust for the daughter's children at twenty-one or marriage in equal shares & testator directed that if any of his daughters should die without leaving children her surviving then the share of such daughter should be divisible amongst brothers & sisters then living & the children of such of them as should be dead, such children to take equally their parent's share only.

One share of residue was held in trust for E. F. P. the mother of the first & second defts. The first deft., a daughter of E. F. P. was married in 1895. Her father died in 1910, her mother, E. F. P., in 1914, & her marriage was dissolved in July, 1917.

By her marriage settlement, date June 15, 1895, she covenanted that all property to which she should during her then intended coverture become entitled should be vested in the trustees as soon as circumstances permitted upon trusts as to the income as therein directed.

E. H., another of the testator's daughters, married, & having survived her husband, died, aged ninety-three, without having had a child. On E. H.'s death one-fifth of her share passed to the first deft., who had previously mortgaged her reversionary interest in P. C.'s estate to the second PART III. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 8.

1526 i. Performance of duty.—Deft. was tried before a police magistrate & convicted. At the trial, the magistrate had the evidence taken by a shorthand writer:—Held: there was nothing to show that the magistrate had not complied with Criminal Code, s. 793; & it must be assumed that he had done his duty.—*R. v. g. — Deed acted upon for thirty years.—After a lapse of thirty years a deed by an administratrix, under a license from the Probate Ct. to sell, will be presumed to be good, though there is no affidavit of the administratrix indorsed thereon, as required by Probate Act, 1840, & no proof that the provisions of the Act as to notice of sale, etc., were complied with.

h. — Grant of water—Issue of statutory notices.—Held: a grantee of water under B. C. Land Ordinance, 1865, who has used the water granted to him for several years, would not be required, in an action for damages caused by interference with such user, to prove that he gave the notices required by sect. 45, as it would be presumed that the same were given before recording the grant.—*MARTLEY v. 1531. — Presumption of enrolment.]—37 Hen. 8. c. 12, enacted, that such decree as should be made by the Archbishop & others, before Mar. 1, then next ensuing, of or concerning the payment of tithes, oblations, or other duties within the said city or liberties of the same, & enrolled in the King's High Ct. of Ch. of Record, should stand & remain, & be as an Act of Parliament, & should bind as well all the said citizens as the said clergy, etc. for ever. The decree was made, but no enrolment of it in Ch. could be produced, though the decree appeared, by a statement in the registry-book of the Sec of London, to have been given by the Archbishop to the Bishop of London, to be kept in the registry of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Appl't. filed his bill against resp. for an account of the tithes due from resp. under this Act, & the decree therein mentioned. Resp.'s answer denied the enrolment of the decree, & its existence as a legal instrument:—Held: after the cts. had repeatedly treated the decree as a binding instrument, & after the citizens had recognised it by the usage of paying tithes according to its order, the enrolment must be presumed.—MACDOUGALL v. PURRIER (1830), 4 Bli. N. S. 433; 2 Dow & Cl. 135; 5 E. R. 151, H. L.

1. — Mode of dealing with a fund.]—Parties entitled to a fund dealt with it in a particular way for a long series of years. In the absence of positive evidence showing what their shares were:—Held: the parties must be taken to have been entitled to it in the shares pointed out by their mode of dealing with it.—SNEYD v. p. — Constitution of court-martial.]—Under Restoration of Order in Ireland Act, 1920, s. 1 (2) (b), a court-martial, when trying a person charged with a crime punishable by death, shall include as a member of the ct. a person of legal knowledge & experience. W. was sentenced to death by a court-martial, no question as to the qualifications of the members of the ct. being raised. He afterwards applied to the K. B. Div. for a writ of certiorari to quash the conviction on the ground that no certificate as to legal knowledge & experience of a member of the ct. was handed in. The application was refused on the ground that, in the absence of any objection at the trial, there was a general presumption of law that the ct. was properly constituted.—WHELAN v. R., [1921] 2 I. q. — Foreign adjudication of bankruptcy.]—The cts. of this colony will presume prima facie that an adjudication in bkpty. in another colony has been duly made, & the preliminary steps duly taken.—STRIKE v. GLEICH (1879), O. B. & F. 50.—N.Z.

r. — Sheriff's proceedings.]—A. purchased lands at sheriff's sale in 1831, & took possession with the assent of the judgment debtor, who never disputed A.'s right or the regularity of the proceedings:—Held: in an action of trespass against A. by a person who showed no title, & had only recently obtained possession, but did not claim under the judgment debtor, that it would be presumed that the sheriff's proceedings were regular.—MCLARDY v. FLAHERTY (1847), 3 Kerr, 455.—CAN.

— Seizure of land.] —

1532. — —.]—On the separation of A. & B., husband & wife, in Apr. 1797, an annuity was settled by the husband on the wife determinable on payment of £1,000. In Nov. 1797, at which time B. was living in adultery with C., a bond & warrant of attorney was given by the husband to C. to secure £1,400. Judgment was entered up on the bond, & in 1801 proceedings were taken to enforce it, but were stopped by injunction. Afterwards another bond for £537 was given by the husband to C., which was satisfied in 1803. Upon a bill filed in 1833, by B. against A.'s extrix., for payment of the arrears of the annuity, pl'tf. being unable to prove that any payment had been made on account of the annuity since 1803, & deft. producing the bond for £1,400, the warrant of attorney to enter up judgment thereon & the bond for £537, with a receipt for that amount indorsed:—Held: considering the lapse of time, & the situation of the parties, it might be presumed that the bond for £1,400 was given in discharge of the £1,000, & the subsequent bond for £537 in full discharge of payment of the whole debt.—HAWORTH v. BOSTOCK (1840), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 1; 160 E. R. 894; on appeal (1842), 9 Cl. & Fin. 59, H. L.; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. BOSTOCK v. HUME (1841), 7 Man. & G. 893, Ex. Ch.

1533. — Legal foundation of charity.]—B. hospital is a freehold building, divided into rooms; each room is of the annual value of £1, & is inhabited by a bedesman, who is appointed to it by E., the heir male of the original founder, or by certain others. No deed, or charter, or enrolment, or letters patent of the hospital exists, nor any common seal, but the hospital is governed by certain rules, made 1597, of which there is a printed copy; these rules refer to certain feoffees & their heirs, but none are known. By one of the rules no one is to be admitted who is leprous or a drunkard, etc.; & by another, any one falling into these infirmities or vices is to be

The sheriff made a seizure of deft.'s land under pl'tf.'s execution. It did not appear that the execution had been registered in the land titles office:—Held: the seizure must be presumed to have been regularly made until the contrary was shown.—IMPERIAL ELEVATOR CO. v. 1534. —[—]—A decree to all appearance just in itself, when pronounced, & strengthened, moreover, by constant possession & unvarying recognition for more than two centuries:—Held: to require the strongest grounds to warrant its impeachment, the great principle applicable to such a case being Omnia presumuntur a iudice rite et solemniter acta. This principle was deemed peculiarly imperative in a case where the decree in question, with its warrant & register, was shown to have perished in a great fire so far back as 1700, nothing remaining but an extract.

1535. —[—]—We are bound to presume a legal origin if such be possible in favour of a right which appears from the facts stated in the case to have existed for many hundreds of years & that the inaccurate description of such a right in a series of conveyances cannot interfere with the presumption which we should otherwise be entitled to make from the facts with relation to the enjoyment of the right (KELLY, C.B.).—JOHNSON v. BARNES (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 527; 42 L. J. C. P. 259; 29 L. T. 65, Ex. Ch.

1537. —Approval by local authority to construction of new sewer.]—The fact that the requisite sanction & approval for the making of a sewer in the metropolis was not obtained from the vestry or Metropolitan Board of Works does not prevent it, when made, from being a sewer within the meaning of the Metropolitan Management Acts, & as such vested in the vestry & repairable by them.

In 1866 the owner of a block of houses in the metropolis laid down a pipe to carry off the drainage from them, & connected the pipe with a sewer belonging to the vestry in a neighbouring street. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to the vestry, or of any order having been made by them, or of their sanction or of the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works having been obtained, under the Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120) or Metropolitan Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102):—Held: the probable inference of fact was that the pipe was laid with the sanction of the vestry & the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works required by the Acts.—ST. f. —[—]—Where depositions taken under a commission are returned to the ct. enclosed in an envelope addressed as directed by Consol. g. —Certificate of examination by justices.]—Where, after the decease of one of the justices of the peace by whom an examination was taken, the other, an old man of seventy-three, gave evidence that he did not recollect & did not believe that the wife was examined as the certificate stated, the ct. gave credit to the certificate, notwithstanding the evidence.—ROMANES v. FRASER (1870), 17 Gr. 267.—CAN.

h. —Administration of oath of allegiance.]—In 1821 J. S., with his son S., & his daughter H., came from the U.S., & settled in C., all being aliens. On Mar. 20, 1821, the Crown granted the land in question to J. S. Neither J. S. nor his children ever took the oath of allegiance. J. S. died on May 17, 1828, & S. about Nov. 6, 1842:—Held: under Alien Act, 1828, assented to on May 10, 1828, J. S. was a British subject, for it might be presumed that he took the oath when he got the patent.—ELLER v. ELLIOTT (1872), 32 U. C. R. 434.—CAN.

k. —Issue of writ of mesne process.]—In the absence of evidence of the actual time of issuing a writ of mesne process, it will be presumed to have issued on the day it bears date.—POMERES v. PROVINCIAL INSURANCE CO. (1873), cited in Stevens' N. B. Digest, at p. 604.—CAN.

l. —Adoption of road by quarter sessions.]—A road was surveyed in 1834, & the surveyor's report was made to the quarter sessions in that year. The records were, however, lost or destroyed, & there was no evidence that the road had been adopted by the sessions under the Act then in force, nor was there a record of any order directing it to be opened. It was, however, actually opened before 1853, with the assent of the owners of the land, & was used for several years, & statute labour was done upon it:—Held: the due adoption of the road by the quarter sessions should be presumed.—PALMATIER v. MCKIBBON (1894), 21 A. R. 441.—CAN.

m. —Deposit of cash security.]—There is a material difference in the evidence required by law to prove a recognisance & a security for cash. No proceedings can be brought to enforce a recognisance unless the condition for which the recognisance was made is evidence in writing, while by statute the condition for which the deposit was made is irrelevant, since it is presumed that when the registrar becomes custodian of the deposit the maxim omnia presumuntur rite esse acta applies.—R. v. n. —Use of lock-up as place of detention.]—Deft., who was confined in the lock-up of the town of S., was tried & convicted of the offence of breaking prison. The evidence showed that the lock-up was situated in the same building with the office of the police magistrate of the town, & had been used for years as a place of detention for persons charged with the commission of criminal offences, & that there was no other place in the town used for such purpose:—Held: the regularity of all proceedings necessary to constitute the lock-up a place of confinement in such cases was to be assumed.—R. v. BROWN (1907), 41 N. S. R. 293.—CAN.

o. —Instructions of Ordnance officer.]—Held: upon the evidence defts. were liable as common carriers for the value of military clothing forming the contents of a box shipped by instructions of an Ordnance officer by defts. railway & lost in transit; the presumption & the proper inference from the facts were that the instructions of the officer had been carried out in the regular course of the business of the Ordnance office.—R. v. MINING CO., REGISTERED (1883), 9 V. L. R. 108.—AUS.

g. Obedience to bye-law.]—Licensed Carriages Act, 1864, s. 5 (No. 217), authorises Bye Law 78, s. 16 of the city of Melbourne, which provides that no owner of a licensed carriage shall entrust that carriage to another person as driver except as that owner's servant. Every owner licensed under these bye laws, & employing a driver, is to be presumed, until the contrary is shown, to have obeyed this bye law.—CLUTTERBUCK v. GURRY (1885), 11 V. L. R. 810.—AUS.

SUB-SECT. 9.—OMNIA PRÆSUMUNTUR CONTRA SPOLIATOREM.

1545. General rule.—There is a well-known principle that if the persons against whom the claim is made are not willing to bind themselves as to the maximum number of trains, or the weight, or the speed, then the sum must be taken most strongly against their co. upon the principles enunciated in Armory v. Delamirie, No. 1550, post; & the largest amount of injury which can be sustained would probably be considered to be the amount to be awarded by the tribunal which has to award compensation (LORD CAIRNS).—HAMMERSMITH & CITY RY. CO. v. BRAND (1860), L. R. 4 H. L. 171; 38 L. J. Q. B. 265; 21 L. T.

p. As to delivery of insurance policy & payment of premium.—The production from the custody of representatives of the insured of a policy of life insurance raises a presumption that it was duly delivered & the premium paid.—MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA v. GIGUERE (1902), 22 C. L. T. 276; 32 S. C. R. 348.—CAN.

q. As to regularity of transfer of member of benefit association.—Where the constitution of a benefit assocn. provides that members shall not be transferred from one lodge to another unless all dues & assessments have been paid, up to & including those for the month in which the application for affiliation is made, the fact that, upon such an application, a member was transferred from one lodge to another involves the presumption as against the assocn. that the transfer was regularly made when the member was in good standing & in accordance with the regulations.—ANCIENT ORDER OF UNITED WORKMEN OF QUEBEC v. TURNER (1910), 44 S. C. R. 145.—CAN.

r. As to appointment of officials of company.—7 Wm. IV. c. 54, incorporating the N. B. M. I. Co., required that policies should be subscribed by the president & countersigned by the secretary.—Held: a policy so signed was valid without the seal of the co., & evidence of these persons having acted as president & secretary was prima facie evidence of their appointment.—DIMOCK v. NEW BRUNSWICK MARINE ASSURANCE CO. (1849), 1 All. 398.—CAN.

s. As to acts of private persons.—The maxim omnia presumuntur rite esse acta may be recognised in support of solemn acts even of private persons. 1546. Suppression of documents—Adverse title presumed.—Where a deed or other evidence is suppressed by either party, a ct. of equity will always presume a title against him who suppressed it.—LEWIS v. LEWIS (1680), Cas. temp. Finch, 471; 23 E. R. 254, L. C.

1547. ———.—The suppression of some of

a. b. Destruction of documents—When presumption not justified.—St. L. filed a petition of right to recover from the Crown the balance alleged to be due on a contract for certain public works. On the hearing it was shown that certain time-books & the original documents from which his accounts had been made up & also his books of account had disappeared.—Held: the rule omnia presumuntur contra spoliatores did not justify the learned judge in assuming that if produced the documents destroyed would have falsified St. L.'s accounts, the evidence on the trial showing instead that the accounts would have been corroborated.—*ST. 1549. Bundle of documents unsealed & disarranged—Presumption that some documents abstracted.—An account touching a personal estate being decreed, deft. endeavoured to charge pltf. with a great debt due to the estate; but deft. having opened a bundle of papers relating to that demand, which had been sealed up, & left in his hands, & altered them so that it could not be known what papers might have been taken out, deft.'s demand was for that reason disallowed.—WARDOUR v. OSBORNE, C. R., [1911] 1 A. C. 137.—CAN.

d. — Presumption as to admissibility of evidence.—In a suit brought against a collector to compel him to refrain from preventing pltf. executing his decree against certain land, the only issue being whether the land was the private property of the judgment-debtors or govt. service land, pltf. alleged that the land had been granted in fee mainly by a sanad which he petitioned the mamladdar of the pergunnah to search for & send to the collector; & on reference by the High Ct. the judge found that the collector did destroy the document that purported to be a copy of a sanad, such as pltf. petitioned the mamladdar to send for.—Held: it was not competent for deft. to say that the document was not such a one as could be legally admitted in evidence, & that the case came within the rule, omnia præsumentur contra spoliatores.—ARDESHIR DHANJIBHAI v. SURAT (COLLECTOR) (1866), 3 Bom. A. C. 116.—IND.

e. Wrongful appropriation—Water—Absence of record of amount taken.—Defts. owned waterworks, & supplied pltf. with water. Pltf. paid for the water according to the amount used, as measured by a meter, but used unmetered water for some years. Pltf. offered to settle for the water that had been used, & assented to pay $13.778. Payment was made on that basis, by a number of cheques, some of which, amounting to $6.778, were paid. Payment of the cheques representing the balance was stopped, & pltf. sued to recover the cheques & part of the amount which they had paid.—Held: as pltf. had gone on for years deliberately appropriating defts.' water without preserving any record of the quantity so taken, every presumption must be made against defts.—BRANDON ELECTRIC LIGHT CO. v. 1552. Failure to prove value of bank note—Presumed of lowest value.—In an action of debt for money lent, the only evidence was, that deft. having asked pltf. for some money, the latter handed him a note which was believed to be a bank note, but the amount of which did not appear.—Held: the jury were rightly directed to presume it to have been a note for £5, as being the smallest note in circulation in this country.—LAWTON v. SWEENEY (1844), 8 Jur. 964.

1553. Spoliation of ship's papers.—The permission to hospital ships to have a wireless telegraph installation on board does not justify the sending of messages by a secret code, & if such messages are sent, a record of them should be kept to prove their innocent character. Where documents are purposely destroyed there is a very strong presumption that, if produced, they would have told against the destroyer.—THE OPHELIA, [1916] 2 A. C. 206; 85 L. J. P. 169; 114 L. 1554. Loss by bailee.—An agister of cattle does not discharge himself of his duty as a bailee for reward by proving that they were stolen without his default, if by using reasonable diligence he could have recovered them. If, having failed to use such diligence, he is sued for the loss of the cattle, he must prove, in order to discharge himself, that such diligence would have been unavailing; it is not for the bailor to prove that it would have retrieved the loss.

A farmer accepted certain cattle for agistment. Some of them were stolen without his default. After learning that they were missing he made no effort, whether by informing the owner or the police, or otherwise, to recover them. It was doubtful whether any reasonable attempt on his part would have led to their recovery.—Held: he was liable for their loss.—COLDMAN v. HILL, [1919] 1 K. B. 443; 88 L. J. K. B. 491; 120 L. SUB-SECT. 10.—OTHER PRESUMPTIONS.

1556. Receipt of letter—Evidence of possession of enclosure.]—Proof that pltf. wrote a letter to deft. purporting to contain a bill of exchange, with directions how the product should be applied, & that deft. soon afterwards had a bill in his possession which answered the description contained in the letter, affords presumptive evidence, that both the letter & the bill found their way to deft.—KIERAN v. JOHNSON (1815), 1 Stark. 109, N. P.

1557. Receipt of notice—Of dishonour of bill—No objection taken for lack of notice.]—In an Action on a bill of exchange, proof that pltf., on the day on which he himself received notice of dishonour from the holder, wrote & delivered a letter to deft., & proof of notice to produce that letter, as containing notice of dishonour; & that deft., when asked to pay the bill, stated several objections, but did not object that he had not had notice of dishonour, are evidence, on default to produce the letter, that it contained a regular notice of dishonour.—CURLLEWIS v. 1559. Authority to act—Joint-stock Company.]—Where deft. has called on pltf. to admit certain letters written by A. as the agent of deft., that fact is evidence of an authority to give verbal directions on the same subject-matter.

Where the writ & declaration are against the Birmingham Plate & Crown Glass Co., & the appearance & plea are by defts. under the same style, that fact is evidence to go to the jury that defts. are a registered joint-stock co., & are rightly sued in their corporate title.

Where it further appears that defts. meet & act as a joint-stock co., that is also evidence that they are entitled so to meet & act.—OFFER v. BIRMINGHAM PLATE & CROWN GLASS CO. (1848), 12 L. T. O. S. 275.

1560. Non-existence—Manorial custom—Silence of manorial records.]—In 1605, a deed was executed by certain copyholders of a manor, by which they claimed certain customs set forth in it as the immemorial customs for & concerning the copyhold premises described in a schedule to the deed, & in consideration of a large sum paid to him, the lord ratified them, & consented that they should thenceafter for ever be the customs touching the customary & copyhold tenements, & by a decree in Chancery made in 1607, in a suit for a specific performance, in which the copyholders were pltfs. & the lord deft., the lord confessed this agreement, & consented to a decree “so as only such order & decree, & the customs, should extend only to complainants, their heirs, & assigns, & to their copyhold lands, & to none other, & might not be prejudicial to the lord, concerning any other copyhold lands,” which was made accordingly. S. was a party to this deed, & in the schedule the lands held by him were described in such a manner as not to be inconsistent with the fact that a particular tenement conveyed by him in 1607, & subsequently traced to deft., might have been comprised. There was no entry upon the rolls of any admission to this tenement between 1598, & the period of this conveyance, & the anterior rolls were lost:—Held: the deed & the decree were evidence against deft. to negative the existence of a custom on the part of the copyholders to take the minerals, such a custom not being included in those instruments.—ANGLESEY (MARQUIS) v. HATHERTON (LORD) (1842), 10 M. & W. 218; 12 L. J. Ex. 57; 6 Jur. 305; 152 E. R. 448.

1561. —]——]—In lands held, by copy of ct. roll, not at the will of the lord, but according to the custom of the manor, the freehold is in the lord; & in the absence of custom, the onus of establishing which lies upon the tenant, the tenant has no right to work the minerals. The existence of a customary, compiled within the period of legal memory, is conclusive evidence against the existence of a custom not mentioned therein.—PORTLAND (DUKE) v. HILL (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 765; 35 L. J. Ch. 439; 12 Jur. N. S. 286; 15 W. R. 38.

1562. Acceptance of cheque—Sent in settlement of claim.]—In the present case the draft for 650 rupees which was sent by R. T. to pltfs. was sent on the terms that they should accept it in full settlement of this claim on the promissory note, & that they should deliver up the note in exchange for it; & pltfs., with knowledge of these terms, retained the draft & cashed it. In my opinion, the fact that pltfs. retained & cashed the draft in these circumstances raises a presumption that they entered into an agreement to accept it on the terms on which it was sent (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—HIRACHAND PUNAMCHAND v. 1563. By parol evidence.]—Parol evidence admissible to rebut a presumption, without regard to the nature of it; as, whether a mere casual conversation with a stranger, or between the parties & upon the subject; or whether at the time of the transaction, previous or subsequent. But those circumstances are very material with reference to the weight & efficacy of it.—TRIMMER v. BAYNE (1802), 7 Ves. 508; 32 E. R. 205, L. C.

1565. By contrary presumption.]—Proof of possession of land & pernaney of the rents is prima facie evidence of a seisin in fee of the person. But proof of 40 years' subsequent possession by a daughter while a son & heir lived near & knew the fact is much stronger evidence that the first possessor had only a particular estate.

Nothing can be clearer than this: a presumption may be rebutted by a contrary & stronger presumption: in this case the contrary presumption, arising from the circumstances, is much stronger than the presumption of the seisin in fee (HEATH, J.).—JAYNE v. PRICE (1814), 5 Taunt. 326; 1 Marsh. 68; 128 E. R. 715.

1566. Presumption establishing a negative—Rebutted by slight circumstances.]—To rebut a presumption which goes to establish a negative proposition, slight circumstances may be quite enough (STUART, V.C.).—PHILLIPS v. BARKER (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 583; 2 Eq. Rep. 795; 23 L. J. Ch. 44; 22 L. T. O. S. 168; 17 Jur. 1146; 2 W. R. 110; 65 E. R. 255.

1567. Conflicting presumptions.]—In 1864 W. married A. In 1868 he was charged with bigamy in marrying B. in 1868, his wife A. being then alive, & was on such charge convicted. In 1879 he married C., & in 1880, C. being then alive, he married D. Afterwards, upon a charge of bigamy in marrying D., C. being then alive, W. was convicted, it being held by the presiding judge that there was no evidence that A. was alive when W. married C., or that the marriage with C. was invalid by reason of A. being then alive:—Held: the conviction could not be sustained, as the question should have been left to the jury whether upon the above facts A. was alive or not when W. married C.

It is said, & I think rightly, that there is a presumption in favour of the validity of this latter marriage, but prisoner showed that there was a valid marriage in 1864, & that the woman he then married was alive in 1868. He thus set up the existence of a life in 1868, which, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary will be presumed to have continued to 1879. It is urged, in effect that the presumption in favour of innocence, a presumption which goes to establish the validity of the marriage of 1879, rebuts the presumption in favour of the duration of life. It is sufficient to raise a question of fact for the jury to determine. It was for the jury to decide whether the man told & acted a falsehood for the purpose of marrying in 1879, or whether his real wife was then dead (COLERIDGE, C.J.).—R. v. WILSHIRE (1881), 6 Q. 1579. Similarity in design.—Now, in the case of those things as to which the merit of the invention lies in the drawing, or in forms that can be copied, the appeal is to the eye, and the eye alone is the judge of the identity of the two things, whether, therefore, there be piracy or not is referred at once to an unerring judge, namely, the eye, which takes the one figure & the other figure, & ascertains whether they are or are not the same (LORD WESTBURY).—*HOLDSWORTH v. 1590. Of models—In action for infringement of patent.]—I have been considering whether a proceeding might not be adopted in this case, which cannot be in a case where there is very complicated machinery & conflicting evidence. In this case I think the questions of the validity of the patent & the infringement will depend upon a comparison of pltf.'s specification with the specifications & the models showing what machines were in use before the date of the patent & the apparatus which defts. have used; & what I propose is, to reserve for the ct. all questions of law, & to leave the ct., upon the consideration & examination of these models & the specifications to say how the verdict should be entered upon the issues. I think, by adopting this course, the ct. would come to a more satisfactory conclusion as to the validity of the patent & the infringement of it, than by proceeding in the usual manner, which is often necessary, but which in this case does not apply (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).—NALDER v. 1598. ——— Illiteracy of witness—Evidence by affidavit.]—Observations on traditional evidence in pedigree cases, & its fallibility. It is not to be wholly rejected because error is proved as to part.

The veracity, or even accuracy, of an ignorant & illiterate person, is not to be conclusively tested by comparing an affidavit made by him, with his viva voce testimony; discrepancies between them is not conclusive against his testimony.

Observations on the value of testimony given by affidavit. When the witness is illiterate & ignorant, the language is not his own, but that of the person preparing the affidavit; being taken ex parte, it is almost always incomplete, & often inaccurate.

In cases where the whole evidence is traditional, when it consists entirely of family reputation or of statements of declarations made by persons who died long ago, it must be taken with such allowances, & also with such suspicions as ought reasonably to be attached to it. When family reputation or declarations of kindred made in a family are the subject of evidence, & the reputation is of long standing or the declarations are of old date, the memory as to the source of the reputation or as to the persons who made the declarations can rarely be characterised by perfect accuracy (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—JOHNSTON v. TODD (1843), 5 Beav. 597; 49 E. R. 710.

Deft.'s evidence was corroborated by a witness, who overheard what took place at the interview, & by pltf.'s admissions at the time of his arrest. 1617. Agreement to enter documents as read—Subsequent dispute.—Where, in order to save time of the ct., it is arranged between the parties, that a great body of documentary evidence shall be entered as read, if on examination by the parties it shall appear to be evidence, & afterwards the parties cannot agree upon the subject, the ct. will permit the cause to be again set down for hearing on the subject of that evidence, but will not permit the cause to be again opened, or any discussion to take place on the merits.—WYLD v. WARD (1827), 1 Y. & J. 536, Ex. Ch.

1618. — Agreements endorsed on documents—Signed by parties & solicitors—Evidence of registrar as to putting in.—Where at the trial parties agree that a bundle of copy correspondence shall be taken as put in saving all just exceptions, it is desirable that the agreement should be indorsed on the bundle & signed by the parties or their solrs. The registrar ought not to be called upon to say whether the whole of the bundle

n. — Witness impeaching own veracity.—The evidence of one who impeaches his own veracity is to be received with the most scrupulous jealousy.—BALDWIN v. HESSLER (1916), 38 O. L. R. 172.—CAN.

1613i. Question for jury.—The weight to be given to evidence is a matter for the jury under the direction of the ct.—CAIN v. UHLMAN (1887), 20 N. S. R. (8 R. & G.) 148; 8 C. L. T. 373.—CAN.

o. Evidence of facts preferred to opinions.—Where there is direct contradiction between equally credible witnesses the evidence of those who speak from facts within their personal knowledge should be preferred to that of experts giving opinions based upon extra-judicial statements & municipal reports.—CRAWFORD v. CITY OF MONTREAL (1900), 30 S. C. R. 406.—CAN.

p. ——In an action of the owner of adjoining property for damages caused by the vibrations of machinery in an electric powerhouse, the evidence was contradictory & the cts. below gave effect to the testimony of scientific witnesses in preference to that of persons acquainted with the locality:—Held: notwithstanding the concurrent findings of the cts. below, as the witnesses were equally credible the evidence of those who spoke from personal knowledge of the facts ought to have been preferred to that of persons giving opinions based merely upon scientific observations.—GAREAU v. MONTREAL STREET RY. CO. (1901), 31 S. C. R. 463.—CAN.

q. ——Evidence of facts is to be preferred as against opinions.—TAIT v. CITY OF NEW WESTMINSTER (1911), 18 W. L. R. 470.—CAN.

r. Evidence of interested witness—Weight of.—Although the law now allows interested parties to give evidence, & makes such evidence admissible, great weight should not be attached to such evidence.—HASHER v. SUMMERS (1884), 10 V. L. R. 201.—AUS.

s. ——The evidence of witnesses who are near relatives or whose interests are closely identified with those of one of the parties, ought not to prevail in favour of such party against the testimony of strangers who are disinterested witnesses.—LEFEUNTEUM v. BEAUDOIN (1897), 28 S. C. R. 89.—CAN.

t. — Where corroborated in essential details.—The objection that important testimony had been given by the wife & son, who were interested parties, lost the force that it would otherwise have had, where their testimony was corroborated in all essential particulars by disinterested witnesses.—Re FARQUHARSON'S ESTATE (1900), 33 N. S. L. 261.—CAN.

a. Conflicting evidence—Discretion of court.—Where evidence given before a master is conflicting, his judgment on it is, in general, accepted by the ct. as correct; & not to be reversed on appeal.—DAY v. BROWN (1871), 18 Gr. 681.—CAN.

b. — How investigated.—A rule for dealing with conflicts of evidence (where two witnesses of apparent equal credibility contradict each other) is, to consider what facts are beyond dispute & to examine which account best accords with those facts according to the ordinary course of human affairs & the usual habits of life or business.—KASTOR ADVERTISING CO. v. COLEMAN (1905), 11 O. L. R. 262.—CAN.

c. ——There is no safer rule for investigating cases of conflicting evidence, where perjury & fraud must exist on the one side or the other, than to consider what facts are beyond dispute, & to examine which of the two cases best accords with those facts according to the ordinary course of human affairs & the usual habits of life.—MEER USD-OOLAH v. MUS-SUMAT BEEBY IMAMAN (1836), 5 W. L. R. 26; 1 Moo. Ind. App. 19.—IND.

d. — Necessity for writing.—Where there is conflicting evidence as to retainer (of a solr.) the ct. can decide according to the preponderance of evidence without the production of a written retainer.—SMITH v. BULLER (1884), 5 N. Z. L. R. 41.—N.Z.

1628. Opinion of the witness—To be formed from handwriting—Not extrinsic circumstances.]—(1) A witness called to prove handwriting, should form his judgment from the handwriting & not from extrinsic circumstances.

(2) The jury may take all circumstances into their consideration, but the witness should form his opinion from the character of the handwriting only (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—MENDES DA COSTA v. PYM (1797), Peake Add. Cas. 144, N. P.

1630. — Both negative & positive—No other evidence of handwriting—Credibility of witness left to jury.]—Where a witness to the handwriting of deft., as endorser of a bill of exchange, prevaricated in his evidence, & swore both negatively & affirmatively as to his belief upon the subject, & there was no other evidence of the handwriting, the judge refused to stop the cause, leaving it to the jury to decide what credit was due to the witness.—BEAUCHAMP v. CASH (1822), Dow. & Ry. N. P. 3, N. P.

1631. Proof not amounting to evidence—Proof by party alleging writing to be bona fide—Ledger entries by deceased clerk.]—Where entries have been made by a clerk who is since dead, proof of his handwriting will not make such entries evidence.—SIKES v. MARSHAL (1798), 2 Esp. 705, N. P.

1632. —]—The clerk of a solr., who was the solr. of mtgor. & mtgee. in the creation of the security, & who copied the bill of costs of the solr. in the transaction of making an appointment of the estate comprised in the security, & of preparing the mtge. deed, which was founded on the title created by the appointment, may be received as a witness to depose to the handwriting on the document, which proof alone does not make it evidence, but he cannot be received to depose further as to the contents of the bill of costs, or the subject to which it relates, for an attorney's bill of costs in his history of the transaction; & the attorney could not be himself permitted to give evidence of the transaction against his client, or against those claiming under his client. The consent of the personal representative of mtgor., who was one of the clients of the solr., to the admission of the bill of costs in evidence does not make it evidence which can be admitted against the parties claiming under mtgee., the other client.—*CHANT v. 1633. Letter more than thirty years old—Proof not necessary.]—After thirty years the handwriting of a letter not necessarily proved where the letter affords intrinsic evidence of its authenticity. Where there is no existing direction to such a letter, prima facie, it must be intended to have been written to the party amongst whose papers it was found.—*FENWICK v. BATEMAN (1836), 7 C. & P. 586, N. P.

1643. ——— Writer incapacitated—Wife of interested party.]—Where a witness to an instrument becomes incapacitated, proof of the party's handwriting is admissible.—BUCKLEY v. SMITH (1798), 2 Esp. 697, N. P.

1644. ——— ———.]—It is no sufficient ground for receiving evidence of the handwriting of a witness which would be receivable if he were dead, that he is unable to attend the trial from indisposition, & lies without hopes of recovery.—HARRISON v. BLADES (1813), 3 Camp. 457, N. P.

1645. ——— Writer unable to be found—After diligent search.]—Where it was sworn that a witness was no merely within the jurisdiction, but actually seen on the first day of the trial within convenient distance for service of the subpoena, the ct., on evidence that diligent but ineffectual search had been made to find him, admitted secondary evidence of his handwriting.—HUMPHREYS v. JONES & PICKERING (1850), 16 L. T. O. S. 88, N. P.

SUB-SECT. 4.—ADMISSION OF PARTY.

1646. Sufficiency of admission—Such as to acknowledge liability—Handwriting may be that of another.]—(1) It is not necessary that handwriting to fix a party should be in his own handwriting, but it is sufficient if there be evidence that he has in any way acknowledged himself liable upon it in other documents.

(2) Suppose these receipts, the writing of which is the same as the writing in the paper which is to substantiate this case, were not actually in the handwriting of S., but suppose the handwriting, whosoever it was, carried his authority, that would do (MAULE, J.).—FORSBURGH v. SHERMAN (1841), 5 Jur. 1087.

1647. ——— Not if made in party's own interest.]—DOE d. PULKER v. WALKER, No. 1776, post.

SUB-SECT. 5.—WITNESS SEEING DOCUMENT WRITTEN OR SIGNED.

1643. Admissible—Affirmation affidavit in Chancery cause—Contrary affidavit by experts.]—Where the genuineness of handwriting to a deed is contested in Chancery, if an affidavit is produced from the sole attesting witness alive that he knew the persons executing the deed & saw them execute it, & then wrote his own attestation, the fact that persons skilled in handwriting declare their belief formed on inspection, that the handwriting is not genuine, does not call on the ct. to grant an issue to try the disputed fact; but it may determine the fact on the opposing affidavits.—NEWTON v. RICKETTS (1801), 9 H. L. Cas. 262; 31 L. J. Ch. 247; 5 L. T. 62; 7 Jur. N. S. 953; 10 W. R. 1; 11 E. R. 731, H. L.

SUB-SECT. 6.—WITNESS WHO HAS SEEN PERSON WRITE.

1649. Whether admissible—Jury not bound to accept evidence.]—(1) The fact that witness discussed with accused the substance of a letter purporting to be written by the accused is not evidence that the accused wrote it.

(2) In criminal matters the proof of handwriting ought to be more strict than in civil matters.

(3) Where a witness swears that he has seen the accused write & that he believes that a document produced is in his handwriting that is some evidence, but even though it is not rebutted, the to tell the jury that they may use their own observation as to handwriting, nor is such a direction a withdrawal from the jury of the oral testimony given in the matter.—KIBBY v. LEIGHTON (1895), 33 N. B. R. 4.—CAN.

g. ——— Positive knowledge of witness.]—To negative handwriting, it is sufficient evidence if the supposed writer can state his positive knowledge from circumstances, that the writing cannot be his, although he also states that he cannot, even upon his belief, on a mere inspection of the writing, say whether it is his or not.—R. v. WALSH (1824), Jebb, Cr. & Fr. Cas. 38.—IR.

h. ——— Drawer of cheque.]—To support a plea of intoxication as a defence to an action on a negotiable instrument in the hands of the payee or a person who receives it with knowledge, there must be some evidence that the drawer signed the cheque when incapable of forming a rational judgment of what he was doing, & of the effect on his interest. The drawer's own evidence is the best on this point, but, if this evidence is not available, the jury may infer the fact from surrounding circumstances.—GOODISSON v. SUTTON (1883), 1 N. Z. L. R. 389 (S. C.).

PART IV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 6.

1653 I. Whether admissible—Knowledge acquired only while action depending.]—For the purpose of proving the execution of deeds, a witness, who was not the witness to the deeds, went to the persons by whom the deeds purported to have been executed, who admitted to him that the signatures were theirs, & who wrote their names in the presence of the witness, who had no previous acquaintance with them or with their handwriting:—Held: evidence of these admissions & of the belief of the witness, from the knowledge of the handwriting thus acquired, that the signatures to the deeds were genuine was good evidence to go to a jury, & in the absence of any contradictory evidence, sufficient to warrant a finding that the deeds had been duly executed upon the respective days upon which they purported to have been executed.—THOMPSON v. The writing was proved by a police-officer who had seen applt. writing in a note-book, & who which he had of knowing his handwriting independently of comparison:—Held: sufficient, without any other evidence that prisoner knew how to write.—R. v. MARA (1827), Jebb, Cr. & Pr. Cas. 75.—IR.

I. — Writing only once seen.]—Secondary evidence of a letter which it was alleged had been written by plft. to deft. was received at the trial, subject to plft.'s objection & also it being understood, that if, on further consideration on the part of the judge, that the same was improperly received, it would be struck out:—Held: the compared the writing there with that of the letter. It was contended that a police-officer was not the proper person to prove handwriting:—Held: anyone who had seen him write could give evidence to prove the handwriting.—R. v. DERRICK, (1910), 5 Cr. App. Rep. 102, C. C. A.

1665. Best evidence of handwriting.—(1) The best, usually perhaps the only proper, evidence of handwriting, is that of persons who have acquired a previous knowledge of the party's handwriting from seeing him write, & who form their opinion from the general character & manner of this, & not from criticising particular letters (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).

(2) The opposers of the will have obtruded on the notice of the ct. evidence, if it should be so called, to this part of the case, of a somewhat different species. I mean, the opinions of persons, who, without any previous knowledge of a party's handwriting, think they can judge, from their skill & experience in such matters, whether a signature, for instance, said to be his, be so or not, by comparing it with other, his admitted, signatures; & who also undertake, by certain indications, to determine, from the general appearance of handwriting, whether it be written in a natural or an imitated character. This species of evidence has been constantly held, both subdivisions of it, the lowest & weakest that can possibly be offered (SIR JOHN NICHOLL).—ROBSON v. ROCKE (1824), 2 Add. 53; 162 E. 1671. —[—]—On a claim to an ancient peerage, a family pedigree produced from the proper custody & purporting to have been made by an ancestor of claimant, before the year 1751, was offered in evidence, on proof of the handwriting by a witness who had been for many years inspector of franks & of official correspondence & who said that, from a few inspections he had of two or three other documents which were proved to be of the same ancestor's writing, he had formed in his mind such a standard of the character of his handwriting as to be able, without immediate comparison with those documents, to say whether any other document that might be produced to him was or was not in the same handwriting:—

Held: (1) the evidence was inadmissible; (2) claimant's solr., who said he had acquired a knowledge of the character of the ancestor's handwriting from having had occasion from time to time, in the course of his business for claimant, to examine several deeds & other documents written or signed by the ancestor, & which came to claimant together with property formerly belonging to that ancestor, was a competent witness to prove the handwriting of the pedigree.

If a subscribing witness to a deed lives in the West Indies, whose handwriting is to be proved in England, a witness here may swear to his hand, by having seen the letters of such person written by him to his correspondent in England, because under the special circumstances of that case, there is no other way, or at least, the difficulty will be great, to prove the handwriting of such subscribing witness (PAGE, J.).—*FERRERS (LORD) v. The parish clerk said he had seen the same signature at several places in the original register, & he believed it to be the same from the knowledge so acquired of the handwriting; but there was no evidence of the curate's death, nor any search for witnesses who knew his handwriting:—Held: the curate being the proper officer to give out the certificate, there was sufficient evidence of his handwriting to render the certificate admissible.—DOE d. JENKINS v. DAVIES (1847), 10 Q. B. 314; 16 L. J. Q. B. 218; 11 Jur. 607; 116 E. R. 122.

1697. ———.]—I have no doubt to reject this evidence as not admissible, I do not know any case where comparison of hands has been allowed to be evidence at all. No trial can be decided by opinion & speculation, but by evidence. Where a witness has seen the party write, & speaks to his belief of that writing which is produced in evidence being the party's handwriting, that is evidence. But where it is merely opinion on similitude of the writing collected from barely comparing them, the jury may compare them as well as anybody else, & any two people may think differently. In an indictment for forgery, the evidence of a person who has seen the party write is sufficient. The case now in question is not like a rental, terrier, old title deeds; these are received without evidence of handwriting, because of the place they come from, which gives them authenticity. 1714 II. ——Where the defence was raised that a certain voucher purporting to be signed by a witness, called for the defence, was a forgery committed by pltf., & the document purported to be signed by two others witnesses for deft. admitted, on cross-examination, that certain documents put into their hands by deft.'s counsel were in the hand of deft., & were more like his usual hand than the acceptance; but they stated that they nevertheless believed the acceptance to be in deft.'s hand:—Held: it was competent to deft. to submit these documents to the jury to test the judgment of the witness.

Counsel certainly has no right to put those documents into the hands of the jury as genuine signatures of deft., in order that they may take them & compare them with the bill in question. He may use those documents bearing certain marks or signatures, which the witnesses have sworn to be the same as that in question. I shall tell the jury that they may look at them in order to test the judgment of the witnesses, who stated that they & the bill were all identical. It is put as if they were three ordinary marks on a paper which the witnesses take upon themselves to say are identical. If, on examination & inspection they should appear to be totally dissimilar, that is a result which would go to test the accuracy of the observation of the witnesses. There is no doubt but that the jury may compare the bill & the papers tendered by deft. for that purpose, but not for any other (PARKE, B.).—HIGGINS v. CARRINGTON (1848), 11 L. T. O. S. 355, N. The witness having stated, that he believed the libel to be in the handwriting of deft., although somewhat disguised, a letter, which he also stated to be deft.'s letter, but not disguised, was offered in evidence, on the ground that it referred to some of the subjects mentioned in the libel. It was objected to, on the ground that it would have the same effect, & was evidently offered for the same purpose, as the book which had been rejected:—Held: (2) the letter must be received in evidence, & being once in evidence, it could not be withdrawn from the consideration of the jury.—*WADDINGTON v. The judge, in charging the jury, after all the evidence was in, allowed them to compare the letter admitted to have been written by deft. with the letter in dispute & to draw their own conclusion from the comparison of the two:—Held: (1) he was justified in doing so; (2) all that is necessary to entitle a jury to compare a doubtful or disputed writing with one admitted to be genuine is that the 1725. ———.]—Writing connected with depositions.]—(1) Handwriting of a deceased witness, made at the time of his examination by comrs., but not returned with the depositions, is sufficiently in evidence to admit of being produced in ct. for the purpose of comparison with his signature to a deed, the genuineness of which is impeached.

(2) The onus of proving the genuineness of a witness to a deed in a civil suit lies on the party setting up the deed, not on the party impeaching it, as in a criminal proceeding; & it is a misdirection in a judge to tell the jury in a civil suit that under such circumstances they must try the question as to whether the deed was forged or not in the same manner as if deft. was on his trial for forgery. Such misdirection will entitle pltf. to a new trial.

(3) A witness to a deed being dead, his daughter, who was called at the trial to prove his handwriting, deposed that the signature to the deed was not her father's handwriting, & in her examination spoke of a letter which she had with her, from her father to her mother, which letter, at the request of the judge, she produced in ct. & the judge handed it to the jury to compare with the witness's alleged signature to the deed:—Held: as the letter was not in any way in evidence in the cause it ought not to have been handed to the jury.—*DOE d. Now, I do not know how that gentleman could speak to the handwriting, unless he could say he had seen the party write, or unless he had been in the habit of correspondence with him, excepting that he is called to speak as a man of science to an abstract question. In that light he has been called, & his evidence has been admitted. He is shown these papers; & he is asked to look at them, & without inquiring who wrote them, or for what purpose. He is asked, "From your knowledge of handwriting in general, do you believe that writing to be a natural or fictitious hand?" 1756. ———.]—An issue having been directed to satisfy the ct. as to the forgery of a signature to a warrant of attorney, a verdict was found, establishing the genuineness of it, upon evidence satisfactory to the judge who tried the cause, & to the ct., upon his report of it. In the course of the trial, an inspector of franks, who had never seen the party write, was called to prove, from his knowledge of handwriting in general, that the signature in question was not genuine, but an imitation. This evidence having been rejected, the ct. refused to disturb the verdict, on the ground that such evidence, even if admissible, was entitled to very little weight, & that the issue being to satisfy the ct., a new trial ought not to be granted, unless for the rejection of evidence which might reasonably have altered the verdict. Qu.: if such evidence be admissible at all.—GURNEY v. LANGLANDS (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 330; 106 E. R. 1212.

A demand of possession was made by the attorney who afterwards brought the action, under a written authority, purporting to be signed by lessors of pltf., but the attorney being unacquainted with their handwriting, a witness stated, that he had a few days before the trial called on lessors & showed them the authority, when they acknowledged the signatures to be theirs:—Held: the acknowledgment of the signatures by lessors afforded no legitimate evidence that it was signed by them.—*DOE d. 1797. — Contract—For sale of goods.]—If trover is brought, & the intended defence is, that deft. was the consignor of the goods, & had a right to stop them in transitu, & pltf., in anticipation of this, set up that he bona fide bought the goods of such consignor before the stoppage in transitu. If it appear that that purchase by pltf. was by a written agreement, such agreement must be produced; & if it is not, pltf. will not be allowed to give other evidence of his buying the goods.—BRAIN v. HARDEN (1825), 2 C. & P. 52.

1798. — Building contract.]—Where an action was brought by a builder for the amount of extra work done, there having been a written contract between the parties:—Held: pltf. ought to have produced the written contract at the trial, in order that it might appear what was within the contract, & what not.—JONES v. HOWELL (1835), 4 Dowl. 176, Ex. Ch.

1799. — Not essential to opponent's case.]—When pltf. proves his case without disclosing the existence of a written contract, if deft. relies upon it, he is bound to produce it himself, although pltf.'s witness, who was a party to the written contract, has wrongly stated that it was not reduced into writing.—MAGNAY v. KNIGHT (1840), 1 Man. & G. 944; Drinkwater, 13; 2 Scott, N. R. 64; 4 Jur. 1088; 133 E. R. 615.

1800. — Although collateral to subject-matter of trial.]—On the trial of an action for work & labour, it appeared that the work was done during the progress of, but separate from, some other work, which pltf. was doing under a written contract, & which had been paid for:—Held: the written contract ought nevertheless to be produced.—HOLBARD v. 1803. — Money bill.]—In an action by A. against O. for money had & received, pltf. proved that O. admitted having received a bill which was the property of A., & paid it into his own banker's: pltf. also proposed to prove that O. had received credit with his banker for a bill similar in amount, & that there was no corresponding debit against O. in the banker's book, nor any credit given to O. for any bill to the same amount:—Held: the proposed proof was not admissible, A.'s bill not being produced.—v. OWEN (1834), 2 Ad. & El. 35; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 123; 4 L. J. K. B. 15; 111 E. R. 14.

1804. — Appointment of surveyor—Minute book recording appointment inadmissible.]—(1) A minute book, kept by the magistrates' clerk, was offered in evidence, to show who had been appointed by the magistrates to be surveyors of the highways for the year 1812:—Held: this evidence was not receivable without proof of a search for the original appointment, under the hands & seals of the magistrates.

Qu.: whether a minute book would have been receivable as secondary evidence, if the original appointments had been lost.

(2) A written resolution of a vestry meeting purported to allow to D. £50:—Held: evidence was not admissible, to prove what was said by the persons who were at the meeting, with a view of showing what the £50 were allowed for.

(3) A witness, who produced an examined copy of a record of a conviction at the assizes, stated that he examined it with the original record, in the custody of the clerk of assize, but that he thought the original record was written on paper, but was not sure. It was proved, by the son of the clerk of assize, that all the records in his father's custody were written on parchment; but he had no recollection of this particular record:—Held: the examined copy was receivable on evidence.

(4) On the trial of an indictment for the non-repair of highways, entries in an ancient parish book, produced by the churchwarden from the parish chest, were offered in evidence, to show who were the surveyors of the highways in 1707:—Held: the evidence was receivable.—R. v. PEMBRIDGE (INHABITANTS) (1841), Car. & M. 157.

1805. — Extracts from accounts.]—In an action for stallage in a market, pltf. put in three entire ministers' accounts, those three being part only of a long series, & the object being to show by a very short entry in each of them that rent had been paid for the toll of the market. Extracts from the remainder of the series, confined to that short extract, were then tendered in evidence, & after objection, refused by the judge. A witness was then asked whether he had examined the whole series of ministers' accounts, & whether he found a similar entry in each of them; & that evidence was received:—Held: the same objection applied to that evidence as to the extracts, &

signature. Special authority in that behalf cannot be proved by secondary evidence of the contents of a letter the non-production of which is not satisfactorily accounted for.—DINMOYI DEB v. ROY LOCHMIPUT SINGH (1879), L. R. 7 Ind. App. 8.—IND.

Joint for use & occupation, if it appear, on the cross-examination of pltf.'s witnesses, that the agreement on which the action is brought, although originally made & entered into by parol, was afterwards reduced into writing, & signed by pltf. that agreement must be produced, or proper ground laid to admit secondary evidence of it.—THUNDER v. n. —]—(1) It is a cardinal rule of evidence, not one of technicality, but of substance, which it is dangerous to depart from, that where written documents exist they shall be produced as being the best evidence of their own contents.

(2) An acknowledgment of the debt sued for had not been signed by an agent of deft. generally or specially authorised in that behalf within Act IX. of 1871, s. 20. Whatever general authority such agent may once have had from deft., it had ceased within the knowledge of pltf. at the time of 1808. ——— Banker's clearing book.—The cashier of a bank, upon his examination as a witness, stated that he had ascertained from the clearing book, kept by him & in his own handwriting, that a certain sum of money was paid in notes of a particular description. The statement was founded solely on the witness's knowledge of the book & of his own handwriting, & not from any recollection of the fact deposed to; & the book was not produced:—Held: under these circumstances, the statement could not be received as evidence of the fact deposed to, though it might serve as a ground for further inquiry.—DUPUY v. assumpsit to the whole declaration, & several other pleas to the first count, & to that count a nolle prosequi was entered:—Held: it was sufficient at the trial for pltf. to produce one agreement corresponding with that declared on in the second count, & that it was not necessary for him to prove one corresponding with each count.—USBORNE v. GROVER (1856), 13 U. C. R. 164.—CAN.

Where not identified.—The bill stated a deed which was admitted by answer. On a hearing on bill & answer, pltf. offered to read a deed corresponding with that stated in the bill but which had not been identified with it:—Held: it could not be read.—HUGHES v. COWLEY (1843), 5 I. Eq. R. 588.—IR.

Deft. proved as above, & that after B.'s death the lease & other papers had been taken out of B.'s trunk, & lessor of pltf. had since stated it was in his possession. The lease was not produced on notice, but

(b) Contracts relating to Land.

1812. Document must be put in evidence—Tenancy agreement—Parol evidence inadmissible.—(1) Parol evidence of the fact of a pauper's having been tenant of premises in resp. parish, is admissible on the part of applt. parish, though he held under a written agreement not produced.

(2) The contents of this written agreement, undoubtedly, could not be proved by parol; & therefore, it was properly held, in the cases which have been cited, that where such a written agreement was in existence, the terms of the tenancy, or the amount of the rent, could be proved only by the production of the agreement itself. But the rule of law does not go so far as to prevent the admission of parol evidence of the fact, that the relation of landlord & tenant existed between particular parties at a particular time, in a particular parish (BAYLEY, J.).—R. v. HOLY TRINITY, KINGSTON-UPON-HULL (INHABITANTS) (1827), 7 B. & C. 611; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 444; 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 146; 6 L. J. O. S. M. C. 24; 108 E. R. 851.

—.—.—Upon the trial of an appeal, applt. having proved that the pauper occupied a tenement of £10 per annum, & paid rent & taxes for same, resps., in order to show that the pauper was not the sole tenant, attempted to prove by parol that the premises were let to the pauper & two other persons; but the witness on cross-examination having stated that the letting was by a written instrument:—Held: it could be proved lessor of pltf. produced same after deft.'s case closed:—Held: the jury were justified in presuming a legal assignment of the lease under the circumstances.—DOE d. MURPHY v. MULHOLLAND (1831), 2 O. S. 115.—CAN.

1814 ii. ———.—Where pltf. in ejectment proves no documentary or promissory title but relies upon the estoppel arising from his having let deft. into possession of the land, & it appears in pltf.'s case that deft. took possession under a written agreement, pltf. cannot recover without producing the agreement or giving secondary evidence of it after notice to produce.—DOE v. BLANCHE (1855), 3 All. 180.—CAN.

1814 iii. ———.—In an action of use & occupation, pltf. proved by a witness the fact of the occupation by deft. On his cross-examination he admitted that there was a written agreement in existence which pltf. did not produce:—Held: such instrument ought to have been given in evidence, & a declaration by deft. of holding at a particular rent was inadmissible.—LAWLESS v. R., & a letter from T. R. was also produced referring to such a deed, but no strictly legal evidence was given of the contents of such deed:—Held: such evidence, in the circumstances, was admissible on the part of def'ts. as primary evidence, & notice to pltfs. to produce such deed was unnecessary.—ROGERS v. CARD (1858), 7 C. P. 89.—CAN.

PART IV. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

1822 i. General rule.]—An exor. sued for money received for his testator on where the bill of sale assigned by way of mtge. certain property, fixtures, tools, etc., as per schedule, the schedule being separate & distinct from the deed, & not indorsed upon it:—Held: it was sufficient for pltf. to produce the bill of sale itself, & he was not bound to produce the schedule also.

The deed contains a distinct covenant to pay, having reference to no consideration, but the debt previously due. This covenant itself is entire, distinct, & independent; one to which effect may be given without reference to any other part of the indenture. What pltf. is bound to produce must depend upon this, upon what part of the deed the action is brought. There is nothing in any of the authorities cited to lead to the conclusion that, where an action is brought on a mere covenant to pay money, the party bringing the action is required to produce documents altogether unnecessary to the support of his case, & merely referred to as something collateral in some other part of the indenture in which the covenant to pay is contained (WILDE, C.J.).—DAINES v. HEATH (1847), 3 C. B. 938; 16 L. J. C. P. 117; 11 Jur. 185; 136 E. R. 376; sub nom. DAVIES v. HEATH, 8 L. T. O. S. 390.

1823. Document need not be put in evidence.—Sufficiency of other evidence.—Verbal demand.—Prior to action for trover.—If a verbal demand & a demand in writing are made at the same time, for the purpose of bringing an action of trover, & the one has no reference to the other, evidence of the verbal demand is sufficient without the production of the writing.

If they [the two demands] were concurrent & independent, I do not see how adding the latter could supersede the former, or vary the mode of proving it (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—SMITH v. YOUNG (1808), 1 Camp. 439, N. P.

Annotations:—Mentd. Featherstonhaugh v. Johnston (1818), 8 Taunt. 237; Catterall v. Kenyon (1842), 6 Jur. 507.

1824. ——— Sheriff's warrant.—To prove privy between sheriff & bailiff.—In order to charge the sheriff with the act of the bailiff for extortion it is not sufficient to produce a copy of the precept with the bailiff's name indorsed thereon, although the sheriff has returned Cepi corpus; pltf. in such a case must either produce the warrant or prove some recognition of the act of the bailiff by the sheriff.

But it is not essential in such case to produce the warrant, the privy between the sheriff & the bailiff may be proved by showing that upon the arrest a bail bond was executed & delivered to the bailiff who returned it to the sheriff, upon which the latter made his return of Cepi corpus.—MARTIN v. BEIL (1816), 1 Stark. 413, N. P.; subsequent proceedings (1817), 6 M. & S. 220.

1825. ——— Admission by other party.—To a declaration in assumpsit on a cheque, deft. pleaded that it was given for money won at an unlawful game at dice. Issue thereon. Deft. did not give notice to produce the cheque:—Held: on this issue pltf. was not bound to produce the cheque, either as part of his own case, or, when called upon to do so at the trial as part of deft.'s evidence.

Here, deft. admitted by his plea that he gave the cheque, & therefore, pltf. was not bound to produce it as part of his own case (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—READ v. GAMBLE (1835), 10 Ad. & El. 597, n.; 113 E. R. 227; sub nom. REED v. GAMBLE, 5 Nev. & M. K. B. 433.

1826. ——— Oral evidence only.—Pltf.'s case was proved by a written document, as well as by the examination of a witness, who was also examined in chief by defts., & in the course of such examination, referred to the document. Pltf. relied upon the document before the Vice-Chancellor; but, on appeal before the Lord Chancellor, rested his case upon the examination of the witness only:—Held: it was competent for him to do so, & defts.' objection to the reception of this evidence as secondary could only be supported by his producing the written document.—OGLE v. MORGAN (1852), 1 De G. M. & G. 359; 42 E. R. 590, L. C.

1827. Contract on agreement.—Recovery in quantum meruit.—In an action for work & labour, pltf. having proved the value of the work done, & closed his case, one of deft.'s witnesses swore that there was a memorandum in writing containing an estimate at which the work was to be performed, & produced a copy in pltf.'s handwriting, unstamped, & not signed either by him or deft.:—Held: pltf. was not thereby precluded from recovering on the common counts, as it did not appear whether the original memorandum were in existence, & as deft. had given him no notice to produce it, or, at all events, the testimony should have come from one of pltf.'s witnesses, on cross-examination.—*STEVENS v. 1828. ———.—In an action for work & labour, when pltf. has established a quantum meruit, if deft.'s witness prove the existence of a written contract, & pltf. insist on deft.'s producing it, & it is not produced, pltf. must be called; but if pltf. does not require its production, the case may proceed.—*DAMER v. 1829. ——— Alleged by opponent to be in writing.—Claim established without reference to writing.—Where a party has made out & closed a prima facie case, in doing which it does not appear that there was any written agreement, the other side cannot, when they go into their case, & show that there was a written agreement, throw upon the first party the onus of producing that agreement.—*R. v. 1822 ii. ———.—Bill was filed to enforce a mechanic's lien against deft., whose title to the property in question was under a sublease:—Held: pltf.

1822 iii. ———.—In an action for injury to a reversionary interest by obstructing a right of way, pltf.'s witnesses proved on cross-examination that the right was reserved by deed, but it was not proved that pltf. was a party or a

1830. ————]—Applts. against an order of removal called a witness to give parol evidence of a hiring. On cross-examination, he stated that, at the time of the hiring, he & the servant went to the chief constable's clerk, who, in their presence & by their direction, entered the terms of the hiring in writing, but that neither party signed the entry. He did not state whether or not the writing was read over to them:—Held: this was not sufficient proof of the contract having been put into writing to exclude parol evidence of the terms.—R. v. WRANGLE (INHABITANTS) (1835), 2 Ad. & El. 514; 1 Har. & W. 41; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 375; 2 Nev. & M. M. C. 548; 4 L. J. M. C. 43; 111 E. R. 190.

1831. ————]—If, in an action for use & occupation, deft. cannot show by the cross-examination of pltf.'s witnesses, that the premises are held under a written agreement, but it afterwards appear by the evidence of deft.'s witnesses that the premises are so held, pltf. is not bound to put in the written agreement.—MARSTON v. DEAN (1835), 7 C. & P. 13, N. P.

1832. ————]—In an action for use & occupation it is not a ground for setting aside a verdict for pltf. that pltf. did not produce a written agreement under which the premises were held, if the evidence given by pltf. in support of his case did not disclose the existence of such an agreement.—FRY v. CHAPMAN (1836), 5 Dowl. 265.

1833. ————]—Where a witness, without being asked, speaks of a written agreement, but does not state the contents, & they are immaterial to the issue, the party who calls the witness is not bound to produce the document.—MOTT v. DELANE (1838), 2 Jur. 592.

1834. ————]—Where a tenant was to hold land according to certain rules in writing under which a former tenant held, but the length of his term was agreed on orally:—Held: to show the expiration of the term it was not necessary to produce the rules.—ILEY v. MOORHOUSE (1839), 6 Bing. N. C. 52; 8 Scott, 156; 9 L. J. C. P. 113; 133 E. R. 20.

1835. ————]—A witness, called to prove the terms of a verbal agreement for a lease, stated that he was in company with pltf. & deft. when it was entered into, & referred to an entry which he made a few hours afterwards, to refresh his memory. This entry was made by him from a paper written in pencil by pltf., during the interview between the parties, & read by him to deft., as embodying the terms of their agreement. Deft. assented to it, but he neither signed nor was asked to sign it, nor was it shown to him:—Held: it was not necessary to produce this paper as constituting the real agreement.—TREWHITT v. LAMBERT (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 470; 3 Jur. 629; 113 E. R. 178; sub nom. TRUWHITT v. LAMBERT, 3 Per. & Dav. 676.

1836. ————]—Document unstamped.]—After pltf. has proved, by witnesses, a case of implied or oral contract, he cannot be nonsuited by deft.'s producing an unstamped written instrument, purporting to contain the terms of the contract.—FELDER v. RAY (1829), 6 Bing. 332;

1837. Accounts book—Count on account stated.]—On a settlement of accounts between pltf. & deft., both parties present, the clerk of the former made entries of the items in a book, & which were copied by the latter, into another book. Deft. did not, by any act, acknowledge pltf.'s book to be a correct statement of the items of the account, though he admitted the balance against him, as stated by pltf.'s clerk, to be correct at the time, adding, that when he had done certain things for pltf., "there would not be much, if anything, between them":—Held: pltf.'s book was no primary evidence for pltf., so as to require its production, or its non-production to be accounted for, & the acknowledgement of deft. was evidence to support a count on an account stated.

Notice having been given to deft. to produce his book, which he did not do, he can make no complaint that secondary evidence was received of the contents (PATTESON, J.).—RIGBY v. JEFFREYS (1839), 7 Dowl. 561; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 555.

SUB-SECT. 2.—EFFECT OF PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENT.

1838. Production on notice—Not thereby evidence for party producing.]—Where notice has been given to produce books if the party calls for them & inspects them, it does not therefore make them evidence for the party whose books they are.—SAYER v. KITCHEN (1794), 1 Esp. 207, N. P.

1841. ————]—Where counsel, notice having been given to produce a letter, stated that fact, & calls for the letter in question, which is produced & put in his hands, he is bound to put it in, though he had not read it himself, when he declined to make use of it.—*SMITH v. SECT. 5.—SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1845. No degrees of secondary evidence.]—
 There are no degrees in secondary evidence; therefore, where deft. has given notice to pltf. to produce a letter, of which he kept a copy, he may, if the letter is not produced, give parol evidence of its contents, & is not bound to put in the copy; but, if there had been a duplicate original, it might be otherwise.—BROWN v. WOODMAN (1834), 6 C. & P. 206, N. P.

1846. —.]—(1) Where a deed is in the hands of an attorney, who holds it not merely as attorney but as a security for money owing to him from his client, & the attorney, being called, on a sub-pœna duces tecum, refuses to produce the deed on the ground of his own lien, the party calling for the production of the deed is entitled to give secondary evidence of its contents.

(2) There are no degrees of secondary evidence; but where a party is entitled to give secondary evidence at all, he may give any species of secondary evidence within his power.

(3) Where on a former trial of the title to the same property, on an ejectment by the same lessors of pltf. against a different deft. a deed was given in evidence on the part of deft., & the limitations in it were stated in ct. by deft.'s counsel:—Held: a copy of the shorthand notes of that statement was not receivable in evidence on the part of the same lessors of pltf., in a second ejectment against another party.

(4) An examined copy of the record of a fine, levied with proclamations, is as good evidence of the fine as the chirograph itself certified by the officer.—DOE d. GILBERT v. ROSS (1840), 7 M. & W. 102; 8 Dowl. 389; 10 L. J. Ex. 201; 4 Jur. 321; 151 E. R. 696.

1847. —.]—(1) In trover for an expired lease, by lessor, the lease, or counterpart executed by the lessor, not being produced by deft., upon notice:—Held: the lessor might give parol evidence of the contents without producing the counterpart executed by the lessee.

(2) There are no degrees of secondary evidence.—HALL v. BALL (1841), 3 Man. & G. 242; 3 Scott, N. R. 577; 10 L. J. C. P. 285; 133 E. R. 1133.

1848. Admission by consent of party.—Whether subsequent objection precluded.]—(1) Where a master, by his report, certifies a fact, & exceptions are taken to the report, it lies upon those who are to uphold the report, to produce the evidence of the fact. So if he certifies the result of an account upon the allowance or disallowance of its items in dispute, & one of the parties excepts to the report, both as to the principle on which the account is taken, & the evidence in support of the allowance or disallowance of the items, the parties in whose favour the report is made, must produce the evidence on the hearing of the exceptions.

(2) Qu.: whether such consent to admit copies of such proceeding as before mentioned, precludes the party who consents from objecting that the originals are not evidence.—BERNAL v. DONEGAL (MARQUIS) (1827), 1 Bli. N. S. 594; 4 E. R. H. L.

SUB-SECT. 2.—WHEN INADMISSIBLE.

A. In General.

1849. General rule.]—It is dangerous to suffer any who by the law in pleading ought to show the deed itself to the ct., upon the general issue to prove in evidence to a jury by witnesses that there was such a deed, which they have heard & read; or to prove it by a copy; for the viciousness, rasures, or interlineations, or other imperfections in these cases, will not appear to the ct.; or per-adventure the deed may be upon condition, limitation, with power of revocation, & by this way truth & justice, & the true reason of the common law would be subverted. But yet in great & notorious extremities, as by casualty of fire, that all his evidences were burnt in his house, there, if that should appear to the judges, they may, in favour of him who has so great a loss by fire, suffer him upon the general issue to prove the deed in evidence to the jury by witnesses, that affliction be not added to affliction; & if the jury find it, although it be not showed forth in evidence, it shall be good enough. But the copy of a record may be showed & given in evidence to the jury for records are of so high a nature, & such credit in law, that they cannot be proved by other means than by themselves & no rasure or interlineations shall be intended in them; & therefore, a copy of a record being testified to be true, is permitted to be given in evidence; but the sure way is, to exemplify it under the great seal, or at the least under the seal of the ct. PART IV. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.

k. General rule.]—The rule of law, that the evidence offered should be the best & that secondary evidence can be received only when the impossibility of producing the best has been established is enacted in the interest of the parties, & is not founded upon consideration of public policy, & the objection to such evidence may be considered to be waived by the party interested in opposing it when it is not made at the time the evidence is offered.—*GUERIN v. 1850. Where documents may or ought to be produced.]—A settlement by being rated & paying rates cannot be proved by evidence of paying only, without the production of the rate or accounting reasonably for the non-production of it, although the payer was both owner & occupier of the estate for which he paid the rate.

It is in every day's experience to reject parol evidence of a writing which may & ought to be produced (GROSE, J.).—R. v. COPPULL (INHABITANTS) (1801), 2 East, 25; 102 E. R. 277.

1851. — Document filed in English court.]—A letter, which had been in the possession of deft., was filed in the Ct. of Ch. pursuant to an order of that ct. :—Held : secondary evidence of it was not admissible, it being in the power of either party upon application to that ct., to produce it.—WILLIAMS v. MUNNINGS (1824), Ry. & M. 18, N. P.

1852. — Although contents set forth in affidavit.]—On interlocutory applications, which are necessarily heard upon affidavits, the ct. does not dispense with the rule that, on disputed points, the best evidence in the power of the parties must be given; &, therefore, it is not sufficient for a party to state, upon affidavit, the purport & effect of a document which he has the means of producing.—STAMPS v. BIRMINGHAM, WOLVERHAMPTON & STOUR VALLEY RY. CO. (1848), 7 Hare, 251; 68 E. R. 103; on appeal, 2 Ph. 673, L. C.

1853. Documents of doubtful character.]—(1) The ct. will presume a subsequent enlarged endowment in support of an appropriation by a rector, which has been acted on for a very great length of time, although an insufficient endowment has been actually produced in evidence, appearing on the face of it to be inadequate, to that required to be made by the terms of the condition of the original licence, where it is not shown by proof of some deficiency in any particular respect, that the vicarage is, in fact, incompetently endowed.

1849 ii. —.—[A copy of a document cannot be admitted as evidence, unless the absence of the original is properly accounted for. The mere fact of the latter being in another ct. is not a sufficient reason.—BAKIALDAS BUNDOOPADHYA v. INDURU MONEE DEBI (1877), 1 C. L. R. 155.—IND.

1850 i. Where documents may or ought to be produced.]—Prisoner was accused of having set fire to his workshop, which was insured. The only proof against him was his confession to three witnesses. The agent of the co. was put in the box to prove the insurance & produced a memorandum of the policy, the original policy having after the claim was paid been sent to the head office of the co.:—Held : no secondary proof of the contents of an insurance policy will be allowed when the original policy itself, though deposited in another district, could have been obtained.—R. v. BOURASSA (1877), 3 Q. L. R. 359.—CAN.

1850 ii. —.—[As there was evidence that a certificate or report had been given by the engineer in this case oral evidence of the contents of the certificate or report was inadmissible.—QUEBEC CITY v. QUEBEC CENTRAL RY. CO. (1884), 10 S. C. R. 563.—CAN.

p. Copy of Crown patent — Necessity for notice of intention to use.]—Pltf. in order to succeed, had to prove the issue of a patent from the Crown for the land in question. He produced what purported to be a copy of such patent, but he had not given notice of his intention to use such copy:—Held : such copy could not be received in evidence.—McPHERSON v. EDWARDS (1910), 14 W. L. R. 172.—CAN.

(2) Extracts from documents, of doubtful character as evidence, cannot be received. The original must be produced, that the ct. may judge by inspection of the admissibility even of the document itself.

1854. In answer to interrogatories—Document not in possession of party interrogated—Not producible by him.]—In an action for libel an interrogatory was administered to B., deft., by A., pltf., as to the contents of a letter alleged by A. to have been written by B. to a third person. B. in answer swore she had no recollection of the exact words in the said letter contained:—Held : (1) B. could not be called on to answer further as to the contents of a document of which she swore she had no recollection; (2) on principle B. ought not to be called on to give secondary evidence of a document as to which it was not proved that it was in her possession, or in that of any one whom she could compel to produce it, but which might even be in the possession of A. himself.—*DALRYMPLE v. q. Original might be produced — Agreement for work & labour.]—Assumpsit for work & labour. Pltf.'s witness swore that the work was done upon a written agreement, which he had in ct., but refused to produce. He had not been subpoenaed:—Held : he was as much bound to produce the writing as if in attendance under a subpœna duces tecum. Semble : if the witness had been required by the ct. to produce the agreement, & had still refused, this would not have been sufficient to warrant the reception of secondary evidence.—FARLEY v. GRAMHAM (1852), 9 U. C. R. 438.—CAN.

r. — Bond.]—It was proved that deft. went into possession as assignee of a person to whom pltf. had given a bond for a deed; that he had received indulgence as to the payments required by the bond; that he had expressly promised to go out of possession if such payments were not

No evidence of refusal to produce.—Pltf. alleged as an excuse for not making profert of a deed, that it was "in the possession of certain persons, to wit J. & T., who before & at the time of the commencement of the suit, & thence hitherto, have held & still hold the same by agreement theretofore in that behalf made between pltf. & deft. :—Held : this was not a sufficient excuse for the want of profert, as it did not allege that the party who had possession of the deed had refused to produce it.—HILL v. MARSDEN (1840), 6 M. & W. 718 ; 8 Dowl. 750 ; 9 L. J. Ex. 202 ; 4 Jur. 633 ; 151 E. R. 602.

1861. — Deed of settlement.—To verify the abstract, a vendor produced an attested copy of a deed of settlement, dated 1752, together with a covenant of a third party to produce the original :—Held : (1) this was not a sufficient verification of the abstract of the title ; (2) it was necessary to prove that the original could not be produced before the purchaser was bound to receive secondary evidence of its contents.—TURNER v. RAWLINSON (1835), 4 L. J. Ch. 109.

1862. — Notice of default.—B. & C. became jointly & severally bound to A. as sureties for D., with a condition for the bond to be void, if B. & C., or either of them, should, within one calendar month next after notice given to them of D.'s default, pay any balance that might be due from D. to A., not exceeding a given sum. In debt by A. against exors. of B. the issue was, whether or not due notice of D.'s default had been given to deft. & to C. :—Held : in order to prove notice to C., it was not enough to produce a duplicate, with proof that the notice had been sent by post, properly addressed, to C., but A. was bound to produce the original notice, or to account for its absence.—ROBINSON v. BROWN (1846), 3 C. B. 754 ; 16 L. J. C. P. 46 ; 8 L. T. O. S. 118 ; 136 E. R. 302.

DAVIDSON* (1849), 13 Q. B. 257 ; 18 L. J. Q. B. 174 ; 13 L. T. O. S. 137 ; 13 Jur. 678 ; 116 E. R. 1261.

1864. — Protest after collision—Contents pleaded without exhibiting original.—The difficulty which I entertain as to the admission of this 10th article is one of a very different nature from that suggested by the counsel on either side. That article is in these words—"That in the aforesaid report of the owners of The Unicorn to the said Lords of the Board of Trade, the fact of The Unicorn's green light having been extinguished prior to the said collision was & is wholly suppressed, or at least not mentioned or adverted to." How can I take any evidence of that, except by the production of the instrument itself ? It is pleading, in substance & effect, what are the contents of this instrument not produced ; because, if I plead that such a fact is not in a given instrument, the only proof that any ct. can legally receive, in the first instance, is the instrument itself. The reason, therefore, why I cannot admit this part as it stands is obvious. In order to render it admissible, the party who pleads it must annex a copy of the report, "which he contends does not contain such an averment, or he must show that he has done his best to obtain it, & put himself in a situation to give parol evidence of its contents. As it stands now I cannot receive it. With respect to the latter part, pleading, "that in the protest made on behalf of The Unicorn, dated Jan. 31, 1849, the aforesaid fact is also suppressed, or at least is not mentioned or adverted to," Dr. Harding argues that it would be unnecessary, if the protest was brought in ; while, if the protest is not brought in, & the party for whom Dr. Harding appears has done his best to procure a copy, then it will be properly pleadable. But the same observation applies to this part of the case as applies to the preceding : it is pleading the contents of a written instrument without exhibiting it, or showing the reason why it was not exhibited. I fully admit the argument, that you have a right to bring it in for the purpose of showing that any material fact was stated in the protest, or showing that any important fact was omitted ; but then the only mode of proving that is by the production of the instrument to which you refer. I must, therefore, reject the whole article (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE ROB ROY (1849), 13 Jur. 750.

1866. — Written agreement—Copy produced admitted to be correct.—By agreement the West London Ry. was to cross the Great Western Ry. on certain terms : the West London Co. demised their railway, with "all their rights, powers, & privileges in relation thereto" to the North-Western Ry. Co. In covenant against the last-mentioned co. on the lease for not efficiently working the line :—Held : the agreement was admissible against defts.

Semble : a copy of such agreement, admitted to be a correct copy, is not admissible without accounting for the non-production of the original.—WEST LONDON RY. CO. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1851), 17 L. T. O. S. 31.

—A witness cannot, upon cross-examination, even for the purpose of discrediting him, be asked as to the contents of a written paper which is neither produced nor its absence accounted for. Therefore, where a witness was asked, upon cross-examination, a letter in his own handwriting being shown to him, "Did you not write that letter in answer to a letter charging you with forgery?"—Held: the question was inadmissible for any purpose, inasmuch as it was an attempt to get at the contents of a written document which for anything that appeared might have been produced.—MACDONNELL v. EVANS (1852), 11 C. B. 930; 21 L. J. C. P. 141; 18 L. T. O. S. 241; 16 J. P. 88; 16 Jur. 103; 138 E. R. 742.

1869. General rule—Where original destroyed —Or in hands of other party.]—LYNCH v. CLERKE, No. 3540, post.

1870. — Only after reasonable effort to obtain primary evidence.]—In an action for maliciously, & without probable cause, charging pltf. with an assault before a magistrate, the magistrate proved that the depositions taken before him were reduced into writing, & that he delivered them at the ct. of quarter sessions to the clerk of the peace or his deputy. The clerk of the peace stated that a bill of indictment for the assault was preferred, & that the grand jury return ignoramus, & that it was usual in such case to throw away or destroy the depositions; that he had searched among his papers, & could not find them:—Held: parol evidence of their contents was admissible, & it was not necessary to call the deputy clerk of the peace to show that the original depositions were not in his possession, inasmuch as it was his duty, if he had received them, to have delivered them to his principal, & not being in his custody, it was to be presumed that they were lost or destroyed.

Secondary evidence is not to be admitted until a party has taken all reasonable pains to obtain the primary evidence. The degree of trouble to be taken for that purpose depends upon the nature of the instrument. If the instrument be of value, or of such a nature that the reasonable presumption is, that it is in existence, stricter evidence is required in order to show that it is destroyed or lost. If it be an instrument of no value, then the reasonable presumption being, that it has been destroyed or lost, slight evidence only of its destrucmake title under a document which purported to be a copy, but was not proved to have been compared with the original instrument, & also because there was no proof of any attempt to procure the original instrument:—Held: the original instrument was not admissible in evidence on the appeal.—Re BERGIN (1841), 2 Craw. & D. 356.—IR.

The vessel, after discharging her outward cargo, proceeded to Constantinople; & in consequence of orders, there given by deft.'s agent, the master took the vessel to Ibraila. 1882. Document handed to judge at previous trial—Whereabouts not traceable—Presumed returned to party.]—Where, on the second trial of a cause, a witness stated that he had, on the argument for the new trial, handed a document to one of the learned judges, & had not since seen it, or been able to find it, secondary evidence was received of its contents, without any search for it having been made at the chambers of the learned judge; the presumption being that his lordship returned it to the party who produced it.—DEACON v. FULLER (1833), 6 C. & P. 74, N. P.

1883. All efforts made to procure documents—Previous petition praying production—Refused.]—Primâ facie, it must be presumed that the books of a corp., which existed before Municipal Corporations Act, 1865 (c. 76), are in the possession of the new corp., which succeeded them under that Act; but if it be shown that the old corp., before their dissolution, deposited them with a banker, & that from his hands they passed into the master's office of the Ct. of Ch., this rebuts the presumption. In an action brought by the new corp., it appeared that deft. had presented a petition to the Vice-Chancellor to allow the production of these books on the present trial, which petition was opposed by the present pltf., & dismissed with costs:—Held: under these circumstances deft. was entitled to give parol evidence of the contents of the books.

In this case, deft. has done all that he can to obtain the books. I do not think it is for pltf. to go into the Ct. of Ch. to oppose the production of books, & then come to the assizes & oppose the reception of secondary evidence because the books are not produced. I shall receive secondary evidence (GARNEY, B.).—LUDLOW CORPN. v. CHARLTON (1840), 9 C. & P. 242, N. P.

1884. Document withheld by competent authority.]—The ct. will not allow a will in its custody to be taken out of its jurisdiction on any alleged necessity for the furtherance of justice. It must presume that other cts., when satisfied that the original document is withheld by a competent authority, will admit secondary evidence.—In the Goods of MANFREDI (1858), 1 Sw. & Tr. 135; 31 L. T. O. S. 171; 6 W. R. 792; 164 E. R. 663.

c. Fixed notice—Trespass rules.]—Upon the hearing of a charge under Pounds Act, 1874, s. 17, secondary evidence may be given of the trespass rates & charges painted or printed on the board fixed to the gate of the

d. All efforts made to procure documents.]—In order to render secondary evidence of a private document admissible it is necessary to prove that all reasonable efforts have been made to procure the original, even where the person in possession is resident outside the jurisdiction of the ct., unless there are special circumstances to show that such efforts would have been useless.—BOON v. VAUGHAN & CO., LTD. (1919), T. P. D. 77.—S. AF.

B. Admissions made as to Documents.

1885. Admission admissible against party—Without producing document.]—If in conversation the opposite party states the contents of a written paper, his declaration may be given in evidence, without producing the paper.

They may certainly ask anything that either of ptffs. said (GIFFORD, C.J.).—SEWELL & BRETT v. STUBBS & HANCOCK (1824), 1 C. & P. 73, N. P.

1886. ———.]—(1) When issue is joined on the contents of a deed, ptff. may give in evidence an admission by deft. of the contents of that deed, without producing the deed itself, or accounting for its non-production.

(2) What deft. or ptff. says, is evidence against himself, even though it relates to the contents of a deed; & the party using such evidence need not account for the absence of the deed, nor, supposing that it is in the possession of the other party, give notice to produce it. Such evidence is free from the objection which forms the foundation of the rule, which in general excludes secondary evidence of the contents of written instruments.—SLATTERIE v. POOLEY (1840), 6 M. & W. 664; 11 L. & W. 18; 10 L. J. Ex. 8; 4 Jur. 1038; 151 E. R. 579.

1887. ———.]—Examinations before two justices removing a pauper from parish B. to parish W. showed that the pauper was a bastard born, before 1834, in a third parish, C.; that his mother was at the time of his birth settled in W.; that before her confinement the overseers of C. told her that she should not stay there unless a certificate from parish W. was obtained; that after this the overseer of W. took her to affiliate the child, & gave her relief whilst she remained in C.; & that parish W. for six years supported the pauper in C. after the mother had left C. On appeal against the order of removal, the sessions stopped the case, on the ground that the examinations disclosed a prima facie birth settlement in C., & that no certificate from W. to C. was produced, nor any evidence given that such certificate was lost:—Held: the conduct of the overseers of W. was evidence of an admission by that parish that there existed such a certificate as was required to settle the pauper in W., for an admission of the effect of a written instrument by a party to a cause superseded the necessity of producing or accounting for such instrument, equally whether the admission was made in words, or was to be inferred from acts.—R. v. BASINGSTOKE (INHABITANTS) (1850), 14 Q. B. 611; 4 New Mag. Cas. 37; 4 New Sess. Cas. 80; 19 L. J. M. C. 97; 14 L. T. O. S. 372; 14 J. P. 75; 14 Jur. 246; 117 E. R. 237.

1888. ———.]—A notice to determine an agreement may be received in evidence, though the agreement has not been put in, where such notice has been acted on by both parties.—R. v. ANNETT (1858), 1 F. & F. 89.

1889. ———.]—Where ptff., being ship's husband, received at a general meeting authority from all the owners to repair & lengthen a ship, & contracted in writing with a shipwright for the execution of this work, & deft. being one of the said owners, gave notice to ptff. three days after the date of the said contract & the beginning of the said work, that he would not be liable for any expense so incurred, but the said work was nevertheless completed, & deft., on being told the amount paid by ptff. for the work, did not object to the same nor inquire about the contract:—Held: it was a sufficient admission by deft. that the amount paid was in accordance with the contract, & ptff. need not produce the contract.—CHAPPELL v. BRAY (1860), 7 H. & N. 145; 30 L. J. Ex. 24; 3 L. T. 278; 9 W. R. 17; 158 E. R. 60.

1890. What amounts to admission—Memorandum indorsed on copy of deed.]—The following memorandum signed by ptff., was indorsed upon the registered copy of a deed of settlement produced by deft.: "We do hereby certify that the within-written deed is the deed of settlement of the U. co., & that, to the best of our knowledge, the particulars therein contained are correctly set forth":—Held: the copy was primary evidence against ptff. of the contents of the deed.—BOULTER v. 1891. ——— Abstract of deed & verifying affidavit—Used by party to support title—In previous proceedings.]—(1) An abstract & affidavit used by a party upon a reference before the master, to prove title in himself, are admissible evidence against him in a subsequent action.

(2) The nisi prius record, showing that the writ of loss in stating that he had effected no additional insurance:—Held: the sworn claim of ptff. for loss made upon a policy with another co. was admissible without producing the policy.—HAZARD v. CANADA AGRICULTURAL INSURANCE CO. (1876), 39 U. C. R. 419.—CAN.

1885 iv. ———.]—The production, under a discovery order in an action by D. against J. & H., of a letter from J. to H., is an admission that J. has written that letter, and the ct. will admit secondary evidence of its contents on failure to produce the original at the trial.—DALGLEISH v. ISRAEL (1909), T. H. 229.—S. AF.

PART IV. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 3.—B.

1885 i. Admissions admissible against party—Without producing document.]—A copy of an under-lease between deft. & his under-tenant was proved in evidence upon notice given to produce the original:—Held: admissible, as against the under-tenant, he having admitted it was a copy, & no objection having been taken to it at the trial.—CONNELL v. POWER (1863), 13 C. P. 91.—CAN.

1885 ii. ———.]—Ptff. sued deft. for the price of some fruit trees, & the defence was that they had been purchased by deft., but received to sell, upon commission for ptff. Deft. had given notice to produce "the several documents hereunder specified & all other documents, letters, etc., relating to the matters in question in this cause." The schedule specified all letters, etc., & "particularly certain orders given by deft. to ptff. to forward the trees which deft. was to sell for the ptff. under the agreement between them, & which orders are dated in or about Mar. 1856":—Held: sufficient to let in secondary evidence of a letter written by deft. to ptff. in Mar., requiring the trees to be sent by a certain time.—LESLIE v. MORRISON (1868), 16 U. C. R. 130.—CAN.

1885 iii. ———.]—Defts. pleaded false swearing by ptff. in his affidavit of summons issued within six years of the accrual of the cause of action, is not conclusive evidence to prevent the operation of Stat. Limitations.

(3) Where the writ of summons has been continued by alias & pluries, in order to prevent the operation of the statute, it is necessary for pltf. to show that the indorsement of a memorandum containing the day of the date & return of the first writ, required by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 10, was made upon the last writ before the service thereof upon deft. An examined copy of the roll containing such indorsements is not evidence of the fact; neither is the writ itself.—PRITCHARD v. BAGSHAW (1851), 11 C. B. 459; 2 L. M. & P. 323; 20 L. J. C. C. Documents Abroad.

1894. General rule—Application of Evidence Act, 1851 (c. 99).—The above Act was intended to simplify the proof of foreign & colonial records, & did not abrogate the common law rule that appropriate secondary evidence may be given of documents of which primary evidence cannot be adduced.—HALKETT v. DUDLEY (EARL), [1907] 1 Ch. 590; 76 L. J. Ch. 330; 96 L. T. 539; 51 Sol. Jo. 290.

1895. Document deposited with foreign notary—Whether copy admissible.—On A. & B. entering into an agreement in France, a copy of it was deposited by A. with a notary at Paris. In an action against B. on the agreement, evidence was given, that by the usage of France, a document deposited with a notary cannot be removed:—Held: the agreement was sufficiently proved, by production of a copy of the document so deposited, there being no satisfactory evidence of the fact, that two duplicate originals had been made.—ALIVON v. FURNIVAL (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 277; 4 Tyr. 751; 3 L. J. Ex. 241; 149 E. R. 1084.

1896. — Charterparty.—In Batavia, charterparties were entered into by the instrument being written in the book of a notary, he being a public officer, according to the Dutch Law, which prevailed in Batavia, & there signed by the parties. The notary made copies, which he signed & sealed, & which the principal officer of the Govt. of Java signed, upon proof of their being executed by the notary. Then one copy was delivered to each party. In the Cts. of Java, in order to prove the charterparty, it was requisite to produce the notary's book; but this book was never allowed to be taken out of Java; & in Dutch Cts. out of Java, faith was given to the above copies, as to an original:—Held: in English Cts. such copies were not receivable, either as originals or as secondary evidence of the charterparty, at all events, not without proof that they were made at the time of entering into the original charterparty, & in the presence of the parties.—BROWN v. THORNTON (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 185; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 339; Will. Woll. & Dav. 11; 6 L. J. K. B. 82; 1 Jur. 198; 112 E. R. 70.

1897. — Power of attorney.—KILGOUR v. OWEN (1889), 88 L. T. Jo. 7, N. P.

1898. — Will of person domiciled abroad—Grant of probate.—The will of a British subject domiciled abroad at the time of his death had been proved in the French Cts. & deposited with a notary, who by the law of France was forbidden to allow it to be removed from his custody:—Held: probate might be granted of a copy of the original will properly proved, limited to such time as might elapse before the original itself should be brought in.—In the Goods of LEMME, [1892] P. 89; 61 L. J. P. 123; 66 L. T. 592.

1899. — Will of a German subject domiciled in the kingdom of Wurtemberg at his death had been proved in Wurtemberg in accordance with the requirements of local law & deposited with a notary, who by the law of the country was forbidden to allow it to leave his custody. It contained a direction that during her lifetime the widow should have the unrestricted right of administration & usufruct of testator's estate without giving security, which according to the local law was equivalent to appointing her extrix., & entitled her to collect the personal estate as though she were the owner thereof. Part of the personal estate was in England:—Held: probate might be granted to the widow of a copy of the original will properly proved, limited to such time as might elapse before the original will itself should be brought in.—In the Goods of VON LINDEN, [1896] P. 148; 65 L. 1900. Document filed in foreign court—India—Copies remitted to court in England—Inadmissible.

—An information was filed by the A.-G. under East India Co. (Money) Act, 1793 (c. 52), s. 62, against an officer of the East India Co. for receiving gifts in India. A mandamus was granted under East India Company Act, 1773 (c. 63), s. 40, for the examination of witnesses in the Supreme Ct. in Madras. One of the witnesses there gave in evidence certain original accounts, copies of which were returned to the Ct. of Q. B. by the Supreme Ct. at Madras, with the examinations:—Held: these copies were not receivable in evidence, & that the Ct. at Madras should have transmitted the original accounts to the Ct. of Q. B.—R. v. DOUGLAS (1845), 1 Car. & Kir. 670.

1901. — Necessity for application—To whom made.—To let in secondary evidence of a document filed in a foreign Ct., it should be proved that an unsuccessful application for it has been made to the person who has the legal custody of the document, viz., to the Ct. Application to an inferior officer of the Ct., though he may have the actual custody of it, is not sufficient.—CRISPIN v. DOGLIONI (1863), as reported in 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 109; 11 W. R. 500.

1903. — Delivery up refused.—Papers were taken away from deft. by the Federal authorities in America, on the ground that he, deft., was the bearer of Secessionist despatches. The papers were all returned except one agreement, which was sent to Washington & there detained:—Held: secondary evidence of this agreement was admissible.—QUILTER v. JOISS (1863), 14 C. B. N. BAILLIE (1889)*, 42 Ch. D. 282; 58 L. J. Ch. 842; 61 L. T. 634; 38 W. R. 125; 5 T. L. R. 556.

1905. Document in hand of private person—Foreign bill of exchange.—Pltf. declared on a promise by defts., to pay over to him the proceeds of a foreign bill of exchange negotiated by them on his account:—Held: he was not bound to produce the bill, but might give parol evidence of its contents.—HUNT v. ALWYN (1828), 1 Moo. & P. 433; 6 L. J. O. S. C. P. 103; previous proceedings, 3 C. & P. 284.

1906. — Refusal to deliver up—Purpose for which wanted not stated.—It is no ground for admitting secondary evidence of the contents of a private letter that the person who has possession of the letter is beyond the jurisdiction of the ct. & has refused to deliver it up when requested by a person who did not disclose the purpose for which it was wanted.—BOYLE v. WISEMAN (1855), 10 Exch. 647; 3 C. L. R. 482; 24 L. J. Ex. 160; 24 L. T. O. S. 274; 1 Jur. N. S. 115; 3 W. R. 206; 156 E. R. 598; subsequent proceedings, 11 Exch. 360.

D. Documents in Hands of Third Person.

(a) Production Refused on Ground of Privilege or Lien.

i. In General.

1907. Whether secondary evidence admissible.—In an ejectment by devisees, it appeared that deft. had mortgaged the premises to B., & had given him the will. At the trial B. was subpoenaed to produce it, & he declined doing so, as it was part of his title:—Held: B. was not bound to produce the will, & secondary evidence of the contents was not admissible.—DOE d. BOWDLER v. OWEN (1837), 8 C. & P. 110.

1908. ——A. had purchased at an auction an underlessee's interest in a house, & refused to pay a cheque which he had given for the deposit, because the ground rent payable to the superior landlord was greater than it was stated to be at the sale:—Held: the superior landlord's solr. was not compellable to produce the counterpart of the original lease; & a person who had advanced money on that lease, & held it as equitable mtgee., could also not be compelled to produce the lease itself; but, if both these, on being called as witnesses, refused to produce the lease & counterpart, secondary evidence might be given of the contents of the lease, by calling any person who had seen it, & who neither claimed under it as one of his own title deeds, nor was privileged as an attorney or solr.—MILLS v. ODDY (1834), 6 C. & P. 728, N. P.; subsequent proceedings (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 103.

Annotation.—Dbtd. Doe d. Bowdler v. Owen (1837), 8 C. & P. 110. In my opinion Mills v. Oddy is not law; if the document is in existence in the hands of a third person, you cannot give secondary evidence of its contents (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).

1909. — Copy of document—After due notice to produce original.—LLOYD v. MOSTYN, No. 2258, post.

1910. — — Not vouched to be copy—By party refusing to produce original.—An attorney is not bound to produce, or to answer any questions concerning the nature or contents of, a deed or other document intrusted to him professionally by his client; & the judge has no right to look at the instrument, to see if the objection to produce it or disclose its contents be well founded or not. A paper which the attorney admits to have been delivered out of his office as a copy of the deed, but which he states he is unable of his own knowledge to vouch to be a copy, is not admissible as secondary evidence, upon the attorney's refusal to produce the original.—VOLANT v. SOYER (1853), 13 C. B. 231; 22 L. J. C. P. 83; 20 L. T. O. S. 208; 138 E. R. 1187.

1911. — ——Deft., in an action to try a right of fishery, after judgment had been given for pltf., accidentally discovered certain documents prepared for the defence of a previous action dealing with the same subject-matter which action was defended at the cost of a predecessor in title of pltf. Pltf. obtained possession of the documents after copies of them had been taken by deft. Deft. having appealed:—Held: deft. was not precluded on the ground of privilege from giving secondary evidence of their contents.—CALCRAFT v. GUEST, [1898] 1 Q. B. 759; 67 L. J. Q. B. 505; 78 L. 1912. — — Although obtained fraudulently.—It is no answer to an action brought for an injunction to restrain publication of copies of privileged documents to say that the copies, although improperly obtained, will be wanted in pending proceedings to prove the contents of the original documents, which, owing to the privilege, cannot be produced. P. was bkpt. & his discharge was opposed by, amongst others, pltf. P. obtained by a trick letters which had been written by pltf. to his solr. & were therefore privileged. P. had these letters copied & proposed to use them in the bkpcy. proceedings as secondary evidence of the contents of the letters which, owing to privilege, he could not produce. Pltf. brought an action for an injunction to restrain P. from disclosing the letters or the copies, & an order was made

SUB-SECT. 4.—NATURE OF ADMISSIBLE SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

A. In General.

1938. General rule.—(1) If you cannot prove a deed by producing it you may produce the counterpart; if you can't produce the counterpart you may produce a copy even if you cannot prove it to be a true copy: if a copy cannot be produced you may go into parol evidence of the deed (LORD MANSFIELD, C.J.)

(2) If all the subscribing witnesses are dead, comparison of hands is all the evidence which can be given (LORD MANSFIELD, C.J.).—LUDLAM d. HUNT (1774), Lofft, 362; 98 E. R. 695.

1939. Parol evidence — Rector's books.—Rector's books are not to be proved vivâ voce, & leave to put off the cause in order to prove them by interrogatories will be refused.—LAKE v. SKINNER (1819), 1 Jac. & W. 9; 37 E. R. 278.

Annotation:—Consd. Cox v. Allingham (1821), Jac. 337.

1940. — Declaration as to contents—Made by party in hearing of witness.—A party to the action, being called as a witness on his own behalf, may be asked in cross-examination the contents of a letter which he has written, without producing the letter.

If a question arises as to the contents of a written instrument, & you can get a witness to come & swear that he heard pltf. say that it contained such & such expressions, that is good evidence of the contents of the document without producing it; & if pltf. is himself in the box, you may ask him as to the contents of the document, & his answer will be as good evidence as any previous statement. He may, perhaps, refer to the deed for better information, & perhaps, the judge might say that the document ought to be produced (POLLOCK, C.B.).—FARROW v. BLOMFIELD (1859), 1 F. & F. 653, N. P.

1945. — Demand—In action of trover.—In trover a written demand of the goods signed by pltf., & attested by a subscribing witness, was served on deft. :—Held : at the trial, a duplicate original of this could not be given in evidence as a demand by pltf., without calling the subscribing witness, but the judge would allow it to be read as a paper delivered to deft., though not as sent by pltf., in order to allow pltf., if he could, to show anything that deft. had said or done in consequence of it.—BRIANT v. DORMER (1848), 2 Car. & Kir. 692, N. P.

1943. Counterpart—Of settlement.—Counterpart of a settlement was admitted sufficient evidence of the settlement, & a conveyance decreed pursuant to it.—EYTON v. EYTON (1700), Prec. Ch. 116; 2 Vern. 380; 24 E. R. 56; subsequent proceedings (1706), 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 149, H. L.

SUB-SECT. 5.—LOST OR DESTROYED DOCUMENTS

A. In General.

1953. Rules at law & in equity the same—Except where deed wilfully destroyed.—[The intent of the first testator plainly was to include this copyhold; but to make it pass at law it ought to have been surrendered. The presumption, that it was, from the ct. rolls being burnt, is in no matter of law. Nor will this ct. go upon presumption of evidence, any more than a ct. of law. Although, if deeds or writings are destroyed by a party, who would take benefit thereof, a ct. of equity in odium spoliatoris will go farther than a ct. of law. But if it be a casual destruction, the evidence is the same here as at law (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—COOKES v. HELLIER (1749), 1 Ves. Sen. 231; 27 E. R. 1003.

Annotation :—Mentd. Dillon v. Parker (1818), 1 Swan. 359.

1954. — ——(1) On loss of a deed same rule of evidence here as at law.

(2) Decree wherein present pltf's. & defts. were parties, read as evidence, though not conclusive. So of depositions in that cause where the bill & decree was for performance of trusts, settling the rights of all.

(3) The loss only can be made out by circumstances; destruction of deed by affidavit.

Though destruction of a deed may be proved by affidavit, the loss of one cannot commonly be so, but only can be made out by circumstances; as that inquiry has been made, & search in the proper place & hands, & in vain (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—ASKEW v. POULTERERS CO. (1750), 2 Ves. Sen. 89; 28 E. R. 59.

1955. — ——[The same rule at law & in equity as to the loss of a deed.—CLAVERING v. CLAVERING (1751), 2 Ves. Sen. 232; 28 E. R. 150.

1956. Lost at time of pleading—Found before trial—Admissible.—[A deed alleged in a plea to be lost by time & accident may be given in evidence, if having been lost at the time of pleading it is found before trial.—HAWLEY v. PEACOCK (1811), 2 Camp. 557, N. P.

1957. Admissibility of secondary evidence—Lost endowment.—[A vicar, unable to produce an endowment, has to support his claim by secondary evidence, & if that secondary evidence furnishes a ground for inferring that the missing endowment contained a gift to the vicar, of all small tithes, there are authorities for decreeing to him not only the tithes which have actually been received by him, but all other tithes of that class, either neglected or of modern introduction. The cases in which the inference has been made, have been, generally, cases in which the vicar has received the whole small tithes actually rendered, & in which it did not appear that any other person which deed poll or indorsement by way of assignment, is witnessed, etc., was offered as evidence of the — ment :—Held : sufficient.—Re MARR (1888), 16 O. R. 391.—CAN.

had received any tithes of that class. Such a usage has been supposed to warrant the presumption that the endowment bestowed upon the vicar all small tithes, in general words.—MASTERS v. FLETCHER (1830), 1 You. 25; 159 E. R. 891.

Annotations.—Folld. Clee v. Hall, Godson v. Hall, Wheeler v. Hall (1840), 7 Cl. & Fin. 744. Refd. Salkeld v. Johnstone (1842), 11 L. J. Ch. 201.

1958. ———.]—To a vicar's bill for an account of all small tithes, debts. answered that the right to all tithes, as well small as great, became vested in the rector, & in the owners of the lands by grants & conveyances, & that they & their tenants held the lands, with the tithes, or free from all tithes whatsoever; but that some occupiers paid annually to the vicar, in respect of their houses, certain small sums in the name of "privy tithes" which debts. alleged were personal tithes, & not compositions for small tithes. The vicar, unable to produce an endowment, gave secondary evidence showing that the vicarage was endowed generally with small tithes. There was no evidence that any small tithes were ever paid to or claimed by the rector, or the persons who become entitled to the rectory:—Held: (1) debts., after failing to show title to the small tithes in themselves or the owners of the lands, could not be heard to say that the small payments in the name of privy tithes were compositions.—CLEE v. HALL, GODSON v. HALL (1840), 7 Cl. & Fin. 744; West, 148; 7 E. R. 1252, H. L.; affy. S. C. sub nom. HALL v. GODSON (1830), 2 Y. & C. Ex. 153.

1959. ——— Bill of exchange.]—On opening the commission, the debt of A., petitioning creditor, was established on two bills of exchange, one of which was dishonoured & the other undue; & the adjudication took place. The running bill was lost immediately afterwards. The commission being disputed at law by a party, whom the assignees sued in trover:—Held: it was sufficient to prove the existence of petitioning creditor's debt, giving secondary evidence of the bill, at the date of the commission.—*POOLEY v. ary evidence of its contents might be given.—GILES v. SMITH (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 462; 5 Tyr. 15; 4 L. J. Ex. 17; 149 E. R. 1161.

1962. ——— Written authority to pay money.]—Pltf. sought to recover £50 from deft. on the account stated, & gave evidence of an admitted account between them, in which that sum appeared as an item against deft., & of payment of interest in respect of it, & promises to pay the principal. Deft. proved that the debt arose out of a written undertaking on his part, which he had obtained from pltf. & destroyed, "to remit pltf. £50, which sum he, deft., held of H., & by him authorised to pay" pltf.; & called H., who swore that he never authorised deft. to pay the money for him, & that he had since settled all his accounts with pltf.:—Held: deft. was not precluded from giving his evidence, & if believed, it entitled him to a nonsuit.—*PIERCE v. 1963. ——— Lost office copy of decree in chancery.]

(1) In support of an alleged custom of a manor, that the lord was only entitled to take one heriot from each tenant, whatever number of tenements he might hold:—Held: an old decree of the Ct. of Ch., in a suit between copyholders & the lord, & establishing the custom, produced by a witness who succeeded his brother as lord of the manor, & who stated that he found it amongst his brother's papers, was admissible in evidence against a subsequent lord of the manor, as a copy of the original, for which an ineffectual search had been made.

(2) Secondary evidence is admissible of an office copy of the decree delivered by a prior lord to a tenant, when asked by him for evidence to prove the customs of the manor, when a proper but ineffectual search for it has been made.—*PRICE v. There are several rules by which evidence even parol may be given of the contents of a deed. 1980. —.]—In order to give evidence of an instrument as lost, you must prove such an instrument did once exist; you must prove contents; & you must prove destruction, or loss. . . . But it is not necessary to prove actual present existence by the deed itself; which, if you could do, you would generally prove contents but you must give reasonable ground to the ct. to believe its once existence. Neither need you prove authentically the contents; for that would imply power of production (per CUR.).—TYSEN v. CLARKE (1774), Lofft, 496; 3 Wils. 541; 98 E. R. 766.

In the letter A. enclosed a bank power which she stated was to enable her to receive the dividends for her life, which power she requested the niece to execute & return to her, & also to destroy the letter; both of which the niece accordingly did. It afterwards turned out that the bank power authorised A. to sell out the stock as well as receive the dividends. It appeared that A. had always been very kind to the niece, & by her will made before the transfer had given her an annuity of £30. The contents of the letter were proved by the niece & by a third person, to whom she had shown it:—Held: the destruction of the letter being satisfactorily accounted for, the ct. would receive secondary evidence of its contents, & the intention to benefit the niece was sufficiently clearly shown to rebut the general presumption that the stock still belonged to A., although the case could not be regarded as one of an adopted child.—*BEECHER v. 1984. Proof of actual fact of loss.—Not necessary.]—Where a deed has been lost, it is not necessary to prove the actual fact of the loss. A policy had been mortgaged to secure a debt, & the deed was missing after the death of the mtgee., but had been in existence a short time before:—Held: the ct. refused to assume that the mtgee. had cancelled the deed when in extremis, & allowed secondary evidence of its existence.—*ABINGTON v. 1997. — — — —.]—Upon a question whether a pauper was settled in A. by the apprenticeship of her deceased husband, it was proved that indentures of apprenticeship which were not produced, had been executed by the husband, his father, & master. In order to prove the loss of the indentures so as to let in parol evidence of the contents, the pauper was called to prove a conversation with her husband shortly before his death respecting the indentures:—Held: such evidence was not admissible, it not having been proved that the indentures had ever been in the husband's possession, nor that inquiries had been made from the other parties to the indentures.—*R. v. PART IV. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 5.—D. (a).

2000 i. Must be diligent.]—Before secondary evidence can be let in proof must be adduced that such deed once the objection that the counterpart [of a deed] ought not to have been received in evidence, the degree of diligence to be used in searching for a deed must depend on the importance of the deed & the particular circumstances of each case (BEST, C.J.).—GULLY v. 2013. Must be ineffectual.—Where ineffectual search has been made for a justice's warrant, parol evidence may be given of its contents.—WEATHERELL v. WATSON (1822), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 2.

2019. Need not be recent—Or made ad hoc.—

In order to let in secondary evidence of a document, it is not necessary that the search for that document should have been recent, or made for the purpose of the cause.—FITZ v. RABBITS (1837), 2 Mood. & R. 60, N. P.

2020. Must be reasonable—Though not wholly exhaustive.—(1) Where secondary evidence is admitted to prove the contents of a lost instrument, the ct. will presume that the instrument was stamped, unless there be evidence showing that it was not stamped. The onus of proving this is upon the party raising the objection.

(2) To render secondary evidence admissible in proof of the contents of a lost document, it is sufficient to prove that every reasonable search for the document has been made, although every possible search may not appear to have been made.—HART v. —BECKFORD v. JACKSON (1795), 1 Esp. 337.

PART IV. SECT. 5. SUB-SECT. 5.— D. (b).

2021 i. Where document most likely to be found.—Where a person is in the habit of preserving & filing away letters of importance, secondary evidence of the contents of a letter of that description is not admissible without search among his letters, there being no proof of its loss.—LITTLE v. JOHN-SON (1842), 1 Kerr, 496.—CAN.

2021 ii. —.—.—Certain letters put in at the first trial in the county ct. were filed in the ct. of common pleas on appeal from the decision, & at the second trial a witness proved that he had applied to the clerk of the ct., who searched in his office, & told the witness that he had also inquired of the judge, but that the papers could not be found.—Held: sufficient to let in secondary evidence.—SUTOR v. McLEAN (1859), 18 U. C. R. 490.—CAN.

2021 iii. —.—.—P. was absent from the country, & pltf. proved a search with several of his relatives for a deed from P. to him, but it was not shown that P. had lived or left the charge of his papers with any of them. Secondary evidence being then admitted, subject to objection, pltf. proved the existence of this deed, & the execution by P. of a memorial of it, which the deputy registrar produced.—Held: the search was not sufficient to let in secondary evidence.—COVERT v. ROBINSON (1865), 24 U. C. R. 282.—CAN.

2021 iv. —.—.—Pltf. in ejectment claimed under a mtge. from C. to O., executed in 1856. C. being called proved his execution of such a mtge., & the memorial of it signed by him was produced from the registry office. He had last seen the mtge. with O., the mtgee., in 1857. O. in 1859 became insolvent, & made an assignment of all his estate to F. He absconded to the United States shortly after, & was followed by F. It was not shown that F. had ever had the mtge., though the land was assigned to him; & it appeared that in a suit against him & O., in chancery, on behalf of the creditors, commenced many years after the assignment, which resulted in the appointment of pltf. as receiver, F. produced the papers in the suit under an order of the ct., & this mtge. was not among them. A search was proved to have been made in the master's office, with pltf.'s solr. in that suit, & among the receiver's papers, but not with O., who was still living in Michigan, nor with his solr. in the suit.—Held: the proof of search was sufficient to let in the secondary evidence; for under the circumstances of the case there was no presumption that O. retained the mtge. or took it to the United States with him.—GORDON v. McPAIL (1872), 32 U. C. R. 480.—CAN.

2021 v. —.—.—Where pltf., the widow of H., suing on a bond for maintenance made to her late husband & herself, testified that she had the bond in possession after her husband's death, that she gave it to her own son to be recorded, & had not seen it since: & the son testified that he had sent it by the magistrate to get it recorded & had not since seen it, & the document was traced to the office of the registrar of deeds, who testified that some one supposed to be entitled to it had got it out of his possession, & that he had searched in his office in vain for it. A paper sworn by the registrar to be an accurate copy of the registry was admitted as secondary evidence.—Held: the evidence was properly received.—HAZELL v. DYAS (1876), 2 It. & C. 36.—CAN.

2021 vi. —.—.—It appeared that search for the will was made in the office in which it would have been had it been admitted to probate; in the different registry offices of the counties in which the several parcels of land, of which testator died seised, were situate; among the papers of the owners of the several parcels; among the papers of the only exor. of three named in the will who could be found; among the papers of the draftsman of the will, & among those of several of the devisees.—Held: sufficient to let in secondary evidence of the will.—BROWN v. MORROW (1878), 43 U. C. R. 436.—CAN.

2021 vii. —.—.—On a reference, H. sought to use a certain bill of costs as a voucher of monies properly expended by him in legal proceedings, & it was shown that the said bill had been properly brought into the master's office on a former reference & properly left there, & that search had been made for it, but without success, although there was no evidence that it had been removed, or that it had been noticed or seen elsewhere afterwards, nor on any occasion when it would probably have been removed from the office.—Held: the master should have admitted secondary evidence of its contents.—BEARTY v. HALDAN

(1885), 10 O. R. 278.—CAN.

2021 viii. —.—.—The testimony of a sheriff, who had executed under a writ of execution, that he had searched for it in his office, but could not find it; that he believed that it was not in his office or in his possession; that he thought that he had returned it to the attorney who had issued it; also, the testimony of the clerk of the ct., out of which the execution had issued, that he had made search for it, but could not find it, & his belief was that it had never been filed in his office.—Held: a sufficient foundation upon which to admit secondary evidence of the contents of the execution.—ROSS v. ADAMS (1896), 31 N. B. R. 158.—CAN.

2021 ix. —.—.—A release to uses, for the purpose of barring the entail, was alleged to be lost. At the trial, it was proved that search was made for it among the papers of the releasee to uses, in the possession of his solr. & exor., & also among the papers of the releasor, in the possession of his extrix.—Held: the search was sufficient to establish the presumption that the deed was lost, & a memorial of the deed was properly received as secondary evidence.—MORRIS v. GRAY (1860), 12 L. C. L. R. 129; 12 Ir. Jur. 304.—IR.

2021 x. —.—.—In order to show that a sufficient search has been made for a lost deed to admit of secondary proof of its contents, evidence is admissible of inquiries made of persons who would be likely to have the document in their possession, & of the replies given by them to such inquiries, without affidavits or depositions of those persons themselves as to the extent & result of the searches made by them.—SMITH v. SMITH (1876), 10 L. It. Eq. 273.—IR.

2021 xi. —.—.—At the trial a certified copy of a Crown grant to the original grantee of the land, under the seal of the district land registrar, was tendered as evidence of the grant. Evidence was given that inquiries for the Crown grant had been unsuccessfully made of old-established solrs. firms in A. It appeared that the widow of the grantee had gone to N., where she had died, & that no inquiries had been made of her administrators.—Held: as these were the persons most likely to possess the missing deed, & they had not been communicated with, the copy tendered could not be received in evidence.—HUGHES v. HOAKES (1898), 17 N. Z. L. R. 113.—N.Z.

WITHERLY (INHABITANTS) (1820), 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 724; 2 Man. & Ry. M. C. 438; 8 L. J. O. S. M. C. 43.

2024. —.—.]—According to the course of business.—A cheque drawn on account of a parish was delivered to deft., the paying clerk. It was shown that the bankers on that day paid a sum of that amount, & that it was their custom to return the cancelled cheques to the paying clerk, who ought to have deposited them in a proper place at the workhouse. Application had been made to his successor at that place, who handed some bundles to a witness, who searched them without success. The paying clerk was not called:—Held: sufficient search to let in secondary evidence of the cheque.—M'GAHEY v. ALSTON (1836), 2 M. & W. 206; 2 Gale, 238; 6 L. J. Ex. 29; 150 E. R. 731.

2025. —.—.]—(1) A search made by a clerk of pltf. in every place where it is probable, according to the course of business, that the paper might be found, is sufficient, to let in secondary evidence of its contents, without applying to the clerk who had originally received the paper, or to the clerk who had the care of the papers at the time when the document in question was received, & without requiring any search to be made by either of them.

(2) In order to render a letter admissible in evidence against the writer, it is not absolutely necessary to prove his handwriting; it is sufficient, if it appear from other evidence, that he recognised & acted upon the letter.—SHEPPARD v. RADFORD (1839), 3 J. P. 770.

2026. —.—.]—Power of attorney executing surrender—Search amongst court rolls.—(1) A witness who resides in Dublin, is out of the jurisdiction of the cts. of this country so as to let in proof of his handwriting, the same as if he were dead.

(2) A ct. roll stating that a surrender was by power of attorney, would be secondary evidence of the power of attorney if the power of attorney cannot be found after a sufficient search.

(3) The steward of a manor proved that where a surrender was by power of attorney, the practice was to keep the power of attorney with the ct. rolls. The power in question, which was for a surrender in 1814, could not be found either with the ct. rolls or anywhere in the office in which the ct. rolls had been kept ever since 1814, both by the present steward & his predecessor, who was steward in 1814:—Held: sufficient to let in secondary evidence.—DOE d. of seizure was not produced, nor any notice given to produce it. It was proved that the sheriff's officer who made the seizure had put his son into possession, & given the warrant to him; the son stated that he believed he returned it either to his father or to the sheriff's office. The officer said that it was his custom to deliver the warrants to the auctioneer, that they might be transmitted with the auction sheet to the excise office, through the supervisor of excise for the district; that he had searched his own papers for it, & had inquired for it at the sheriff's office. A search was also proved among the auctioneer's papers, & at the excise office; but the supervisor was not called, nor any search of his papers proved:—Held: reasonable proof was given of the loss of the warrant, so as to let in secondary evidence of its contents, in order to connect the sheriff with the officer.—MINSHALL v. The high constable of the borough, to whom the warrant was directed, stated that he had received & levied under it, but could not tell what had become of it, & that his practice was to return some warrants to the town clerk, & to retain others:—Held: secondary evidence of the warrant was admissible.—FERNLEY v. PIDDLEHINTON (INHABITANTS) (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 460; 3 Bott, 6th ed. 261; 1 L. J. M. C. 43; 110 E. R. 166.

2030. —.—.]—(1) Where an assignment of turnpike tolls had been executed by way of mtge. to K., in an action by K.'s personal representative, after his death, against the trustees for arrears of interest:—Held: a search for the security in the office of K.'s solr., where his papers had been deposited, except some deposited, in a suit against K.'s representative, in the office of one of the masters in chancery, & also in the latter office without finding the security among any of such papers, was sufficient evidence of its loss to let in secondary evidence, & entries in a book of the trustees indorsed "Mtge. Book," containing an abstract of the names of the creditors, the amounts of their securities, & the interest due upon them, was good secondary evidence of such security.

(2) Printed copies of the annual accounts of the trust, made up from original statements, signed by the chairman of the trustees, & returned pursuant to 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 78, were produced from the office of the clerk of the peace, & tendered in evidence. They were not signed by the chairman:—Held: they were not admissible either as primary or secondary evidence.—PARDOE v. PRICE (1844), 13 M. & W. 267; 14 L. J. Ex. 212; 153 E. R. 110.

2032. — Newspaper—Deposited in public reading-room.—In an action for a libel published in a newspaper evidence that copies of the newspaper containing the libel have been gratuitously circulated in pltf.'s neighbourhood, though they be not shown to have been sent by deft., the publisher, is admissible to show the extent of the circulation of the paper, & the consequent injury to pltf. It was sought to prove that one of such newspapers had been sent to a public reading-room in pltf.'s parish, to which there were eighty subscribers. The president of the reading-room stated, that a newspaper, called the "Nonconformist," which was the name of that published by deft., was gratuitously sent to the room; that, from the glance he had of it, he judged it contained the libel in question; that it remained there a fortnight, when it was taken away, as he supposed, & not returned; that he had searched the room for it & believed it was lost:—Held: this was sufficient evidence to show that the newspaper sent to the reading-room was one of the copies of deft.'s newspaper containing the libel, & this was sufficient proof of its loss to make secondary evidence of its contents admissible.—GATHERCOLE v. MIALL (1846), 15 M. & W. 319; 15 L. J. Ex. 179; 7 L. T. O. S. 89; 10 J. P. 582; 10 Jur. 337; 153 E. R. 872.

2033. — Settlement—Inquiry of all the trustees.—A., pending a treaty of marriage between her & B., without B.'s knowledge, made a settlement of certain leaseholds, to herself for life, remainder to C., her son by a former marriage, remainder over to D. The deed, the execution of which did not appear to have been attested, was deposited by A. & C. shortly after its execution, with E., an attorney, with instructions to give it up only to those two together. After the death of A.'s husband, A. & C. went together to E., & got back the deed. A. died. In an ejectment brought by one claiming under C. against one claiming under a mtge. from A., it was proposed to give secondary evidence of the contents of this deed, upon proof that an unsuccessful search for it had been made at the house of A., & upon calling one of the two trustees named in it, who stated that he had never seen or heard of the deed:—Held: notwithstanding the circumstances under which it was executed, the deed might still be a valid deed, but sufficient search had not been made to let in secondary evidence of its contents, inasmuch as no inquiry had been made as to the other trustee.—DOE d. RICHARDS v. LEWIS, RICHARDS v. LEWIS (1851), 11 C. B. 1035; 20 L. J. C. P. 177; 17 L. T. O. S. 126; 138 E. R. 786; sub nom. RICHARDS v. LEWIS, DOE d. RICHARDS v. LEWIS, 15 Jur. 512.

2034. — Tenancy agreement—Inquiry of landlord.—On the trial of an appeal, quarter sessions decided that there was not sufficient proof of search for a written agreement by P., to let a tenement, to make secondary evidence of its contents admissible, & rejected the evidence, subject to a case, by which it appeared that the document was traced to the custody of P., & that a witness deposed that he asked P. if there was such an agreement, & P. answered, "I cannot say for a certainty;" & that P. then sent his clerk witness to P.'s office to search, which they did; & the document was not found. P. was not called as a witness:—Held: it was not necessary to call P. if there was proof of the search having been made in the proper place of deposit.—R. v. SAFFRON HILL (INHABITANTS) (1852), 1 E. & B. 93; 22 L. J. M. C. 22; 20 L. T. O. S. 92; 16 Jur. 1139; 118 E. R. 371.

2035. — — — — ——To found the reception of secondary evidence of the contents of an agreement in writing respecting a house in question between G. & his landlord, P., by whose clerk it had been drawn up & with whom it had remained, a witness was called, who said, "I went last week to P. & asked him whether there was any agreement between himself & G. respecting the house in question. He said, 'I cannot say for a certainty, I will search.' He then told the clerk to search, & the clerk & I searched together amongst the papers of the office, & also amongst the day-books & ledgers, & we could find no agreement." Quarter sessions held this insufficient to let in secondary evidence of the contents of the agreement:—Held: it did not appear that the search had been made in the right place, & the decision of the sessions ought not to be overruled.—R. v. ST. MARY, ISLINGTON, OVERSEERS (1852), 16 J. P. 760; 1 W. R. 34.

2036. — Letters—Receivable by assignees of bankrupt.—In an action by the assignees of a bkpt., who had absconded:—Held: secondary evidence would be received on behalf of deft., of letters sent to bkpt., a notice to produce having been served on pltf.s, & an unsuccessful search having been made thereupon.

The assignees are the persons with whom these letters, if in existence, ought to be. But it has been proved that they are not with them. The secondary evidence is therefore admissible (CROWDER, J.).—MILLER v. FRICKER (1858), 1 E. & P. 91.

2038. — Indenture of apprenticeship—Poor law settlement—Parish chest.—The mother of a pauper stated, that about twenty-four years ago she received money from the parish officers of S. to put her son out apprentice, & that she accordingly put him out; that the indenture was signed by her, the pauper, the master, & by a witness; that she gave it to the wife of a market-gardener who attended the market of S., to take to the overseers of the parish of S.; that the market-gardener & his wife were both dead, the latter having survived her husband; & that she did not know whether the market-gardener's wife had left any will, but had heard that she had. Evidence was then given that search had been made in the parish chest of S. for the indenture, & that it could not be found:—Held: as it was the duty of the overseers, if the indenture had come into their possession, to deposit it in the parish chest the presumption was, that it was lost or destroyed, & therefore, secondary evidence of the execution

2039. ——— Papers of apprentice.]—

(1) This ct. has jurisdiction to review the decision of a ct. of quarter sessions as to whether sufficient search has been made for a document to render secondary evidence of it receivable.

(2) On a question of derivative settlement, it was alleged that the grandfather of the pauper had been bound as parish apprentice sixty-nine years before. In order to prove the indenture of apprenticeship executed by the parish officers, it was shown that ineffectual search for it had been made among the papers of the pauper:—Held: a counterpart was properly admitted as secondary evidence of its contents to prove a settlement by apprenticeship, without showing that the papers of the master had also been examined, as the presumption would be, after so long a period, that, as the apprentice alone was interested in the preservation of the deed, the instrument, if not found with him, was lost.—R. v. HINCKLEY OVERSEERS (1863), 3 B. & S. 885; 2 New Rep. 67; 32 L. J. M. C. 158; 8 L. T. 270; 27 J. P. 823; 9 Jur. N. S. 1054; 11 W. R. 663; 122 E. R. 331.

2041. Person proved to have had custody not called—Although living.]—To establish a settlement by apprenticeship it was proved that the indenture was of two parts, that one had been destroyed, that the other had come to the hands of A., who when asked for it said she could not find it:—Held: as A. had not been subpoenaed, the evidence was insufficient.—*R. v. 2044. ——— Third parties not called.]—

Appls. against an order of removal set up a settlement of the pauper by apprenticeship under an indenture, which had been lost. To prove proper search, they proposed to ask certain witnesses what inquiries they had made of, & what answers they had received from parties who were likely to have the document in their possession; but the parties themselves were not called. The sessions refused to allow the questions to be put:—Held: the evidence was admissible, upon the preliminary inquiry whether proper search had been made, though it might not be admissible as evidence in the main issue before the ct.—R. v. BRAINTREE (INHABITANTS) (1858), 1 E. & E. 51; 28 L. J. M. C. 1; 32 L. T. O. S. 90; 4 Jur. N. S. 1238; 7 W. R. 48; 120 E. R. 827.

E. What Secondary Evidence Admissible.

(a) In General.

2041 i. Person proved to have had custody not called—Although living.]—Where a deed has been traced into the actual possession of a party, it is necessary to call him to account for it before secondary evidence can be let in; but where doubt exists as to whether it was actually left with a party who has no interest in it:—Held: sufficient to prove a search amongst the papers of the person who it was presumed had last had possession of it.—BARTO v. MORRIS (1859), Coch. 90.—CAN.

2041 ii. ———.]—To prove a deed from the sheriff, the memorial was put in it, having been down by R., a partner of W. D., the said W. D. having formerly been partner of J. D., then attorney for the plffs., that the deed had come into the office of J. D., J. D. not being called, & could not be found there on diligent search by B. It being objected that plff.'s attorney, to whose hands the sheriff's deed was traced, should have been called:—Held: diligent search by B., who was partner with W. D., the former partner of J. D., with whom the deed had been left, the said B. having succeeded J. D. in the business, & having access to all his papers, & having seen the deed in his office lately, was sufficient search to admit of secondary evidence

e. ——— Affidavit of search at Registrar-General's office.]—On an application for administration to the estate of a deceased person, it is not necessary that the affidavit of search at the Registrar-General's office for a will deposited should state that a "careful search has been made."—Re HEALEY'S ESTATE (1887), 13 V. L. R. 156.—AUS.

f. ———.]—In the course of a conjunct proof in a divorce, the loss of a letter was sought to be proved by pursuer, who addressed two witnesses, one of whom had received the letter, & the other had delivered it:—Held: although pursuer might have directed more searching inquiry for it, yet it being sufficiently proved that neither the pursuer nor her friends were in possession of it, secondary evidence of its contents was admissible.—RITCHIE v. RITCHIE (1857), 19 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 505.—SCOT.

2045 i. Decision as to sufficiency—Finality of justices' decision.]—After secondary evidence of a document has been received, it is too late to object to the sufficiency of the search.—DOE d. MACLENN v. TURNBULL (1848), 5 U. C. R. 129.—CAN.

2045 ii. ———.]—Whether or not sufficient proof of search for, or loss of, an original document, to lay a ground for the admission of secondary evidence, has been given, is a point proper to be decided by the judge of first instance, & is treated as depending very much on his discretion. His conclusion should not be overruled except in a clear case of miscarriage.—SRIMATI RANI HURRIPIRIA DEBI v. RUKMINI DEBI (1892), L. R. 19 Ind. App. 79; 1 L. R. 19 Cal. 438.—IND.

g. Evidence of plaintiff & wife—Inadmissible witnesses.]—Evidence by plff. & wife of a search for & the loss of a bill of sale under which the judge ruled he must prove property:—Held: insufficient to let in secondary evidence of the contents of such bill of sale.—BRATT v. LEE (1858), 7 C. P. 280.—CAN.

h. Entries—Sheriff's books & fee book of court—Lost records.]—Where the papers belonging to the district ct. & to the sheriff had been burned, & the records themselves thus destroyed:—Held: in ejectment, deft., claiming under a sheriff's deed, might prove the judgment & executions by secondary evidence contained in the sheriff's books & in a fee book of the ct., & by the attorney who obtained the judgment, whose papers had also been a thing the law abhors to admit the memory of man for evidence (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).

2054. —In diary—By deceased clerk—Relating to original & draft copies.—In 1861, W., a solr., & the acting trustee of a settlement, invested part of the trust funds in a mtge. of some property of C., a client of his, by taking a transfer of a legal first mtge. of the property to himself & his co-trustee. In 1865, C., being pressed by his bankers to give security for his overdrawn account, asked W. to give him the title deeds of the property to deposit with his bankers, promising to substitute for them some other security, which he never did. W. accordingly, without the knowledge of his co-trustee & cestuis que trust, gave C. all the title deeds, who thereupon deposited them with his bankers, except the mtges., which he suppressed. On a deposit of title deeds it was the custom of the bank to require a certificate of title from some solr., & on this occasion they accepted the certificate of W., who certified that C. had a good title to the property. W. & C., having both died insolvent, a bill was filed by the co-trustee & cestuis que trust against the bank, praying for a foreclosure decree & delivery of the deeds. Neither of the mtges. nor any copies of them were forthcoming.—Held: drafts produced from the proper custody & bearing indorsement in the handwriting of W., showing that the deeds were engrossed from them, & were duly executed & stamped, & the diary of a deceased clerk containing entries in his handwriting made in the regular course of his business & showing that he had drawn the drafts, & had attended the execution & stamping of the deeds, were good secondary evidence of the mtges.—WALDY v. GRAY (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 238; 44 L. J. Ch. 394; 32 L. T. 531; 23 W. R. 676.

burned, & by plff.; & he was not bound to obtain exemplifications.—HEANY v. PARKER (1868), 27 U. C. R. 509.—CAN.

register kept by plff.'s gomastus of the names of the executors of the bonds, the matter in respect of which the bonds had been given, the amounts due thereunder, & the names of the attesting witnesses. From this register the duplicate plaints had been prepared:—Held: though the register was not secondary evidence of the contents of the bonds, yet it was a document for the purpose of refreshing his memory, under Evidence Act, s. 159.—*TARUCK NATH MULLICK v.
